VOTES FOR WOMEN

Canadian Press Despatch

Regina, Dec. 17.—J. E. Bradshaw, speaking in the Legislature yesterday in support of his resolution favoring votes for the women of Saskatchewan, expressed the belief that the enfranchisement of women would go far towards correcting scandals. He also made a plea against the militant methods of the suffragettes in England. The debate was adjourned.

Mr Leitch, the only one directly opposing the resolution, quoted the Apostle Paul as saying that a woman's place was in her home, in support of his stand

AUTO SKIDDED: MAN WAS KILLED

His Machine Plunged Down an Embankment

Canadian Press Despatch.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 17.—Frederick J. Horsewell was killed early to-day near San Miguel by his auto skidding and plunging down a one hundred and twenty-five foot embankment. His daughter aged three years, whom he held in his arms, escaped with a few slight scratches.

Mines of No Promise.

New York, Dec. 17.—Although counsel for the defence fought hard to exclude his testimony, A. A. Hasselbring, a mining expert, testified for the Government yesterday at the trial of Julian Hawthorne and others, charged with fraudulently using the mails in promoting mining stocks, that he had examined some the defendant's iron ore properties in Ontario and had "found nothing promising."

Bilingual Agitation Not Dead.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—John S. Ewart, K.C., will be engaged by the separate school board to assist in the presentation of its case to the Ontario Government on the occasion of the deputation from associated separate school boards of the province, which will wait on the Minister of Education at a date yet to be fixed.

Macdonald Election Protest.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—J. G. Foley, clerk of the crown in chancery, leaves today for Winnipeg, taking with him all the papers in connection with the Macdonald bye-election. The preliminaries of the protest against Angus Morrison, M.P., will come up in the courts there this week.

Would Keep Saloniki, Scutari and Monastir—Envoys Meet To-day.

London, Dec. 17.—The plenipotentiaries who have under consideration the arrangement of peace between Turkey and the Balkans met yesterday in St. James' Palace. They adjourned early in the afternoon, without having entered into the discussion of the question of peace.

The feature of the day was the address of welcome delivered by Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who was elected honorary president of the conference. The responses of the heads of the various delegations indicated a desire to accomplish the purpose for which the conference is being held.

All the delegates applauded Sir Edward Grey's speech, which evidently like his statement in the House of Commons would, aimed at impartiality. But the Balkan delegates seemingly are more satisfied with its substance than the Turks.

In this passage, "In this way you will lay foundations on which I trust will be built by true wisdom and statesmanship the prosperity, moral, economic and national, of your respective countries," they see a plain allusion to their states, as they are fighting for the principle of nationality and they are trying to upbuild the moral and economic prosperity of their countries; while for Turkey it is a question of general demolition. Thus they think that the British Foreign Secretary, notwithstanding his efforts at impartiality, could not help—perhaps unconsciously—but give a hint on which side his sympathies are.

In his reply, Dr. Danec of the Bulgarian delegation emphasized Sir Edward's utterance, when he said that the conference would work "to insure the Balkan states, so troubled in the past, an era of tranquility and progress"—which is considered as meaning without Turkey.

The first encounter between the allies and the Turks will begin to-day. A climax will be reached when both sides exchange their respective propositions for the conclusion of peace.

The terms sought by the allies, as generally understood, have already been published.

The terms formulated by Turkey have been kept secret, but it may be asserted on good authority that they include the recommendation by both sides of any money transaction under the form of indemnities or otherwise, except the taking over by the Balkan states of a portion of the Ottoman public debt proportionately to the new territories they acquire. They provide also that the Sultan shall have a representative in the territories passing to the allies, where Ottoman courts shall be instituted for Mussulman subjects. Adrianople, the first Turkish capital in Europe, and surrounding territory, shall remain to Turkey. The Turco-Bulgarian frontier south of Adrianople, shall be marked by the Maritza river, while the territory west of Maritza as far as the Struma river, goes to Bulgaria, which thus would have the port of Kavala, to which she has long aspired.

Furthermore, Turkey will demand that Saloniki shall remain in Turkey, and, together with Monastir and Scutari and their respective districts, shall form Ottoman territory surrounding Albania.

Ambassadors Meet To-day.

London, Oct. 17.—It is officially announced that the ambassadorial "conversations" in regard to the Balkan situation are to begin to-day at the British Foreign Office.

The Ambassadors of France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary and Italy will, in the course of these "conversations," go over the whole ground of the status of European Turkey as a result of the war. They will informally discuss the questions of the interests of the great powers arising out of the change in the territorial situation. There is no fixed program, and efforts will be made to avoid touching on questions in regard to which some of the powers have taken a fixed stand and which they do not consider to come within the scope of the discussions.

NEW ELECTION ACT COMES INTO FORCE ON JANUARY 6th

Candidate Must Not Distribute Literature on Cards on Polling Day.

Candidates seeking municipal honors on Jan. 6, will learn with dismay that on election day they will not be allowed to circulate artistic cards containing their faces with solicitation for votes. It has been a common custom in the past, and the city was usually swamped with such literature, in which Mr. So-and-So respectfully solicits your vote and influence, etc. A new election act just passed comes into effect next year, making the distribution of such literature illegal, and the various candidates will, perforce, have to complete their circulation before January 1st, if they desire to remain within the pale of the law.

"No person shall, on the day of the polling, use or deliver to any other person any card, ticket, leaflet, book circular or other device soliciting votes for or against any candidate or candidates, or for or against any question or by-law, and any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding $20, or, in default of payment, imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten days, on conviction before any justice of the peace.

Ordered To Form Cabinet.

Tokio, Dec. 17.—The Emperor of Japan has decided to issue to-day a special rescript ordering Prince Taro Katsura to form a Cabinet, owing to fact that the elder statesmen, after a number of conferences, have failed to recommend any one as Premier to take the place of the Marquis Saionji.

Chatham, Dec. 17.—Mrs. Henry Torrington, who was injured in an accident at the Park street G.T.R. crossing in this city a few days ago, died yesterday afternoon at the hospital. Mrs. Torrington has been unconscious since the accident.

It is likely an inquest will be held.

CORONER'S JURY AT FLESHERTON BLAMES HENRY LOVE FOR THE DEATH OF HIS WIFE

In Spite of His Father's Pleading, Arnold Love, the 14 Year-Old Son, Declares That Parent Told Him to Give False Information Concerning Mother's Whereabouts.

Flesherton, Dec. 17.—"We, the coroner's jury, have examined the body of Hannah Lucilla Love, and are satisfied that she was foully murdered by being struck with some blunt instrument used by stabbing her in the neck and causing her death, and, according to the evidence, that there is a tendency showing the said crime was committed by Henry Love, who was arrested."

After half an hour's deliberation Coroner Bibby's jury rendered the above verdict last evening. They had to believe the father or the boy, both of whom testified with remarkable coolness, the situation at times being tense.

Once or twice Henry Love, the accused, became excited in his earnestness to impress the truth of his words with his story of kissing his wife good-bye last Tuesday morning and not seeing her again until he took her mutilated remains from the mudhole under their home on Wednesday night.

His fourteen-year-old only son, Arnold, swore positively, however, that his mother was not in the house when he arose to breakfast that morning, nor when he went to school, and he never saw her alive after that Monday night. His stories to the contrary, frequently told since the tragedy, he said, were invented by his father, who had instructed him to say that his mother was home that morning, and to leave the impression that a suspicious stranger had been seen in the neighborhood of the house. The father, with eyes protruding, looking directly at his boy, pleaded with him to think again, but the lad said he had told only the truth.

"I'm sorry," said the accused man, in pathetic resignation, when the boy persisted that he could not be mistaken.

Love had no lawyer, but the crown was represented by I. B. Lucas.

At the conclusion of the trial Love was arraigned before Magistrate McGill, on the charge of murder, and formally remanded for a week. Next week he will be further remanded in order to take the preliminary investigation over the holidays.

The son, Arnold, held as a material witness, was placed into custody of the Children's Aid Society, in Owen Sound, and went on the same train which bore his father back to the jail last night.

Asked if he desired to make any statement, Love replied that he did. He was warned that what he said might be used against him, but he still desired to speak. He gave his evidence in a steady almost a loud, voice, and his manner was composed throughout. He told of his movements from the day of his wife's disappearance until the calling of the neighbors after the finding of the body.

All day Tuesday he had paid little attention to his wife's absence. In the evening he asked if she had been at McLaren's, nearby, but did not say she was missing. On Wednesday he just mentioned his alarm at her disappearance. On Wednesday night he found the body. He said he did not notice until Wednesday that his wife's wraps were in their usual place.

Love made a straight denial of telling his son that Mrs. Love was at McLaren's. He said Inspector Reburn had been putting stories into the boy's head by hypnotism.

Beyond that his wife sometimes scolded him for smoking, Love said he never had any friction with her. He was never a drinker.

Asked for his theory of the tragedy, he replied with fervor, "I have none. I know my hands are clear of her blood."

When the father left the box there was a hush of expectancy in the large audience as the coroner called Arnold Love. His mother spent last Monday night in the house and he went to bed between 8 and 9 o'clock. He had breakfast alone Tuesday morning and his father told him that his mother had gone to McLaren's. He took his lunch with him to school and his father told him not to go to McLaren's at dinner time. Tuesday night father and son slept in the house, and on Wednesday afternoon the father expressed some anxiety regarding his wife, but he said she was safe wherever she was.

There was no faltering in the boy's voice when he said that his father had told him to invent the story of the stranger and say that his mother was at home on Tuesday morning. If his father slept with him on Tuesday night after the arrest Arnold says he was asleep and did not know it.

As important evidence, Love's underwear was introduced because a woollen thread was found in the blood-clotted hair of the murdered woman.

Governor-General Evicted.

Sydney, N.S.W., Dec. 17.—A riot in which several persons were trampled, followed an attempt by the Premier, Hon. Mr. McGowan, to make a speech yesterday at the ceremony of handing over the mansion formerly occupied by the Governor-General of Australia, Lord Denman, to the people.

Lord Denman was notified some time ago to move from his residence, which was owned by the state, and which, it was declared, was now needed to add to the Sydney Botanical Gardens. Premier McGowan announced yesterday his intention of handing the property over the people, despite the objects of the citizens' committee, who objected to the eviction of the Governor-General.

Dynamite Cases Near End.

Indianapolis, Dec. 17.—The trial of the 41 men accused of conspiracy in the McNamara dynamite plots, which has been in session for almost three months and in preparation by the Government, for more than a year, yesterday was said by both sides to be nearing an end.

Thirty-one of the defendants had testified in their own behalf, denying the charges of illegal transportation of explosives at the close of yesterday's session. Some of the remaining ten defendants are not to take the stand.

About two weeks are to be devoted to argument to the jury after the defence completes its case and after the Government devotes a brief time to testimony in rebuttal.

Bohemians Stone Army Officers.

Vienna, Dec. 17.—Serious riots have taken place during the past two days at Pilsen and Koeniggraz, in Bohemia, on the occasion of the departure of military detachments from the towns.

TO CARRY ON THE RESEARCH

Wealthy Men Create Endowment for Toronto University.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—An endowment fund for medical research work which will amount to over $25,000 yearly will make the Toronto Medical College the Premier institution of its class in Canada. The subscribers to the fund are many, and among their number are Mr. J. C. Eaton of this city, and Hon. Clifford Sifton of Ottawa.

The money will be placed at the disposal of the University of Toronto medical authorities and will be devoted to medical research work. The students chosen to carry on the work will not necessarily be graduates of Toronto, but they will all have to prove that they are well fitted for it. The work will at first be carried on in the new General Hospital building, but later may be extended to the other hospitals. At present the authorities are fitting up a special library for research work. Many of the books are written in German or French, and this facts makes it compulsory that the doctors pursuing the work are well trained in these two languages. The medical faculty of the university will supervise the work.

Three doctors have already been chosen to pursue this research work and others will be appointed later. Dr. Caulfield, who has been connected with the Muskoka Sanitarium for a number of years, will give all his time to research work in tuberculosis for which he is well fitted. Dr. Imrie a graduate of Western University London, Ont., and Dr McPherson, a graduate of Toronto University, who has taken post-graduate work in London, Eng., are the other two men.

COSTLY FIRE AT STRATFORD

Canadian Press Despatch

Stratford, Dec. 17.—The Stratford Mill Building Company's plant was destroyed by fire early this morning. The cost of $75,000 is partly insured.

Suffragettes On Tramp.

Irvington, N.Y., Dec. 17.—Depleted in numbers, but courageous in spirit, the suffragettes "army" finished here yesterday, the first lap of its 140 mile journey to Albany, to carry to Governor Sulzer a message on woman suffrage.

Thirty-four marchers were in the ranks when the expedition started from the outskirts of New York shortly before ten o'clock, but one by one they dropped out on the way until less than a dozen trudged into this village shortly after six o'clock last night. It was explained, however, by Miss Rosalie C. Jones, commander of the expedition, that those who deserted did so by previous intention, as only six had promised to make the entire two weeks' journey to the state capital.

No B. N. A. Act Amendment.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—The Government has given no pledge to secure an amendment to the B. N. A. Act, such as would guarantee the Maritime Provinces no reduction in their present representation.

There has been such an agitation, and an interprovincial conference on the subject at Ottawa this year was suggested by Premier Flemming of New Brunswick, but as yet it has taken no definite form.

No redistribution bill will be introduced till next year, in any event.

TURKS AND GREEKS IN ANOTHER NAVAL BATTLE

Heavy Firing in Engagement which Was Commenced This Morning.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sedil Bahr, Dardenelles, Dec. 17.—Another naval battle was begun between Turkish and Greek fleets this morning outside the entrance to the Dardenelles straits. Firing was heavy, but the number of vessels engaged is not known.

London, Dec. 17.—A naval engagement between the Greek and Turkish fleets occurred yesterday between the Dardanelles and Imbros Island. It lasted for one hour and a half, and the damage done is problematic.

The official reports from the Turkish and Greek commanders show that the Turkish warships left the Dardanelles at 8.20 o'clock in the morning. The fight began at 9.25. What ships were engaged is not known.

After heavy cannonading, the Turks, who throughout had remained under the protection of the forts, retired within the Dardanelles.

The Turks claim to have silenced the guns of the armored cruiser Georgio Averof, but the Greek account states that only five men were wounded.

The whole Greek fleet cruised in the vicinity until late in the afternoon, when a Turkish destroyer appeared again, but quickly retired pursued by Greek destroyers.

Canadian Lines Complained.

St. Louis, Dec. 17.—H. C. Martin, general freight agent of the G.T.R., testified yesterday before R. H. Meyer, an examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that American railroads raised their rates on lumber from southeastern states because the Canadian roads complained the rate was too low.

The hearing is being conducted on complaint of lumber dealers who are protesting against the suspension of a rate of 37 cents from territory south of the Ohio river to Canada.

"HOME-MADE CANOES" ARE PREFERRED TO BRITISH SHIPS

Alberta Liberal Urges a Canadian-Built Fleet at all Cost J. A. M. Aitkins, in Resuming Debate, Says an Imperial Navy, One and Indivisible, is Canada's Best Safeguard From Aggression.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—There were four speeches on the naval debate in the House yesterday, the last of them being delivered by Mr Sinclair of Guysboro, N.S., after the Prime Minister had declined to permit an adjournment. An effort is being made to lengthen the Christmas holidays, and it has already been agreed that the House will adjourn on to-morrow.

J. A. M. Aitkins, the Conservative member for Brandon, and Mr. Stevens, the Conservative member for Vancouver, made strong Imperialistic speeches in support of the Government.

Mr. Aitkins also pleaded for an Imperial navy. He believed that Canada was only saved from forcible annexation by the U. S. through the supremacy of Britain upon the sea. The Opposition put up to reply to Mr. Aikins, Dr. Clarke of Red Deer, who preferred a Canadian navy of home-made canoes to dreadnoughts built in England.

Mr. Aikins, in opening the debate, said that true Canadians need not resort to the dictionary to find the meaning of words like "emergency, crisis, empire and duty." Neither was it necessary for the Empire to be dying before Canada should offer help.

The man who is ill did not refuse to take medicine until he found himself hovering between life and death. In the same way, he said, we should disregard the discussion as to our constitutional relations, past and present, with the Empire. The young man who has left home and set up for himself will send money back to his parents if he thinks they need it without waiting to be asked for it, nor will he by so doing sacrifice his independence.

Mr. Aitkins went on to say that the Laurier resolution contemplated fleets under Canadian control for the protection of Canada. The whole idea was wrong and pointed toward separation. There must be no British, no Canadian fleet, but one Empire navy.

Mr. Aitkins declared himself for an Empire, one and indivisible, and a navy, one and indivisible. He said the Imperial fleet in the North Sea was protecting Canada. It was that fleet which prevented the forcible annexation of Canada by the United States and made it possible for Canada last year to shake her fist at the United States and reject reciprocity. He recalled the Mexican war to illustrate the danger in which Canada stood from the United States. The latter country had brought on the Spanish war for "altruistic purposes." It might annex Canada sincerely believing that such action would benefit Canada. The United States had disregarded its treaty obligation in the case of the Panama Canal, and Canada's only hope for relief was through British diplomacy and British arms.

Dr. Clark, in opening, said that the moral effect of Canada's action would be seriously impaired unless the Government greatly modified its program, "and such modifications," he said, "I under-stand are by no means unlikely. Canadians have the right to discuss freely their position in the Empire."

Personally the speaker believed that Canadian autonomy was being attacked by the present program of the Government.

The Postmaster-General and other members of the Government, Dr. Clark continued, were protesting that this contribution was being asked for by England. The statement he pronounced to be untrue and the motive for making it to be unworthy. "you should defend your position with our own strength and not hide behind the British Government."

Dr. Clark made a strong plea for a Canadian navy, saying that if Canadians had not enough capacity to build anything better than canoes, then by all means to have a navy of canoes, but made and manned in Canada. He ridiculed the rumor that the Germans were secretly building dreadnoughts, saying that wild reports of this kind were periodically circulated in England, where people could be found silly enough to print and believe such fables.

"We on this side of the House stand united as one man. We stand where we did, and we stand where you did, and where you should be standing to-day. We stand for Canada a nation; a nation beneath a common flag, a nation within the Empire, with a nation's rights, a nation's aspirations, a nation's responsibilities. We stand on that policy, and we are confident we have the majority of the people of Canada with us, for this is the only policy that makes for the dignity of our nation, for the harmony and progress of the Empire, and for the peace of the civilized world."

Dr. Clark resumed his seat amid Liberal cheers.

Mr. H. H. Stevens (Vancouver) boldly stated the basic doctrine of the Conservative ideas of Imperialism. He did not believe that the strongest bonds of Imperial unity were the bonds of sentiment and of loyalty to the crown. "We ask," he said, "that they be supplemented by something more concrete and of a more material character. Imperial federation is practicable and necessary. It is the only alternative, else there will come the absolute dissolution of the Empire."

Mr. J. H. Sinclair (Guysboro), the last speaker of the day stood by the Laurier policy of Canadian-built, manned and maintained ships, as compared with the Borden policy.

But Mrs. Fosdick was crying to her luscious-eyed mate: "Oh, Arthur, he's not a detective. Embrace me!"

And they embraced, while the robbers looked on aghast at the sudden oblivion they had fallen into. They focussed the attention on themselves again, however, with a ferocious: "Here, hands up!" But they did not see Mr. and Mrs. Fosdick steal a kiss behind their upraised arms, for the robber to whose lot Mallory fell was gloating over his well-filled wallet. Mallory saw it go with fortitude, but noting a piece of legal paper, he said: "Say, old man, you don't want that marriage license, do you?"

The robber handled it as if it were hot—as if he had burned his fingers on some such document once before, and he stuffed it back in Mallory's pocket. "I should say not. Keep it. Turn round."

Meanwhile the other felon turned up another beautiful pile of bills in Dr. Temple's pocket. "Not so worse for a parson," he grinned. "You must be one of them Fifth avenue sky-shaffures."

And now Mrs. Temple's gentle eyes and voice filled with tears again: "Oh, don't take that. That's the money for his vacation—after thirty long years. Please don't take that."

Her appeals seemed always to find the tender spot of this robber's heart, for he hesitated, and called out: "Shall we overlook the parson's wad, podner?"

"Take it, and shut up, you mollycoddle!" was the answer he got, and the vacation funds joined the old gewgaws.

And now everybody had been robbed but Marjorie. She happened to be at the center of the line, and both men reached her at the same time: "I seen her first," the first one shouted.

"You did not," the other roared.

"I tell you I did."

"I tell you I did." They glared threateningly at each other, and their revolvers seemed to meet, like two game cocks, beak to beak.

The porter voiced the general hope, when he sighed: "Oh, Lawd, if they'd only shoot each other."

This brought the rivals to their evil senses, and they swept the line with those terrifying muzzles and that heart-stopping yelp: "Hands up!"

Bill said: "You take the east side of her, and I'll take the west."

"All right."

And they began to snatch away her side-combs, the little gold chain at her throat, the jeweled pin that Mallory had given her as the first token of his love.

The young soldier had foreseen this. He had foreseen the wild rage that would unseal his reason when he saw the dirty hands of thieves laid rudely on the sacred body of his beloved. But his soldier-schooling had drilled him to govern his impulses, to play the coward when there was no hope of successful battle, and to strike only when the moment was ripe with perfect opportunity.

He had kept telling himself that when the finger of one of these men touched so much as Marjorie's hem, he would be forced to fling himself on the profane miscreant. And he kept telling himself that the moment he did this, the other man would calmly blow a hole through him, and drop him at Marjorie's feet, while the other passengers shrank away in terror.

He told himself that, while it might be a fine impulse to leap to her defense, it was a fool impulse to leap off a precipice and leave Marjorie alone among strangers, with a dead man and a scandal, as the only rewards for his impulse. He vowed that he would hold himself in check, and let the robbers take everything, leaving him only the name of coward, provided they left him also the power to defend Marjorie better at another time.

And now that he saw the clumsy-handed thugs rifling his sweetheart's jewelry, he felt all that he had foreseen, and his head fought almost in vain against the white fire of his heart. Between them he trembled like a leaf, and the sweat globed on his forehead.

The worst of it was the shivering terror of Marjorie, and the pitiful eyes she turned on him. But he clenched his teeth and waited, thinking fiercely, watching, like a hovering eagle, a chance to swoop.

But the robbers kept glancing this way and that, and one motion would mean death. They themselves were so overwrought with their own ordeal and its immediate conclusion, that they would have killed anybody. Mallory shifted his foot cautiously, and instantly a gun was jabbed into his stomach, with a snarl: "Don't you move!"

"Oh, don't take that!" Marjorie moaned, clenching her hand.

Mallory's heart ached at the thought of this final sacrilege. He had the license and the minister at last—and now the fiends were going to carry off the wedding ring. He controlled himself with a desperate effort, and [illegible] to plead: "Say, old man, don't do that. That's not fair."

"[illegible] up, both of you," Jake [illegible], and jabbed him again with the [illegible].

He gave the ring a jerk, but Marjorie, in the very face of the weapon, would not let go. She struggled and [illegible], weeping and imploring: "Oh, don't, don't take that! It's my wedding ring."

"[illegible], what do I care!" the ruffian snarled, and wrenched her finger so viciously that she gave a little cry of pain.

That broke Mallory's heart. With a wild, bellowing, "Damn you!" he hurled himself at the man, with only his bare hands for weapons.

CHAPTER XL.

A Hero In Spite of Himself.

Passion sent Mallory into the unequal fight with two armed and desperate outlaws. But reason had planned the way. He had been studying the robber all the time, as if the villain were a war-map, studying his gestures, his way of turning, and how he held the revolver. He had noted that the man, as he frisked the passengers, did not keep his finger on the trigger, but on the guard.

Sardine Salad.

Take some cold cooked fish—haddock will do—free it from skin and bone and flake it. Place a layer of this in a dish and sprinkle it over with minced gherkins and a few bruised capers. Arrange on this a layer of sliced German sausage and arrange on the top of the pile sardines freed from skin and bone and split in halves. Cut some lettuce hearts into quarters, place around the dish with hard boiled eggs, also cut into quarters. Then pour over the following sauce: Take the flesh of three sardines and rub to a smooth paste with the yolk of two hard boiled eggs, a pinch of cayenne, a grate of nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls each of olive oil and vinegar. Beat the sauce well before adding it to the salad.

THE MARRIAGE AGE

—Dr. Charles Eliot of Harvard, says that the postponed marriage is a great modern evil in educated society. He holds that it is not right that a young man should wait until he is in possession of a large income before giving the girl of his choice an opportunity to say whether she would care to become his wife on his present salary. The trouble is that before a young man can earn enough to give a girl the comforts and the style to which she was accustomed at home he gets fairly well up in years. The high cost of living, the social demands of certain stations in society, the tendency to leave marriage off for other reasons, are certainly to be acknowledged as constituting a serious evil.

What is the remedy? The high cost of living will not change materially under the way economic tendencies are heading. The renting problem for the average young man is severe in the larger cities. In Toronto, for instance, the apartment flats which are esteemed as quite the thing in social circles cost from $40 to $50 per month. The salary of the average young man who would keep up the scale of appearances in other ways is entirely unequal to the strain. So unless the girl is willing to restrain her desire for a position in society, both he and she would find it better to postpone marriage for a few years. But marriage at 35 is too late, as a rule. Family considerations make it desirable that marriage should take place at 25 or 26. It so often happens that a young man wastes his substance before marriage that for him it would probably be quite as economical to establish a home providing that the girl were willing to do her share in building up the family fortunes. If people would get away more from their highly artificial civilization, away from the ball-room, the theatre, the show and parade, and live more the simple life, they would be healthier, stronger, richer, better morally and in every respect.

BANK INSPECTION

The intimation by the Minister of Finance that the Bank Act will be amended so as to provide for the appointment of a chartered accountant to audit and specially examine the financial standing and books of a bank, by the shareholders of that bank is an advance toward external bank inspection. But there should be provisions that would ensure the thorough independence and disinterestness of any such accountant. If he is appointed by the shareholders, he is an employe of the bank at that time. Under the method at which annual meetings of banks are conducted, the shareholders voting are, principally, the officers and friends of the officers of the bank. They would have the practical choice of the inspector, and as a result the reporting of serious irregularities would mean the displeasure of the powers that be, and consequent dismissal of the accountant from all banking investigation.

It is urged by the Toronto Globe that there should be a select list of accountants who must be alternated and who cannot be discharged by the banks. They will be Government-commissioned, and will be safe in their position as long as no irregularity is shown against them. The idea has good points, but its chief weakness is that it involves the Government of the day into an undesirable closeness of relation with the inspection. There should be external inspection, and rigid at that. Government inspection would scarcely do, because any failure in the working of the system would be chargeable to the Government. The system proposed by Mr White has many merits, if the shareholders could be prevailed upon to obtain a really independent audit. But it is hard to say how the matter will turn out. Certainly there is need of advance upon some such line as Mr. White has indicated.

A TOWN PLANNING MOVEMENT

The Berlin Conference on town-planning, at which Peterborough was represented, ought to have good results. The smaller Ontario cities are just as much in need of legislation enabling the municipalities to control the laying out of subdivisions, and to deal with the housing question, as the cities of 50,000 population and over. There is much to be done in an inexpensive way by Civic Improvement Societies and Commissions, toward the beautification and the planning of healthy, well ordered and arranged cities. In Peterborough considerable work along this line has been attempted, but there is need of legislation broadening the powers of the municipalities before the fullest effectiveness can be realized. The Berlin conference resulted in the formation of an embryo Ontario Town-Planning Association and for this incorporation will be sought, so that it may become a body devoted to the general interests of improving and regulating the growth of Ontario cities as a class, and be in a position to press for legislation that will further its object.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In describing the staging of the local option meeting on Sunday afternoon an esteemed contemporary says: "The stage was nicely arranged as a drawing room scene with rugs scattered on the floor." The property man at Turner's theatre evidently knows his business. He didn't put the rugs on the ceiling or the walls.

In some quarters it is thought that Fritzi Scheff may have written the G.T.P. contract it is so full of humorous catches.

People took the liberty of laughing on one occasion when the then mayor of Orillia, in a burst of feeling, cabled the Admiralty offering the name of that town for use on a Dreadnought, and yet that little cablegram now gives Orillia the inside track on Barrie and Bracebridge in naming three great warships.

By the time our street railway company completes the proposed extension of its system the system may be out of fashion. Dundee, Scotland, is now experimenting with railless trolley cars, two of which are now in operation.

They Get Scarcer Every Year and May Soon Be Extinct.

For some time past there has been a rumor going the baseball rounds that the left handed pitcher is rapidly becoming an extinct species. Every club in baseball is anxious to have on its payroll at least one and if possible two "left paws," but hundreds of teams have none. Left handed twirlers are so greatly valued in the major leagues at present that the scouts sent out to look over talent in the minors are instructed to try to dig up as many promising offside twirlers as possible. The searchers proved that but little could be accomplished in the desired direction.

One of the best known scouts in the business is Arthur Irwin, the veteran talent hunter of the New York Americans, and to quote what he said recently seems to sum up the situation in a nutshell. "I've combed the bush leagues this year as never before," quoth he, "and never did I see such a scarcity of southpaws. They are not to be had. My experience is the same as that of other scouts with whom I have talked. I cannot account for it except that left handed persons are getting scarcer in all walks of life. In my travels this season I saw very few twirlers of this kind, and I'll venture the prediction that 1913 will see fewer new southpaws in the big leagues than in any season in twenty-five years."

If this turns out to be the case the few winning offside pitchers that will be with the majors next year will probably be carefully nursed. But should the left handed flinger become practically extinct it will prove a great relief to the batters, only a comparatively few of whom can learn to be equally expert hitting the ball from either side of the plate. It is a pretty safe wager that if a few years hence the big leagues were practically without left handed heavers and all the boys were batting right handed nearly all of the time the batting would increase at least one-third over the present gait.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

A bowl of quicklime, if placed in a damp pantry or closet, will absorb the dampness and any odor that may be in the closet.

Recreant Lawyers.

Nineteen lawyers have been disbarred in New York city, borough of Manhattan, since the first of the year, and the cases of thirty three more are before referees appointed by the appellate division of the supreme court. More than 200 complaints against other lawyers have been filed with the counsel for the grievance committee of the New York City Bar association, some of which have been acted upon.—Green Bag.

Morgan's Test of Seamanship.

J. P. Morgan, it is said, adopted an ingenious way of securing a captain for the Corsair. He inquired of the captains of some of the White Star liners for a list of competent first and second officers. When these were furnished he asked for their previous month's wine cards, and the one having the lowest wine charge against him was chosen.

CLAIM OF $10,000 FOR DEATH OF HER HUSBAND

Non-Jury Sittings of High Court Open To-morrow—Mr. Justice Hodgins to Preside.

The most important case to be dealt with at the non jury sittings of the High Court which opens tomorrow is the action of Fairweather versus The Canadian General Electric Company, one that was instituted by the widow of the late Henry Ivan Fairweather for $10,000 damages and costs for the loss of her husband who was drowned while in the employ of the company at the Nassau power house last January.

It is alleged that the defendants were responsible for the action of the machinery at the power house and that when defendants did not supply help and appliances suitable for removing the accumulated ice, deceased was obliged to do without it.

On the other hand the defendants allege that the deceased came to death through his own gross negligence, and they ask that the action be dismissed.

The case of the Dickson Company versus G. N. Graham, proprietor of the Oriental Hotel, will be brought up again. The plaintiffs allege that the terms of the indenture of lease specifies that the defendant agreed to vacate the premises leaving them in good repair at the expiration of the said lease or other sooner determination of said term, and procure or cause to be procured a proper transfer of license. In return The Dickson Company were to pay Mr. Graham an amount equivalent to a proportionate part of the license for the unexpired term.

The defendants it is alleged did not yield up the premises according to agreement and continued in possession after the first of May, 1912. The defendants claim judgment and order of the court for the possession of the Oriental. They furthermore claim an order to deliver a proper transfer of the license and damages by reason of the wrongs default and breach of covenants of defendants.

ROACH VS. HALPIN.

Bridget Roach, wife of Patrick Roach, Toronto, contractor, and formerly Bridget Halpin, is plaintiff in an action to recover possession of premises situate on Hunter Street from John Halpin, blacksmith, of this city.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES.

Cardwell versus Breckenridge are plaintiff and defendant, respectively, in an action to recover damages alleged to have been caused to the lands of the plaintiff by reason of the defendant backing up water by means of a dam situate in Asphodel.

Charlotte Carton and F. H. Hamilton are plaintiff and defendant, respectively, in a civil case, involving legal complications in connection with the estate of the late George Carton.

The case of Fanny Sims vs. Arthur Sims, is one in which the plaintiff seeks to obtain alimony from her husband.

Mr. Justice Hodgins will preside.

MISS ROCHESTER'S PUPILS HELD CHRISTMAS CLOSING

An Interesting Programme With Santa Claus in Attendance.

The spirit of Christmas was rampant in the Y.W.C.A. last evening when Miss Helen Rochester's pupils in physical culture and elocution held their Christmas closing.

Instrumental solo — Miss Helen Thompson.
Reading—Miss Ada Lane.
Recitation—Miss Nanny Mills.

Reading—Miss Jean Jackson.

In the interval between the program and refreshments Master Joseph Stanley recited.

After refreshments lights were turned off and the ringing of bells heralded Santa Claus' approach. By candlelight the jolly old fellow distributed the gifts from the tree.

The Loyalty Club will not meet until January 9th.

The children's Saturday afternoon classes will not be held again till after the New Year.

The new boarding home, corner of Park and Townsend streets will be open for inspection Thursday from 2 to 5 o'clock.

DRIVING HIM TO THE GRAVE

"Fruit-a-tives Saved my Life"

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT., JULY 26th, 1911.

"For thirteen years, I was a terrible sufferer from the tortures of Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation and Vomiting. I could not retain much food, and this, together with the pain, and headaches, was driving me to the grave.

Then I used "Fruit-a-tives" and almost at once I got relief.

"Fruit-a-tives" stopped the vomiting, relieved the Constipation, toned up the stomach, and gave me the first relief in years. I feel that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and for the sake of other victims of Indigestion and Headaches, I will allow this statement to be published."

HARRY DICKINSON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SALE OF THOSE CHRISTMAS STAMPS

The directors of the National Sanitarium Association have learned that an impression was abroad in Peterborough that the sale of Christmas Stamps issued in aid of the work of the Association was not to be carried on until the last day of school preceding the holidays, when the teachers are to deliver addresses to their pupils concerning the cure and prevention of tuberculosis. This impression is erroneous, as the stamps were released for sale several weeks ago. The directors also considered the fact that stamps were being sold in Peterborough in aid of a local institution, but on the advice of prominent Peterborough citizens who are members of the Christmas Stamp Committee and who reported that there was room for the sale of both stamps, it was decided to proceed with the original plan of selling in the city, more particularly because of the fact that patients from Peterborough are now being cared for at the institutions maintained by the Association.

NEW TREASURER OF CHARITY BOARD

H. C. Stabler to Succeed Wm. Yelland Who Has Resigned

D. W. Dumble, secretary of George Street Methodist Church, wrote the Charity Board last evening, saying that H. C. Stabler had been appointed to represent that church on the Board in place of Wm. Yelland who had resigned. Mr. Stabler was appointed treasurer in place of Mr. Yelland, and a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Yelland for his services as treasurer for so many years. Mr. Yelland was appointed treasurer of the Board in 1899.

A tablespoonful of washing soda and a cup of vinegar poured down the sink will clean out the most stubborn of clogged pipes.

When finishing off a machine seam, turn the material and stitch for an inch, this does away with the necessity of tieing the thread, which, if forgotten often causes trouble in the finished article.

FOR FAMILY USE

An Ideal Remedy for Coughs, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Weak Chest.

After having made a special study of the treatment of the throat and lungs for twenty years, Prof. D. Jackson states that in his opinion no preparation for general family use is so efficient, so healing, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone.

As his reasons for making this claim for Catarrhozone, Dr. Jackson says:

"Catarrhozone is free from opium.

"The patient can breathe its rich, balsamic fumes direct to the diseased spot.

"It is a remedy that treats and cures causes—prevents disease spreading.

"Alleviates chest soreness.

"Stops coughing instantly.

"Prevents bronchial irritations.

"Relieves clogged nostrils.

"Cures sniffles and nasal catarrh.

"Prevents La Grippe.

"Has proven itself a cure for weak lungs, loss of voice, speakers' sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, coughs, colds, and winter ills."

Catarrhozone is unquestionably the world's greatest breathable cold, cough, and catarrh medicine, and being free from all drowsy drugs, entirely safe for children and old folks; it makes an ideal family remedy. Recommended by the medical profession and sold by all reliable dealers. CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 16.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended Dec. 14, were 2200 cattle, 1100 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 450 calves. This was the Christmas cattle market and in consequence there was some very choice stock offered for the butchers and packers to select their supplies from. The bulk of offerings, however, consisted of ordinary and common cattle. Trade was active and a few fancy steers from Ontario brought as high as $7.50 and some very choice bulls, $6 per cwt., while some full loads of choice steers sold at $6.75 to $6.90, and others of a lighter average at $6.25 to $6.50 per cwt. One load of 25 steers weighing 25,740 lbs., sold at $5.90 per cwt.

Owing to the continued demand from butchers and packers for lambs and the smaller supplies coming forward, a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices were 25c per cwt. higher, sales being made freely at $7 per cwt. The tone of the market for sheep was also much stronger and prices as compared with a week ago, show an advance of 25c to 50c per cwt., with an active trade in ewes at $4.60 to $5 per cwt.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs and prices ruled 10c to 25c per cwt. lower than a week ago, which was attributed to the more liberal supplies coming forward and the easier prices ruling in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week. At the above reduction the demand from packers was good and an active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $8.75 to $8.90 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and in a few instances as high as $9 was realized for a few small lots.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; medium, $5.50 to $6.50; common, $4.50 to $4.75; canners, $2.50 to $3; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; bulls, $4.25 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; medium, $70 to $80; springers, $55 to $65.

Sheep—Ewes, $4.60 to $5; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.25; lambs, $7.50.

Hogs—F.O.B., $8.75 to $8.90.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 23,000 head; active; yearlings, 25c lower; lambs, 50c lower; lambs, $5 to $8.50; yearlings, $6 to $6.50; wethers, $5 to $5.25; ewes, $2.50 to $4.75; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.

Chicago Live Stock.

She had just returned from her first trip to Europe and everybody was given an opportunity to know about it. One by one they gently extricated themselves, but at last she found a silent youth in a corner who proved to be an attentive listener. To him she rhapsodized on the beauty of life "abroad," and especially in England. It is difficult, however, for the most enthusiastic tourist to exist long without eliciting from an auditor some expression of wonder or applause, so she sought to break her listener's respectful silence even at the expense of losing a little time herself. "Were you ever in England?" she asked.

"Yes," he said modestly, "I was born there, and I am thirty-six years old. I lived there until I came to America three months ago. If you can tell me anything about America I should be awfully glad, as I wish to learn all I can."—New York Press.

Build better roads than the Romans

CANADA is alive to the vital importance of good roads. Every land-owner knows that they contain the secret of greater prosperity; that they mean more farms, more profitable crops and more valuable land. Every merchant knows that they alone can swell his trade and his profits by giving him more customers and making it easier for those customers to get to his store.

But just what do we mean by "good roads?"

But people in prosperous, fertile Canada do not have to be content with such make-shifts.

They are going about the work of providing proper highways as they have gone about everything else—carefully, systematically, intelligently.

Concrete road

A BROAD statement? Yes — but it is supported by incontrovertable facts; by the experience of more than twenty years and by the most exhaustive tests and investigation. It is admitted to be the fact by the foremost road authorities on the continent. It is guiding the road-building policy of great commonwealths.

The Romans — history's greatest road-builders — used a crude form of natural concrete to build the highways that have given service for two thousand years.

Until this present century, no later nation was able to equal the Romans as road-builders.

Now, we can build better roads than the Romans, for less money than our fathers paid for roads that would not last for half the lifetime of those who built them.

MODERN concrete, made with cement produced by modern scientific methods, is more enduring in every cubic yard than the best the Romans ever made. Modern road-making machines enable a dozen men to lay more—and better—road in a day than a hundred Roman slaves could put down in a week. In a few years these modern concrete roads will have paid for themselves — and will still be there, practically as good as new, to pay their builders and succeeding generations, annual profits.

Concrete has been proven to be the best material for any sort of highway. It has carried the heavy, congested traffic in the heart of great cities; it is cheap enough to be within reach of the smallest town; it can be laid by the ordinary road-gang of the most isolated farming district.

The materials are close at hand; the work provides employment for home labor; practically all the money spent for concrete roads remains at home.

YOU owe it to yourself—as a merchant, a professional man, or a farmer—and to your community—as a citizen—to use your influence on behalf of this modern "best road." We have made it easy for you to do so by collecting all the information necessary to thoroughly post you on the subject—and putting it into convenient form.

This information will be sent to you, without cost or obligation, upon request. Simply ask for "Good Roads Literature."

DEROCHER'S SEVEN BEAT MONTREAL TEAM BY 10-3

Tom Lansfield Scored Four of the Counters -- Weir Had Two

Leo Derocher's crew of Peterborough hockey players are going some at Syracuse. In their first game the Arenas, as the team is known, defeated St. Pats. of Montreal, by 10—2. A despatch says:

Although the St. Patrick's A.A. Hockey Team played a brilliant game at the Arena, they were defeated by the Arena seven, 10 goals to 2. The Montreal team did not reach the city until just before 8 o'clock, and plainly showed the effects of their long ride in the inaccuracy of their passwork in the opening period. Fennell called the first goal for Montreal, when with the whole Syracuse team at his heels he swept the length of the ice late in the first period and drove the disc past Derocher in the Syracuse net. It was the prettiest play of the game and brought the spectators to their feet in a frenzy of excitement. In the second period the Montreal team kept the puck in Syracuse territory most of the time, but were unable to get past Cree, who played brilliantly until about the middle of the period when Coolican swept the rubber into the goal. The game was exceedingly rough and penalties frequent.

Graham, centre for Syracuse was twice rendered unconscious by being knocked down.

The play was not by any means brilliant, and obviously the man was bored. Suddenly he leaped to his feet.

"I heard an alarm of fire," he said "I must go and see where it is."

His wife, whose hearing was less acute, made way for him in silence, and he disappeared.

"It wasn't a fire after all," he said on his return.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE TEAMS FIND EXPENSES TOO HIGH

The champion Bell Telephone hockey team gave notice of withdrawal from the Mercantile Hockey League last night and the indications are that the newly elected officers will be out of a job. The champions figure that their expenses last season were in the neighborhood of [illegible]. With the four teams, the rink management asks $50 for the use of the ice for the schedule of games but will not allow the clubs to come in on the gate money. The teams would have to pay extra for practice hours and this added to uniforms and other equipment, brings up a high total.

The league contends that some consideration should be shown the teams, as players are developed and handed over to the O.H.A. teams.

CURLERS ARE IN READINESS

Brothers of the Stane Heard Report on the Schedule

About thirty curling enthusiasts assembled at the Charlotte street Curling Rink last night and discussed a report brought in by the schedule committee. A slight revision of the rules has been contemplated for some time and it was decided to hold a local bonspiel this year and an open one, at which "the whole world," so one of the members said, "would be given opportunity to compete."

Several new skips were added to the list already chosen, but their names are not given owing to the committee on membership not being at present in a position to say just how many skips will be required this season.

SPORT GOSSIP

All of the riders who competed in last week's six day race in Madison Square Garden were around after a day's sleep and were declared none the worse for their arduous labors. The sums due them reached a total of nearly $25,000, of which $5,100 represents the prize money and $19,000 the guarantees or bonus. Each rider is guaranteed a sum ranging from $50 to $275 a day as long as he remains in the race.

Jennings says that only five of the Detroit Tigers are sure of their job for next year.

Wyatt Lee has [illegible] with Newark again and will be used as utility pitcher and pinch hitter.

Ray Marchand will play in Hamilton and not Toronto this season.

The receipts of the Jim Flynn-Luther McCarty fight were $16,500. This was split 45 per cent to the promoters and 55 per cent to the fighters. The 55 per cent going to the fighters was split 30 per cent to Flynn and 25 per cent to McCarty. The promoters took down $7,425; Flynn, $4,950, and McCarty $4,125.

Hockey practice at the rink tomorrow night if possible, if the cold spell continues.

THE LATEST IN VIOLINS.

It Is an Instrument In Triplicate, and It Plays Itself.

The latest invention is a violin that plays itself. People who have heard it say that it possesses the delicacy of touch and sweetness of tone of a finished player.

Really the mechanical violin consists of three instruments. The bow is a circular hoop of horsehair, which travels around continually. Standing on end inside the hoop are three violins.

Along the necks of the instruments stretch a row of uncanny fingers that run up and down the strings just like real fingers. The violins stand back about an inch from the moving hoop of horsehair, against which they are pushed at the right moment when the note is struck.

The hardest tunes to play present no difficulties to this marvelous fiddle. It is not likely to replace the human player in the orchestra for some time at least, as the cheapest kind costs £400.

Like most machines, however, it lacks one thing. it cannot tune itself. When any of the notes get flat the strings have to be tightened by a mere man in almost the same way as an ordinary violin.—Pearson's Weekly.

Driven by the Sun.

Sun heat has been successfully used to raise steam in an engine in Egypt. The sunpower plant and engine are the invention of Frank Shuman of Philadelphia. The heating apparatus consists of 572 boxes of sheet iron, each three feet square, framed in stout wood and covered with two sheets of glass, separated by an air space of one inch. All these are mounted on trestles, facing due south, with a surface of 5,000 square feet exposed to the sun's rays. Further heat from the same source is concentrated on the boxes by six foot mirrors, and a temperature of 450 degrees F., more than double boiling point, can be obtained in this way. The sun power engine is adapted for use in tropical climates, where the cost of fuel is considerable.

Artistic Mending.

London has adopted a French industry which aims at neatness. It is that of the "stoppeur." The word refers to the art of mending clothes. In Paris the "stoppeur" is well and favorably known. Supposing a gentleman tears his coat or burns a hole with his cigarette in his trousers, the garment is conveyed to the "stoppeur," who in some mysterious way reconstructs the material. In some way they seem to weave in the stuff, joining up threads of a bit of cloth cut from another part.

Sunday Matinees For Children.

The Royal theater at Berlin, in answer to the request of many citizens "to give a performance at reduced prices, so that school children might receive the benefit and the pleasure," responded by setting aside a Sunday afternoon for that purpose. The house was filled to capacity by an appreciative youthful audience, and now a movement is on foot to make the "school children's matinee" a permanent feature.—New York Tribune.

To prevent eggs from sticking to the pan or breaking add a spoonful of flour to the grease in which they are fried.

A very attractive way to serve [illegible] eggs is to put the eggs into a deep dish and cover with bacon, which has been cut very thin and cooked rather crisp.

Try tacking cheesecloth on the pantry window. This admits air that is sifted free of smoke and soot before it comes into the pantry.

Write Ideas For Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN, SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

You Will Earn $100 Monthly For Spare Time Work.

FREE Send your name and address at once for free copy of our illustrated book, "MOVING PICTURE PLAYWRITING"

All you have to do to become a member is promise to give some little boy or girl a happy Christmas. You are going to be allowed to do it in your own way. All that you have to do is to send your name and address to The St. Nicholas Girl and you will receive the name of a little boy or girl whatever age you specify.

Then it is up to you to go and see that little boy and find out just what will make it most happy. It may be a very little thing indeed, but it will be JUST what the kiddie wants. If you feel that you can care for more than one let the St. Nicholas Girl know.

Money and gifts are not the things that rank first in bringing happiness to others. The human touch and love are what count most. And the movement brings the giver in direct touch with the receiver. You see to whom you are giving and get that glow of happiness that comes from the witnessing of joy that you have created in others.

BECAUSE OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

Disturber of the Peace was Given His Liberty

Port Hope, Dec. 17.—Ernest Sells, the man who was trying to sell spectacles, was charged in police court with being drunk and creating a disturbance and pleaded guilty. He told the Magistrate that he was the only support for his wife, three children and a mother-in-law and wanted a chance. He lived in London, Ont., and was on his way there, he had no money but could secure enough when he reached Peterborough and he was willing to walk to the northern town. "I have a nice wife and family and I am anxious to spend Christmas with them," remarked the prisoner. "Is your mother-in-law nice?" enquired His Honor, and the prisoner informed the court she was. "Then for the sake of your mother-in-law you may go" returned His Honor.

WAS FINED AND REMANDED TO JAIL

Blacklister Would Not Say Who Supplied Liquor

Thomas J. Quinlan, a blacklister, was arrested last night under the influence of liquor. He was very reluctant to confess his inebriation to the Magistrate this morning so much so that he was remanded until this afternoon at two o'clock, when he admitted taking whiskey yesterday.

Constable Sills said that in answer to a call to Cady Street, he discovered Quinlan using very bad language. The officer found him almost helplessly drunk and his wife who is just recovering from a severe illness was living in fear of bodily injury from him. She asked the officer to have him locked up for her own protection.

Quinlan was placed in the box to tell where he obtained the liquor, all that he would say was that he didn't know. Quinlan belonged to the T. A. S., but broke the pledge. When he is sober he is an excellent worker.

Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $10, and remanded him to jail until he decides to reveal the name of the party who supplied the liquor.

THE CODE FEMININE.

It Was Too Much For Mr. Granger to Fathom.

As soon as Mrs. Granger was fairly past Mr. Compton heard an irritated "There, I knew it!" from his wife and turned to see what was the matter.

"She's just as provoked as she can be to think that Mrs. Lombard and I didn't ask her to go out with us to see the Williams baby," said Mrs. Compton. "She thinks that it was on account of her having said that she didn't find three-weeks-old babies very interesting when, of course, she'd make an exception of Lena Williams' baby. But that wasn't the reason we didn't ask her. It was because we decided all in a hurry, and there was just time to catch the train. She's made up her mind she won't propose our names for the book club."

"How do you know she thinks all these things?" inquired Mr. Compton.

"My dear, didn't you see the way she bowed?" asked his wife in a pitying tone.

"Why, yes," said Mr. Compton. "I thought she gave a rather more pronounced bow than most women do and smiled quite brilliantly."

"You dear thing!" And Mrs. Compton patted his coat sleeve. "Of course she did. That's how I knew exactly what she was thinking."—Youth's Companion.

Very Smooth.

"Do you happen to be traveling far, sir?" began the inquisitive man to the sober minded occupant of the seat opposite on one of the expresses from New York to the west.

"Oh, no; only to Chicago," replied the grouchy one. "I am in the dry goods business. My age is thirty-six. I am married. My name is Thomas Brown. I have a son nineteen years old. He is in the civil service. He gets $30 a week. My father died last July. He was on the stock exchange. My mother is still living. I have a niece with red hair. Our cook is called Jane. Is there anything else?"

The inquisitive man hesitated. "What oil do you use for your tongue," he inquired slowly.—Fun.

VOL. LXVI. No. 142 PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1912 TEN CENTS PER WEEK.

ROBLIN JR., ALLEGES LIBEL

Winnipeg, Dec. 18.—George Roblin, a well-known newspaperman and son of the Premier, yesterday instructed his solicitors to begin an action for libel against a number of Canadian dailies, which printed a story on Dec. 10 to the effect that he was fined by Magistrate McMicken for having his hat on in the court room. Toronto and Calgary papers are among the list to which writs were issued.

How the reports originated is a mystery, as no such incident occurred.

TURKS CANNOT MEET GREECE

Will Only Treat With Signers of Treaty.

London, Dec. 18.—The peace conference was launched Monday, only to be interrupted yesterday by a complication resulting from the policy of Greece in waging war and negotiating peace simultaneously.

The Turkish delegation announced yesterday that it was empowered to confer only with the three Balkan kingdoms which signed the armistice at Tchatalja, and, as a consequence, adjournment was taken until to-morrow to enable the Turks to obtain instructions.

All the conferees expressed the belief that the suspension was merely temporary and that a pathway toward the resumption of the meetings will be found.

The prospects for a successful issue of the conference are enhanced by the declaration of the Turks that they have been given plenary powers to arrange and sign a treaty of peace. How far their improved military position, with the encouragement Austria is credited with giving them, may stiffen their backs against the allies' terms remains the chief factor of doubt.

The first sitting of the ambassadorial court of appeals, as it is called, was held in the Foreign Office yesterday. The ambassadors of five continental powers conferred with Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, for more than three hours. The different nations advanced their views on the various phases of the eastern problem.

The contingency that mediation may ultimately offer the only solution of the war has been the subject of much discussion. The heads of the Bulgarian and Servian delegates, during the course of the interviews, recognized that the United States might be in a position to act as peacemaker, as President Roosevelt did between Russia and Japan.

The friction between Austria and Servia appears not to have abated. The Servians complain that Austrian gunboats in the Danube are indulging in provocative tactics, throwing their searchlights on Belgrade, which has caused a panic among the residents.

OPPOSITION ANXIOUS TO HAVE TALK WITH ELECTORS

Ames, German, Wilcox and Oliver Participate, in Debate on the Naval Bill, But Little of a Definite Nature in the Opposition is Expected Until After Holidays

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—The naval debate continues in a somewhat perfunctory way, the general impression being that the Opposition will come back with some ultimatum to the Government after the Christmas recess, after they have sized up the situation in their constituencies.

The naval debate yesterday was opened by H. B. Ames of Montreal, who made a brief but effective argument in behalf of the Government. W. M. German, the anti-reciprocity Liberal from Welland, became regular again yesterday by vigorously supporting the Laurier amendment. Mr. Wilcox, the Conservative member for North Essex, entertained the House with a humorous speech, in the course of which, however, he gave good reasons for declaring himself strongly in favor of the proposed contribution to the Imperial navy. He was followed by Hon. Frank Oliver.

The House will adjourn to-day until Tuesday, Jan. 14.

Mr. H. B. Ames (St. Antoine) declared that the Borden policy was a step forward to the day which was coming, "when our Dominion will occupy in the Empire the same place as the provinces now occupy in the Dominion."

"There are those," he said, "who still try to conjure with the word 'autonomy.' That was a good word in its day, and it has accomplished a good work, but when invoked as a slogan in the twentieth century it is taking up a weapon to slay an enemy already dead. The danger of to-day is not that autonomy will be encroached upon, but that, under cover of this noble name, individualism may be pushed to excess."

H. B. AMES.

Mr. Ames declared that the present gift was in the nature of an emergency offering, to be succeeded by the evolution of a permanent Canadian policy at a later date.

W. M. German (Welland) who followed, spoke vigorously. Canada's dignity and Canada's self-respect were at stake, said he, and Canada was looking on. It was a remarkable exhibition to which the country had been treated. Not one Ministerial speaker who had yet addressed the House had attempted to submit anything which could be dignified by the name of argument in support of the Premier's proposals as against the sturdy, self-respecting and patriotic policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Conservatives had fallen back on the time-honored Tory slogan, "the old flag and an appropriation." With shameful lack of truth and patriotism they had described the old motherland as on her knees in beggary, dropping to decay, in deplorable financial condition, and in pitiable straits. They had shouted, "The Germans 'll get you if you don't watch out!" "They would," said Mr. German, "make Christianity a farce and civilization a failure by heralding a war between two of the great civilized nations of the earth."

If the Conservative leaders were inconsistent, said Mr. O. J. Wilcox (North Essex), who followed Mr. German, how much more was The Globe inconsistent? The Globe in an editorial in March, 1909, had declared that war with Germany was in progress through the contest in shipbuilding, and added: 'If Canada were to build a fleet of wasps and hornets it would have no effect at all." Mr. Wilcox charged the Liberals with being the associates of Henri Bourassa and the Nationalists.

Hon. Frank Oliver was compelled to speak late at night and to a thin House.

"I am with the Empire either in victory or defeat," he said, "and every part of that Empire, as well as the centre, must be protected against possible defeat or occupation by an enemy." The defence of the outlying portions was as vital as the defence of London itself. The ports from which the food-ships sailed to England must be protected equally with the ports to which they sailed.

"If by any possible combination of powers the British fleet should be defeated in the North Sea, then Canada, in her present defenceless state, would promptly become the prize of war to the strongest. It was the first duty of Canada to guard against successful occupation by any enemy—a duty as essential to the interests of the whole Empire as was the duty of England to protect her own coasts."

More Trouble For Johnson.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Three additional indictments under the Mann White Slave Act were returned against Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, by the Federal grand jury here yesterday.

GALT TO HAVE HYDRO COMMISSION

Galt, Dec. 18.—Galt Town Council has passed a bylaw providing for placing the control of the local Hydro-Electric Department in the hands of a commission, to consist of two members and the mayor. Two commissioners can be elected in January, but according to provincial act they will not take office until May 1.

Ald. Thomas thought the waterworks and Hydro-electric departments should be under one management, "I am in favor of the whole town being run by a commission," he said, "but I do not approve of so many smaller commissions."

EDWARD FOLEY INSTANTLY KILLED BY C. P. R. EXPRESS

Was Watching the Yard Engine and Did Not Notice the Express Train—Was Brother of Mrs. Henry of This City

While on his way driving to Trent Bridge, Mr. Edward Foley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Foley, of Havelock, was struck by the C.P.R. morning local at 12 o'clock yesterday noon and was instantly killed. The unfortunate young man who is in the employment of Mr. Thos. Curtis, was on a business trip to Trent Bridge, and when he approached the crossing at the east end of the town, was carefully keeping his eye on the yard engine, which was close by, and never noticed nor thought of the passenger train fast approaching. The horses escaped without the slightest injury, the engine striking only the back part of the wagon. Engineer Charlton, of Toronto, immediately stopped the train and gave the alarm to the other train hands who went back and found the remains, and they were taken to the undertaker's.

He leaves to mourn his loss his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Foley, two sisters and one brother, residing at home; Laura, at Tiffin; Mrs. McGregor, and Vincent, of Toronto; Mack, of Bowmanville, and Mrs. Henry, of Peterborough.

T. R. Co. The day's enquiry was one of the longest thus far held.

Escaped From Jail.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 18.—Word was received here last evening by Chief of Police Kimmins that the notorious James Williams, alias Lamont, alias George Harper, had escaped from Welland County jail, where he had been committed by Magistrate Fraser, Oct. 25, for sixty days, until his record was hunted up.

Since his commitment, warrants have been issued for his re-arrest and arrangements made for his extradition to the United States.

He made his escape out of Welland County jail by sawing the window iron bars.

WATER PRESSURE NOT THE BEST

Beal Bros. Tannery at Uxbridge Destroyed by Fire.

Uxbridge, Dec. 18.—The water supply of this town is crippled to-day by reason of the fire which totally destroyed the $75,000 tannery of Beal Bros., Ltd., early yesterday morning. The fire was discovered by the night watchman at 2.15, and although the fire department immediately responded, the water pressure was so light, owing to the fact that the main pump is out of commission while a new one is being installed, that the firemen were unable to check the advance of the flames, which spread from the main to the other buildings of the plant.

CABLE RATES TO BE CUT

Postmaster-General Samuel Predicts a Further Reduction.

London, Dec. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Postmaster-General Samuel, replying to Archer Shee in the Commons yesterday, predicted a further reduction in transatlantic cable rates. Archer Shee's question was whether the Government had responded to an invitation of the Australian Government to hold a subsidiary "Imperial" conference to discuss the possibility of a state-owned Atlantic cable. Hon. Mr. Samuel said the Government are suspending a reply until further reductions in cable rates between this country and North American, Australia and New Zealand, which have recently been under consideration have been brought into effect.

TEN YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

London, Ont., Dec. 18.—Wm. Davies, convicted of assaulting and robbing Wm. Wilkinson a month ago, was sentenced to ten years in penitentiary by Judge Macbeth yesterday.

Davies hid in a barn on Wilkinson's premises and waited until the farmer returned home with the proceeds of a week's threshing. He beat him into insensibility with a rubber hose and took $180 from him.

Children Intoxicated.

London, Ont., Dec. 18.—Blinn Bros. and William Fitsall, grocers of this city, were fined $100 and costs in the police court yesterday for selling cider twelve and six per cent. over proof respectively.

NUDE REMAINS OF AGED WOMAN ARE DISCOVERED

Badly Decomposed Body Believed to be That of a Mrs. Henderson, Who Disappeared Several Years Ago, Taken From Swamp—Chief Constable Suspects a More Recent Tragedy —Probe is Begun

Hamilton, Dec. 18.—The headless body of a woman, totally nude, was discovered lying half submerged in a swamp near Stoney Creek, five miles from here yesterday afternoon.

The body is supposed to be that of an aged woman named Henderson, who disappeared from her home on the Burlington Beach several years ago. Coroner Thompson, of Stoney Creek, who has charge of the case, is led to believe that the remains are those of the unfortunate Beach woman.

The discovery was made shortly after four o'clock by a fruit farmer named John Tweedle, who, together with his son, was out shooting rabbits. The place where the body was found is a swampy section of the Beulah Farm, owned by a man named McLeod, and commonly known as the Old Chevalier place. Tweedle and his son were following a rabbit trail when suddenly the dog they had with them stopped on the edge of the swamp and began to tug at some object lying half submerged in the water. As the dog refused to leave when whistled to, Mr. Tweedle went to investigate and was horrified to find the body. Further search by constables revealed the head some distance away.

The body was so badly decomposed that it crumbled in pieces when the men attempted to lift it, and Coroner Thompson ordered it immediately buried. Whether or not an inquest will be held is not yet known, but Coroner Thompson has notified Crown Attorney Washington of the discovery and will await instructions from him.

Chief Hazel of the Beach is also working on the case, but he doubts very much whether the body is that of Mrs. Henderson. He says that the body appears to be that of a woman much younger than Mrs. Henderson.

While there are many people ready to believe that the body is that of Mrs. Henderson, yet there are many more who believe that a recent murder has been committed.

HON. MR. WHITE'S BILL INTRODUCED IN COMMONS

Opposition May Fight the Measure on the Ground That it is Not Sufficiently Drastic to Meet the Needs—Will Increase Currency by Allowing Banks to Issue Notes Against Gold

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—The bill to revise the Bank Act introduced in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by Finance Minister White bids fair to meet with considerable opposition if not amendments. Although printed copies were not available for the members yesterday afternoon a fusilade of questions rained down upon the Minister, and it is apparent that the bill will be keenly scrutinized and thoroughly discussed in the banking and commerce committee, to which it will be referred after the Christmas holidays.

Mr. White in his bill has dealt with some big questions, but some of the members seem to think that he had [illegible] gone far enough. For example, [illegible] subject of bank mergers is dealt [illegible] too delicately to suit the views [illegible] the west as voiced by J. G. Turriff, [illegible] Liberal member for Assiniboia.

Mr Turriff insisted that an amalgamation of two banks should only be licensed by act of Parliament. To this Mr. White dissented upon the ground that for six months at a time Parliament was not in session. He admitted that the present act was faulty in so much as it was almost impossible for the Treasury Board or the Governor-in-Council to refuse to approve of the merger after the agreement had been ratified by the stockholders of both banks, and the inspectors of each bank had become thoroughly familiar with the other's business.

In his bill presented yesterday the agreement between the directors of two banks must be approved by the Finance Minister before special meetings of the stockholders are called to ratify the same and the negotiations thus given publicity.

The bill also endeavors to increase the currency of the country by allowing the banks to issue circulation against gold. At present the banks deposit nearly all their gold with the Deputy Receivers-General throughout the country, obtaining Dominion notes for the same, which are really gold certificates. The Government gets nothing out of this, but assumes responsibility for the safekeeping of the gold and bears the expense of printing the Dominion notes. The greater part of these notes consists of "bank legals," that is Dominion notes in denominations of $500, $1,000, and $5,000, which are used by the banks in settling clearances. The bill introduced yesterday permits the banks to deposit with a board of four trustees, three of whom will be named by the Bankers' Association and one by the Government.

As against the gold deposited with these trustees, the banks may issue their notes, which will also be mere gold certificates. Upon such circulation the bank will make nothing, because it could draw down the gold and use that.

Hon. Frank Oliver and Hon. Wm. Pugsley complained of the extravagant expenditure by certain banks for bank premises, but the Minister suggested that this was a matter for the discretion of the bank directors. He also turned down as "not feasible" a suggestion by Duncan Ross of Middlesex, that depositors should be secured by a redemption fund with the Government, similar to the redemption fund now maintained for the security of noteholders.

Mr. Ross argued that all the banks should be required to deposit with the Government, say 5 per cent. of their total deposits, thus creating a fund to protect the depositors should any bank become insolvent. He thought the Government could afford to pay 3 per cent. to the banks.

Under the new bill banks are allowed to lend to a farmer upon threshed grain in his possession, or to a "rancher" upon live stock.

Another amendment forbids any expenditure of money by the directors or provisional directors of an incorporated bank pending its application for a certificate to do business. Even when the certificate is granted the bank can only pay such commissions and other organization expenses as the Minister of Finance may deem reasonable.

Montreal, Dec. 18—Mrs. Jack Mumford, the star witness in the Crown's case against Carlo Battista, the Italian, under sentence of death for killing a fellow countryman, sprung a sensation at police headquarters last night, by announcing her six year old daughter had been kidnapped. St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 18.—O. Shadd, a 14-year-old colored boy, arrested on a charge of breaking into Andrew's grocery last Friday night and stealing $160, has confessed. He crept out of his bed, slipped out of the house, broke a store window, reached in his hand and turned the lock of the door. He rifled the till of everything but coppers, hid the money and returned to his bed without disturbing any members of the family. About $130 of the stolen money has been recovered.

Killed While In Fit.

TEN SHIPS ARE OVERDUE

New York, Dec. 18.—There is grave uneasiness in shipping circles for the safety of ten large freight steamers now overdue in Atlantic passages. In each case very high rates are being paid for reinsurance.

All ten of the missing vessels left port at the end of last month, and are known to have encountered violent weather. Each carries a crew of from 30 to 40 men, and the value of ships and cargoes totals nearly $3,500,000.

Among the overdue ships are the Witinham, 3,750 tons, which left Baltimore for Rotterdam on Nov. 20; the Birchtor, 3,700 tons, which passed Newport News on Nov. 25, from Galveston for Dunkirk; the Snowdon Range, 3,000 tons, which left Philadelphia on Nov. 23, for Leith, and the Barbara, 3,900 tons, which left Newport News on Nov. 28 for Naples.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Daneff, in indicating that Turkey must include Greece in the negotiations, said: "On Thursday if the reply of the Ottoman delegates is not satisfactory, we will break off negotiations and meet again at Tchatalja lines. That will be the end of Turkey in Europe."

Marjorie's little battle threw the desperado off his balance a trifle; as he recovered, Mallory struck him, and swept him on over against the back of a seat. At the same instant, Mallory's right hand went like lightning to the trigger guard, and gripped the fingers in a vise of steel, while he drove the man's elbow back against his side. Mallory's left hand meanwhile flung around his enemy's neck, and gave him a spinning fall that sent his left hand out for balance. It fell across the back of the seat, and Mallory pinioned it with elbow and knee before it could escape.

All in the same crowded moment, his left knuckles jolted the man's chin in the air, and so bewildered him that his muscles relaxed enough for Mallory's right fingers to squirm their way to the trigger, and aim the gun at the other robber, and finally to get entire control of it.

The thing had happened in such a flash that the second outlaw could hardly believe his eyes. The shriek of the astounded passengers, and the grunt of Mallory's prisoner, as he crashed backward, woke him to the need for action. He caught his other gun from its holster, and made for a double volley, but there was nothing to aim at. Mallory was crouched in the seat, and almost perfectly covered by a human shield.

Still, from force of habit and foolhardy pluck, Bill aimed at Mallory's right eyebrow, just abaft Jake's right ear, and shouted his old motto:

"Hands up! you!"

"Hands up yourself!" answered Mallory, and his victim, shuddering at the fierce look in his comrade's eyes, gasped: "For God's sake, don't shoot, Bill!"

Even then the fellow stood his ground, and debated the issue, till Mallory threw such ringing determination into one last: "Hands up, or by God, I'll fire!" that he caved in, lifted his fingers from the triggers, turned the guns up, and slowly raised both hands above his head.

A profound "Ah!" of relief soughed through the car, and Mallory, still keeping his eye on Bill, got down cautiously from the seat. The moment he released Jake's left hand, it darted to the holster where his second gun was waiting. But before he could clutch the butt of it, Mallory jabbed the muzzle of his own revolver in the man's back, and growled: "Put 'em up!" And the robber's left hand joined the right in air, while Mallory's left hand lifted the revolver.

Mallory stood for a moment, breathing hard and a little incredulous at his own swift, sweet triumph. Then he made an effort to speak as if this sort of thing were quite common with him, as if he overpowered a pair of outlaws every morning before breakfast, but his voice cracked as he said in a drawing-room tone:

"Dr. Temple, would you mind relieving that man of those guns?"

Dr. Temple was so set up by the distinction that he answered: "Not b a—"

"Walter!" Mrs. Temple checked him, before he could utter the beautiful word, and Dr. Temple looked at her almost reproachfully, as he sighed: "Golly, I should like to swear just once more."

Then he reached up and disarmed the man who had taken his wallet and his wife's keepsakes.

American children breathe in this desperado romance with their earliest traditions, and Dr. Temple felt all his boyhood zeal surge back with a boy's tremendous rapture in a deed of derring-do. And now nothing could check his swagger, as he said to Mallory:

"What shall we do with these dam-ned sinners?"

He felt like apologizing for the clerical relapse into a pulpitism, but Mallory answered briskly: "We'd better take them into the smoking room. They scare the ladies. But first, will the conductor take those bags and distribute the contents to their rightful owners?"

The conductor was proud to act as lieutenant to this lieutenant, and he quickly relieved the robbers of their loot-kits.

Mallory smiled. "Don't give anybody my things," and then he jabbed his robber with one of the revolvers, and commanded: "Forward, march!"

The little triumphal procession moved off, with Bill in the lead, followed by Dr. Temple, looking like a whole field battery, followed by Jake, followed by Mallory, followed by the porter and as many of the other passengers as could crowd into the smoking room.

The rest went after those opulent feed-bags.

CHAPTER XLI.

Clickety-Clickety-Clickety.

Marjorie, as the supposed wife of the rescuing angel, was permitted first search, and the first thing she hunted for was a certain gold bracelet that was none of hers. She found it and seized it with a prayer of thanks, and concealed it among her own things.

Mrs. Temple gave her a guilty start by speaking across a barrier:

"Mrs. Mallory, your husband is the bravest man on earth."

"Oh, I know he is," Marjorie beamed, and added with a spasm of conscience: "but he isn't my husband!"

Mrs. Temple gasped in horror, but Marjorie dragged her close, and poured out the whole story, while the other passengers recovered their properties with as much joy as if they were all new gifts found on a bush.

Meanwhile, under Mallory's guidance, the porter fastened the outlaws together back to back with the straps of their own feed-bags. The porter was rejoicing that his harvest of tips was not blighted after all.

Mallory completed his bliss, by giving him Dr. Temple's brace of guns, and establishing him as jailer, with a warning: "Now, porter, don't take your eye off 'em."

"Lordy, I won't bat an eyelid."

"If either of these lads coughs, put a hole through both of 'em."

Mallory pocketed two of the captured revolvers, lest a need might arise suddenly again. As he hurried down the aisle, he was received with cheers. The passengers gave him an ovation, but he only smiled timidly, and made haste to Marjorie's side.

She regarded him with such idolatry that he almost regretted his deed. But this mood soon passed in her excitement, and in a moment she was surreptitiously showing him the bracelet. He became an accessory after the fact, and shared her guilt, for when she groaned with a sudden droop: "She'll get it back!" he grimly answered, "Oh, no she won't!" hoisted the window, and flung the bracelet into a little pool by the side of the track, with a farewell: "Good-bye, trouble!"

As he drew his head in, a side glance showed him that up near the engine a third train-robber held the miserably weary train crew in line.

He found the conductor just about to pull the bellrope, to proceed. The conductor had forgotten all about the rest of the staff. Mallory took him aside, and told him the situation; then turned to Marjorie, said: "Excuse me a minute," and hurried forward. The conductor followed Mallory through the train into the baggage coach.

The first news the third outlaw had of the counter-revolution occurring in the sleeping car was a mysterious bullet that flicked the dust near his heel, and a sonorous shout of "Hands up!" As he whirled in amaze, he saw two revolvers aimed point blank at him from behind a trunk. He hoisted his guns without parley, and the train crew trussed him up in short order.

Mallory ran back to Marjorie, and the conductor followed more slowly, reassuring the passengers in the other cars, and making certain that the train was ready to move on its way.

Mallory went straight to Dr. Temple, with a burning demand:

"You dear old fraud, will you marry me?"

Dr. Temple laughed, and nodded. Marjorie and Mrs. Temple had been telling him the story of the prolonged elopement, and he was eager to atone for his own deception, by putting an end to their misery.

"Just wait one moment," he said and as a final proof of affection, he unbuttoned his collar and put it on backwards. Mrs. Temple brought out the discarded bib, and he donned it meekly. The transformation explained many a mystery the old man had enmeshed himself in.

Even as he made ready for the ceremony, the conductor appeared, looked him over, grinned, and reached for the bell-cord, with a cheerful: "All aboard!"

Mallory had a sort of superstitious dread, not entirely unfounded on experience, that if the train got under way again, it would run into some new obstacle to his marriage. He turned to the conductor:

"Say, old man, just hold the train till after my wedding, won't you?"

It was not much to ask in return for his services, but the conductor was tired of being second in command. He growled:

"Not a minute. We're 'way behind time."

"You might wait till I'm married," Mallory pleaded.

"Not on your life!" the conductor answered, and he pulled the bell-rope twice; in the distance, the whistle answered twice.

Mallory's temper flared again. He cried: "This train doesn't go another step till I'm married!" He reached up and pulled the bell-rope once; in the distance the whistle sounded once.

This was high treason, and the conductor advanced on him threateningly, as he seized the cord once more. "You touch that rope again, and I'll—"

"Oh, no, you won't," said Mallory, as he whisked a revolver from his right pocket and jammed it into the conductor's watch-pocket. The conductor came to attention.

Then Mallory, standing with his right hand on military duty, put out his left hand, and gave the word: "Now, parson."

He smiled still more as he heard Kathleen's voice wailing: "But I can't find my bracelet. Where's my bracelet?"

"Silence! Silence!" Dr. Temple commanded, and then: "Join hands, my children."

Marjorie shifted Snoozleums to her left arm, put her right hand into Mallory's, and Dr. Temple, standing between them, began to drone the ritual.

When the old clergyman had done his work, the young husband-at-last graciously rescinded military law, recalled the artillery from the conductor's very midst, and remembering Manila, smiled:

"You may fire when ready, conductor."

The conductor's rage had cooled, and he slapped the bridegroom on the back with one hand, as he pulled the cord with the other. The train began to creak and tug and shift. The ding-dong of the bell floated murmurously back as from a lofty steeple, and the clickety-click, click-clickety-click quickened and softened into a pleasant gossip, as the speed grew, and the way was so smooth for the wheels that they seemed to be spinning on rails of velvet.

COLONIAL HANGINGS.

Quaint Bed Drapery For Your Old Four Poster.

To many Americans there is no style of furnishing which appeals so irresistibly as the colonial, and especially is this the case in regard to bedrooms, for, while it is a question sometimes as to the advisability of furnishing a modern living room in the quaint fashion that is not always well adjusted to modern needs, the bedroom furnished in colonial style is always desirable and perfectly convenient, as well as most attractive to look upon.

The old crocheted lace canopies which were among the handiwork in which our grandmothers excelled are still packed away in the trunks of many an old house, but those with a taste for the antique in furnishing have long since disinterred some of these canopies and put them into use on their four post beds. The art of crocheting these canopies or valances is not a difficult one, and women who are not accustomed to crochet have copied the patterns with great success for use on their four posters. When these valances are used on the four posters a spread crocheted in the same manner is used, both valance and spread having a border of deep points and an edging of cotton fringe, either the ball or a straight fringe. Around the lower part of the bed, to carry out the antique style in detail, there is a box plaited flounce of white muslin, or this flounce may be gathered. Heavy white linen, such as linen sheets are made of, is also used for this flounce.

THE DRESSY BLOUSE.

White Brocade Is In the Lead This Season.

The blouses in laces, brocades and chiffons are more than tempting this year. The waists of white brocade are quite the rage, and quite rightly, for they are wonderfully good to look upon. To appear to the best advantage these brocade waists should be kept simple. They may have the low Robespierre collar or the more recent importation, the Medici collar, which is very stunning softened with frills of lace. The front of the blouse is almost hidden under the billowy frills of lace which form the pointed jabot. The sleeves are long, with the picturesque lace frills falling over the hand. Very often these blouses of white brocade are devoid of any color. Again, the suggestion of color may be introduced ever so slightly in the way of piping or in the buttons. The yellow of amber is sometimes skillfully used in this manner, with the amber buttons as the finishing touch. The blouse illustrated is a dressy affair of navy blue chiffon over old gold satin.

BLOUSE OF NAVY BLUE CHIFFON.

Tombstone Inscriptions.

Three of the commonest tombstone inscriptions are "In the midst of life we are in death," "His end was peace," "He tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." The sentiment of each is comforting and consolatory, but none comes from the Bible.

CLEANING GARBAGE CAN.

Housekeepers Should Insist Upon Attention Being Paid to Refuse.

Housekeepers who bemoan the wearing out of the garbage can, no matter how nonrustable and costly it may be, should see to it that maids keep it dry. As this cannot be done without careful disposal of garbage, insist on all the table refuse being drained and put the rest in paper.

Old newspapers kept in a box in the kitchen answer, but cooks may be encouraged to cleanliness by providing them with paper bags made especially for garbage pails of nonabsorbent paper.

Keep the garbage pail dry and you will have no odors, no noxious gases.

One housekeeper burns all the garbage she can. Close by the regular can is an old preserving kettle with a round broiler fitting about halfway down it. The garbage is set on the broiler, a few drops of coal oil put on it to burn more easily, the ashes drop into the bottom of the kettle, and a watch is kept that the refuse is not heaped too high so the flames scatter.

Tub Toys For Baby.

Quite the cutest and most practical trifle for the baby that has been thought of lately is a small, best quality bath sponge, which is at the same time a tub toy. The top is the head of an indestructible celluloid doll, joined to the sponge with a few tiny blue bows and a fulling of blue satin. It is so light that it floats in the water and so is always in reach, and of course it affords unlimited amusement to the child. Any one who has struggled to amuse a child in its tub and end the bath expeditiously will rejoice in this delightfully attractive dolly. It may be had for 75 cents.

Never put off until to-morrow the hint you can drop to-day.

Chest Inflammation

Suffered From a Heavy Cold, Pleuritic Pains in Side — Constant Coughing.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist of Middleton. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

Nerviline CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing essences and medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large bottles, 50c, trial size 25c. Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Did You Ever Consider

How much your earning ability represents? What is your income? Is it $1,200, $3,000 or $5,000 per year? How much capital at 6 per cent. interest would it require in order to equal your present income? $50,000 at 6 per cent. interest equals $3,000 per year.

Your earning capacity is your family's capital. How long would it take to accumulate a sum which, at interest, would provide sufficient income, in the event of your death, to support your home and educate your children?

You, no doubt, believe that if you do not die you will be able to create an estate. Statistics show that the majority of people die leaving nothing. Are you positively sure that you will live to create this estate?

Life is uncertain—men apparently in the best of health die suddenly. In order to make provision in the event of your death the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will, by your depositing a comparatively small amount each year for a definite number of years, pay to your wife or child, or estate, immediately upon receipt of proofs of death, a certain amount of money. This offers you the means of creating an immediate estate in the event of your death.

The two illustrations herewith will show the benefits of a policy of Life Assurance as issued by this Company.

POLICY No. 263187

The Assured's Expectation was 36 years 9 months, but he lived only 8 months.
Consider the SMALL payment to the Company and the LARGE amount the Company paid to the Beneficiary

POLICY No. 31602
ENDOWMENT 20 R. D. 20
Issued 1891. Matured 1911. Age 25. Amount $2,500. Annual Premium $110.15
Cash received at the end of 20 years - - $3,079.95
Total Payments to the Coy. 2,203.00

Which means the return to the assured of every premium paid to the Company with over 3 per cent. compound interest.

The Star of Bethlehem

THE story of the star of Bethlehem has ever been a favorite one with painters and poets and has been a subject of serious study by theologians and scientists. Many astronomers have asserted that the heavenly visitant was a comet and have even sought to identify it with some of the comets now known. Churchmen, on the other hand, have combated these attempts to ascribe a natural cause to the phenomenon and have contended that the gospel test shows the star to have been sent by a miracle to guide the wise men to the Christ Child. One of the favorite theories in the early days of the church was that a luminous angel shining like a star led the magi on their way. Another explanation was that the Holy Ghost took the form of a star, as he afterward did that of a dove at the time of the baptism of Jesus by John.

"Now, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem, in Judea, in the days of Herod, the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem,

"Saying, Where is he that is born king of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him."

Herod is troubled on hearing this and calls in his chief priests and scribes to learn where Christ should be born. They told him in Bethlehem. The account goes on:

"Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

"And he sent them into Bethlehem and said, Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

"When they had heard the king they departed, and, lo, the star which they had seen in the east went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was.

"When they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."

They did not return to Herod, however, being warned in a dream.

Another story of the Nativity that has made an equal appeal to artists is that of the shepherds. This occurs in the second chapter of Luke:

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

"And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not, for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

"And this shall be a sign unto you Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.'

Nineteen hundred years have passed and the Child has become the leader of the nations. Only three important countries are now outside of Christian rule. Of these Turkey is being dismembered, Japan is seriously considering the inclusion of a large part of Christianity in her state religion and China has gone through a revolution many of the leaders of which were Christian converts and which resulted in establishing a republic after the model of our own.

Not only is the whole earth being brought under Christian domination, but the Christian nations themselves are finding new depths of meaning in the Master's utterances, and new cults are springing into life to carry into effect some of his neglected teachings. Never in history has there been found a word so vital that important new movements for humanity were founded on it so long after its first promulgation.

Now for the first time in history is there a real and tangible hope that universal peace may come, thus fulfilling the angelic prophecy made to the shepherds.

Still the star shines across the ages, and still is heard the heavenly voice of "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

Diseases of Metals.

Metals suffer from contagious diseases analogous to those of living beings. Among these diseases one of the most striking is that called "tin pest." Sometimes a block, a plate or medal of tin attacked by this disease crumbles and falls into dust, and sometimes warty protuberances appear on the surface of the metal. Various other metals suffer from a disease that manifests itself by a spontaneous recrystallization. The most remarkable cases occur with lead and hard drawn brass. These diseases are not due, as has been thought, simply to moisture. Temperature plays a part in producing them. The most extraordinary fact perhaps is that the "tin pest" is capable of spreading by contagion.—Harper's Weekly.

BOYS WHO DID BIG THINGS.

Many of the World's Great Men Won Fame In Their Youth.

Some of the greatest achievements in the world have been made by youth, and it will always be so in human history. David, the sweet singer of Israel, was a shepherd, a poet and a general before he was twenty and a king at the age of eighteen. Raphael had practically completed his life work at the age of thirty-seven. He did no great artistic work after that age. James Watt, even as a boy, as he watched the steam coming out of the teakettle, saw in it the new world of mechanical power made possible by the old element turned and driven by a simple appliance.

Cortez was master of Mexico before he was thirty-six. Schubert died at the age of thirty-one after having composed what may perhaps be called in some ways the most entrancing melody ever written. Charlemagne was master of France and the greatest emperor of the world at the age of thirty. Shelley wrote "Queen Mab" when he was only twenty-one and was a master of poetry before he was twenty-five.

Patrick Henry was able to shape the revolutionary history of a new country before he was thirty and astonish the world by his oratory before he was twenty-six years old. At the age of twenty-four Ruskin had written "Modern Painters," and Bryant, while still a boy of high school age, had written "Thanatopsis." Robert Burns wrote some of his greatest songs while he was a plowboy.—London Answers.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Disappearing Balance.

I can never figure my bank account out.
I'm always in trouble and always in doubt.
And just when I think I have lots to go on
The bank sends a notice—"Accounts overdrawn."
I don't understand it. I fuss and I fret,
But I can't make the bank people "get me," you bet.
They point to their figures, and I must remit
Although I can't see any reason for it.
I'm sure I am right in the balance I claim,
But they make me come through when they ask, just the same,
And they smile in a way condescending and bland
When I say their system I can't understand.
For this is the puzzle my brain cells to vex—
Why doesn't my money keep pace with my checks?

OLD AGE PENSIONS

Mr. Burnham is bringing before the House of Commons again this year, the question of old age pensions for Canadian people. This is a humanitarian measure that has been dealt with in Britain, Australia, Germany, and other countries well advanced on social legislation. The provision of enough money to keep the old in their declining years, is a very worthy and charitable aim, but it may be questioned if the time is quite opportune for that at present. It can be argued that it is not at all desirable that old people unable to support themselves should have to go to Houses of Refuge or other charitable institutions. Certainly, if Canada can spare $10,000,000 a year for naval defence, it ought to be able to spare two or three millions for such pensions. But the constitution of Canada, places the relief of old people, the action of municipalities, under provincial jurisdiction, and while none of the provinces object to receiving federal money for such purposes, yet the more the Dominion aids indirect matters of this nature, the more it will have to be the milch cow of Confederation. The Scott Government is protesting now because the Borden Government proposes to aid in building highways, on the ground that aid is an invasion of provincial rights and provincial autonomy. The same might be said of other matters that have been in usage the strict business of the various provinces.

In course of time, Canada will be confronted with the problem of providing for the indigent aged. But there are few of these at present. If they are indigent, old people are not lacking in opportunity to find sustenance. Canada has not, fortunately, the hard conditions of life such as Britain and Germany face. Here, a man ought, during the courage of normal life, at least, to provide for his own old age by buying Government annuities or otherwise. Mr. Burnham deserves credit for not letting the grass grow under his feet on this question, and if he is a member of Parliament ten or twenty years from now, he may have the satisfaction of seeing some old age pension bill get government sanction.

THE NAVAL QUESTION

The Toronto Star and Globe are working overtime at the pleasant work of finding objections to the Borden naval plan. The Globe concentrates its attack upon the feature of the scheme which, as it says, is tantamount to Canada hiring a substitute to do its work. It quotes one of the English Liberal newspapers as saying that if the other Dominions were to follow Canada's example in giving three Super-Dreadnoughts, to be maintained for by Britain, they could easily kill her with kindness. But there are really no solid and substantial reasons for the criticisms that are so widely put forth. The three Dreadnoughts are to be contributed by Canada as a free-will offering to strengthen the British navy at a time when it needs such an addition. Mr. Borden will evolve a permanent naval policy that may include the construction and maintenance of a local unit, or local units, and that before the general election. Then when the people come to vote on the question, they will find the condition of affairs very much different to that which they confront now.

The desire of Canada is to do what will most effectively aid Britain in Imperial naval defence. There are two ways Canada may proceed. One is to strengthen the British navy the other is to build up a Canadian navy. The Laurier idea is still the Canadian navy, under the control of the Canadian Government, to be used as was the Niobe for exhibition purposes at political picnics. The Laurier idea is to have a navy that in the event of a separatist agitation, or another reciprocity pact, to make of this country an adjunct of the United States, Canada will still have its powers of offense and defence detached from those of the British Empire in general. The Borden idea is to strengthen the naval defences of the Empire thereby also strengthening the defences of Canada. He is doing this on the condition that Canada have some part in the counsels of the Empire which make for war or peace. It is pointed out that the single Canadian representative on the Imperial Committee of Defence, an advisory body, cannot exert any real voice. The committee is not executive, it is composed of half a dozen British Cabinet ministers and half a dozen naval and military experts. A Canadian representative thereon would be very much of a figurehead. This is true, to some extent. But it means that the day long ago perceived by Gladstone to be coming is now fast dawning, when Britain must be prepared to admit her principal Dominions to a fuller partnership in the conduct of Imperial affairs. If the Dominions are big enough to give her aid in defending the Empire generally, they are big enough to be considered in matters such as the arrangement of those defences.

This problem involves the immense and intricate question of Imperial federation. Already the Liberal party in Canada, and some of the British Radicals, have taken alarm at the prospect, the Canadian Liberals at the thought of Canada losing some of her powers and privileges of self-government; the English Liberals at the diminution of British control over foreign policy by the granting of a large scope of influence to the Dominions. But the voice of Joseph Chamberlain still urges on this great question of Imperial unity. The British Empire has grown up separately, in pieces and patches all over the world. The chief dominions have long enjoyed perfect independence in all save name. They do not intend to yield that, for the old principle of taxation without representation still holds good. That is what Mr. Borden means when he says that Canada will give three Dreadnoughts, of $35,000,000, to Britain, but he wants a Cabinet minister to stay in London as the agent of the Canadian Cabinet. His proposal practically is an invitation for the formation of an Imperial Council of really effective scope for defence and other matters—a council wherein South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Canada will have prominent parts.

The Laurier policy is one that would shrink the Empire into its former status of isolated units, without any real aim in common, without any effort to treat each other as British brethren, but more like aliens to whom we own only the coldest and most matter-of-fact justice. The issue that lies behind this naval concention is far larger, far greater than the mere question of how the $35,000,000 shall be spent in navy building. Behind the question lies the great and perplexing question of how the Empire may be knitted together, rather than it shall be further disintegrated by the separatist navy policy.

BETTER PARCEL RATES

According to the report of the Postmaster-General for the year ending March 31st, 1912, 8,385,000 parcels containing various kinds of merchandise were posted in Canada, the rate being one cent an ounce, or 16 cents a pound. No one will pretend that the charge is a reasonable one for the service provided. It will be remembered that when the rate for letters was reduced from three cents to two cents there was an immediate and startling increase of business. In like manner the two cent rate between Canada and Great Britain, which seemed ridiculously low was no sooner adopted than the business increased in so marked a degree that the Post Office profited considerably.

It is reasonably certain that a reduction in parcel post rates would be a profitable undertaking, so far as the Department is concerned. It would draw business from a hundred directions. The number of letters posted last year reached the astounding total of 566,140,000. Does any one pretend that a parcel post is doing an adequate business when only one parcel is mailed to every seventy letters!

The Postmaster-General notes in his report that during the past year the parcel rate from Canada to Newfoundland was reduced from fifteen cents to twelve cents a pound, while that from Canada to New Zealand dropped from twenty-four cents to twelve cents a pound. One can send five pounds of merchandise from Toronto to Auckland for 60 cents; from Toronto to Whitby the cost is eighty cents.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Ottawa Citizen:—A post office surplus of over $1,300,000 is a substantial argument in proof of the efficiency of the administration. Moreover, it represents the dividends of profit which under private ownership would have gone into the pockets of the few.

Ottawa Citizen:—News comes from Bermuda that Woodrow Wilson has announced his selection of William J. Bryan as secretary of state. At last comes the chance to the indefatigable diplomat of Lincoln, Neb., to justify the claims of his friends.

Hamilton Herald:—The importance of the electric services of this city—how almost the whole population relies upon electric current in some form—can be realized only when the current is cut off and the services cease.

SPEED OF SOUND.

An Easy Method of Judging the Distance it Travels.

There is an old saying that if you can count five between the flash and the thunder you are safe. Modern science tells us that if you can see the flash at all you are safe, because if it struck you you would have no time to see it. The speed of lightning is about 180 times that of sight.

The old idea was that if you could count five the storm was a mile away, which was considered a safe distance. Sound travels at the rate of 1,142 feet a second, or about a mile in five seconds. In order to count seconds accurately many photographers start by saying to themselves: "No one thousand, one one thousand, two one thousand, three one thousand," etc. This gives about the right space between each count of one, two, three, etc., if you stop at the number of seconds you want to time. With a little practice with a watch beside you this is accurate up to half a minute or more.

If you see a steam whistle blowing and note the instant it stops you can count the seconds until you lose the sound, and by allowing a fifth of a mile for each second you can judge the distance. The same is true of guns, or an explosion, or even of hammering or any loud sounds.—New York Press.

MARRIAGE BY PROXY.

This Curious Ceremony Is a Purely Dutch Institution.

Some time ago a Boer in Pretoria was married to a girl in Amsterdam, in Holland, the ceremony constituting what the Dutch call handschoen, or glove marriage.

In spite of the fact that a distance of 6,000 miles lay between the bride in the Netherlands and the bridegroom in the Transvaal they were just as effectually married under the Dutch law as if both had been present in the same church.

The bridegroom sent to his friend, or best man, in Amsterdam a power of attorney to represent him as his proxy at the ceremony and at the same time forwarded his glove, which at the proper moment, when the two were made one, was held by both the bride and the proxy.

The wedding was duly registered at Amsterdam and at Pretoria, where the bridegroom filed an affidavit with the landdrost, or magistrate.

This curious form of marriage is a purely Dutch institution, the custom having originated, it is said, in the old times of Dutch-Batavian rule. It is, however, a dead letter in the Transvaal since the English took over that colony.—New York Press.

GREAT BRITAIN MUST NOT BEAR ALL THE EXPENSE OF PROTECTNG COLONIES

Time Has Come When Canada Should be Proud to Assist in Helping Maintain the Strength, Unity and Integrity of the Empire—N. W. Rowell Speaks to the Canadian Club.

Before the largest Canadian Club gathering of the season, Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Ontario Opposition, delivered an address last evening in the Y.M.C.A. Assembly Hall, on the subject "Our Imperial Relations." Over one hundred were present and the distinguished politician's treatment of the subject was all that could be desired. He discussed Imperial Relationship on broad comprehensive lines and eliminated entirely any statements or arguments of a controversial character.

Mr. Rowell is a pleasing and polished speaker and he always had his subject well in hand. He displayed remarkable familiarity with the question in all of its phases and discussed it on the most non partisan lines.

In prefacing his address he referred briefly to the valuable place that Canadian Clubs are beginning to occupy throughout the length and breadth of Canada. He also liked the name Canadian Club, typifying as it did the fact that their principle mission was the exploitation of Canadianism, and the emphasizing of Canadian nationality.

The learned speaker in commencing his address said that a view of the subject Imperial Relationship largely depended on the relationship of Canada and the other colonies to the Mother Country. This country and the other British possessions might almost be termed free nations within the Empire.

To illustrate his meaning he quoted Sir Frederick Folucks description of the Empire as it exists to-day.

To bring about this there must necessarily be some great unifying agency at work and it was found in the Imperial Conference. Another thing stronger than any other force was the general acknowledgment of the superiority and dominion of the King. A question that naturally arose, however, was what shall our future relations be? If a new governing body was to be created to act as a unifying force there must be unifying forces at work.

All the nations of the Empire must stand upon some sort of equality. The new body must be one that is developed to meet the actual needs of the Empire as it expands and increases in strength.

Just so long as Canada and the other colonies work together just so long will there be a system of co-operation best suited to the needs of the Empire as a whole.

Mr. Rowell went on to deal with the operations of the Imperial Conference. He thought many of us were too engrossed with the individual needs of some particular municipality to the neglect of the country as a whole. He considered that the Imperial Conference was doing more to create unity and equality than any other instrument. In the matter of land and naval defence it has been found to be an effective organization.

In trade matters it was performing good work by investigating trade conditions and in all portions of the Empire it represented the development of Imperial trade.

It has been effective in promoting improved transportation and the All Red Route was one of its accomplishments. Last year an important step had been taken in providing for a truly Imperial citizenship. By the latter innovation when it takes effect in the British Parliament, a resident of any part of the Empire for five years becomes a citizen of the whole Empire.

Mr. Rowell spoke of the work of the Imperial Defence Committee. The aim of the latter is that in case of war the various departments of the British Empire concerned might get together in order to secure unity of action. It also facilitates discussion and agreement in relation to defence matters.

In concluding Mr. Rowell said:

"One thing we are all agreed upon and that is, that in the working out of our defence problems Canada's highest end will be reached through her association with the Mother Country and the fact of her being under the sovereignty of the King. Whatever the past has been, and whatever the development of feeling may be, the time has come when we all admit that we should no longer allow Great Britain to bear all the expense of protecting the Colonies. The time has come when a country so rich, so prosperous and so ambitious as Canada should be proud to assist in helping to maintain the strength, unity and integrity of the Empire, and preserving for the present, and for the generations to come the highest ideals which this world has yet seen and which it so greatly needs."

The applause that rewarded the conclusion of Mr. Rowell's address was loud and prolonged.

Mr. Morris, president of the Club, conveyed to him the gratitude of the gathering for his instructive and scholarly address. In reply Mr. Rowell said that he would feel amply repaid if his words would help to stimulate thought and a pride in the Empire to which we have the honor to belong.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

INTERESTING REPORT OF COW TESTING ASSOCIATIONS

The October report of the Dairy Record Centres of Canada has just been received, and some of the figures it contains will no doubt be interesting to the members.

The average lbs. of milk per cow for Ontario is 582, and the average lbs. of fat 21.6. The average production for the Peterborough Centre is 607 lbs. milk and 22.5 lbs. fat. The Central Smith Association again takes the lead with 778 lbs. milk and 26 lbs. fat. The Norwood Association comes second with 686 lbs milk and 25.2 lbs. fat.

It can be seen by this report that the cows milked fairly well, which is no doubt due to the attention given by the owners, who are showing a great deal of interest in the Cow Testing work, which means a great deal of interest in their cows. For further proof of this interest it is but necessary to look up the reports, where it is shown that practically all the members are still testing, as they are anxious to secure records for the entire milking period, which is a very important point.

A number of the members are considering the advisability of securing one or two pure bred cows, and it is likely that a number of valuable animals will be brought into this Centre during the next six months.

NEWTON LOFT AN INDIAN WITHIN MEANING OF ACT?

Hotelkeeper is Charged With Supplying Him With Liquor—Loft Met With Accident, Losing His Foot—Mr. Haverson Raises Interesting Point and Judgment is Reserved

In police court this morning, Sam Long, proprietor of the American House, was charged with selling liquor to Newton Loft, the Indian, who recently lost a foot at the Grand Trunk crossing on Hunter street. He was intoxicated at the time. Mr. Long, through his counsel J. H. Haverson, K.C., of Toronto, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Loft was the first man placed in the witness box. The latter, until three years ago, received bounty money, as a Mohawk Indian, at the Bay of Quinte.

Mr. Haverson thought it was a debatable point whether Loft was really an Indian within the meaning of the act. Letters produced in court, showed the reason of the cessation of Loft's bounty money to be caused by his own default. Mr. Haverson said that Loft was living a life practically detached from the Indian mode of life now.

Sam Long was placed in the box by his counsel and asked about the circumstances of the case. He remembered seeing Loft in his hotel once, but he never served him with liquor. He would not swear that Loft had only been in the hotel once. When witness saw him he was not intoxicated.

In answer to a question from Mr. Haverson, witness said he would have had no hesitancy in serving Loft had he been sober, the same as he would have served any other customer.

Mr. Haverson requested permission to submit a written argument referring to judgments in previous cases much similar to the one in question. Judgment was reserved therefore by Magistrate Dumble until Mr. Haverson produces records of cases of like nature, which will likely be within a few days.

J. LeBar, bar-tender at the American Hotel would not admit ever having served.

The prosecution was conducted by Crown Attorney Wood.

LAD GOES TO FARM

Hughie Patterson, the youthful vagrant was again asked to tell something about his life. He told the court that if liberated he would go to Ennismore and work with a farmer there.

Magistrate Dumble discharged him although warning him that he might not get as good a dinner where he was going as he would at the goal.

Hit Over Head With Axe.

Sarnia, Ont., Dec. 17.—With a deep wound in his skull, inflicted with an axe, James Smith, a Lambton County farmer, of Euphemia Township, lies in a critical condition at his home. The injured man alleges that the blow was struck by another farmer, whose home is near the Smith house. Crown Attorney Bucke of Sarnia has ordered an investigation. The county police of Lambton and Kent Counties have received instructions to arrest Hopper if he can be located. Many think that he has reached the border and crossed the St. Clair river into the United States.

According to Smith, the assault was committed several days ago in front of his home. He had been called out to help repair a broken traction engine and got into a quarrel with his assailant's father. He says the son hit him with an axe he had for cutting wood.

Chinese Smuggled Into Australia.

Sydney, N.S.W., Dec. 18.—Officials of the department of external affairs have received reports of sensational discoveries from representatives in Hong Kong that a secret society has existed there for years for the purpose of smuggling Chinese into Australia. It is learned that following seizures made in a club in Hong Kong, members of the society were scattered over the interior of the Empire. The scheme is said to have been worked out by the duplication of naturalization papers.

HELPING THE INSANE.

France Has a Big Park In Which the Unfortunates Are Treated.

Nearly a hundred years ago two distinguished specialists in insanity, Drs. Voisin and Falret, purchased an estate of over sixty acres in the environs of Paris and transformed it into a park which they planted well with trees and shrubs. A pretty stream courses through it. In this they built numerous tiny villas or bungalows, each with its own little garden, surrounded by high green hedges, each garden opening by its own gateway into the larger park. Now after the lapse of a hundred years it realizes their dream of what should be done for the insane.

The Maison de Falret, as it is called, at Vanves, in the suburbs of Paris, consists of a large park full of magnificent trees and shrubbery, divided into halves by a farmstead group of buildings, thus making practically two parks, one for each sex, and there are twenty-seven such bungalows for the isolation of one or more patients. Paris has grown up around it, but wandering in this estate one can scarcely conceive a vast city to be so near.

A patient brought here is not only isolated from his friends, which is usually a distinct advantage, but he is isolated from the insane, which is an even greater gain. There are perhaps a hundred patients here.

We have in this plan all the essentials for the cure of the insane, adequate nursing, segregation from the other insane, the return to nature, the simple life, a practical out of door life for night and day, beautiful surroundings, association only with normal persons and plenty of space for walks, for working in gardens and fields and at various arts and crafts. The dream of the Falret is here realized, and it is the best that our western civilization has yet attained in the matter of care and treatment of the insane.—Frederick Peterson in Survey.

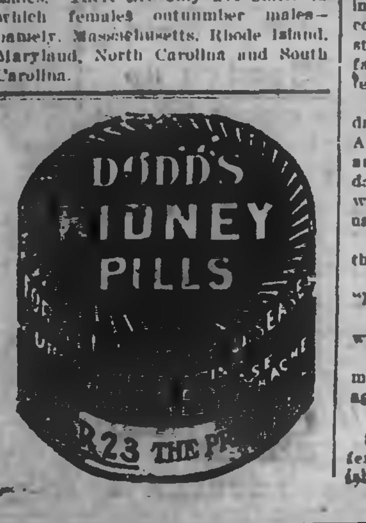
CHEER UP, SPINSTERS.

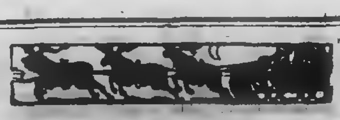
There Are 106 Males to Every 100 Females In This Country.

The population of the United States (exclusive of Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and other noncontiguous possessions) comprised in 1910, according to the last Federal census, 47,332,277 males and 44,639,989 females, or 106 males to every 100 females. In 1900 there were 104.4 males to every 100 females. These figures are contained in a statement issued by Director Durand of the bureau of the census, department of commerce and labor, and are based upon a tabulation prepared under the direction of William C. Hunt, chief statistician for population in the census bureau. The figures are preliminary and subject to revision.

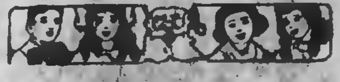
The excess of males in the United States is mainly due to the extensive immigration, a much larger proportion of the immigrants being males than females. In the foreign born white population there are 129.2 males to 100 females. But the native white population also has a slight excess of males, the ratio being 102.7 to 100.

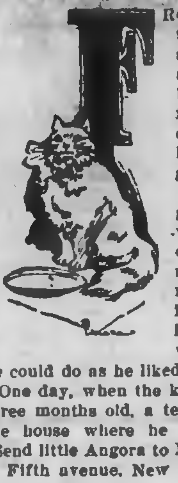
The preponderance of males in the aggregate population of the United States is most marked in the Pacific and mountain divisions (far western states), with ratios in 1910 of respectively, 129.5 and 127.9 males to 100 females. The proportion of males is lowest in New England, this being the only geographic division in which there is a slight excess of females over males. There are only five states in which females outnumber males—namely, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina.





PUSSY AND THE CHRISTMAS TURKEY





FROM the moment the kitten knew anything he was aware he was a beauty. His father and mother were lovely, long haired Angoras.

Although so good looking, he was a very spoiled and ill mannered kitten. His mother had foolishly said in his hearing that with his looks he could do as he liked.

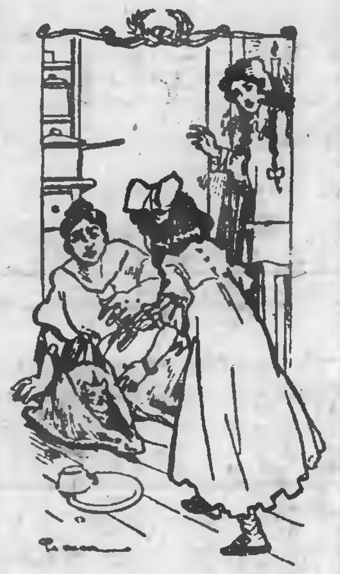
One day, when the kitten was about three months old, a telegram came to the house where he lived. It said, "Send little Angora to Miss Nellie Dale, — Fifth avenue, New York."

The butler came in with a box, put the unsuspecting kitten in and nailed down the lid.

What followed is too confusing to tell. There was much rattling over rough streets, much jolting over tracks, much shrieking of engines, much bumping against boxes. At last it was over. The box was carried into a warm, softly lighted room. A child's voice was heard exclaiming: "For me! Why, I wonder what it can be." A tiny mew soon told her, and in a few minutes the kitten was out of its prison and tightly snuggled in the arms of a little girl. A saucer of milk was soon lapped up, and pussy's life in his new home began.

Nellie named her new pet Blizzard because he was white and soft like drifted snow.

Blizzard thought this name all right, but did not for an instant mean to answer to it. He had never learned to mind or do anything else but be a trouble. He stole everything he could get. He broke an expensive vase because he would play tag with himself on the parlor mantel. He climbed up the handsome new curtains at the hall windows with the result that they soon looked like streamers. He cried all the time people were eating, wanting meat and other things not good for kittens.



A SMOTHERED MEW SOUNDED FROM THE INSIDE.

'Twas the night before Christmas, and the servants were busy preparing for the big dinner tomorrow.

All the relatives were invited, and Dinah, the cook, knew that the only way to have her dinner on time was to get things ready for it the day before.

She had just got the big turkey out and picked it clean of pinfeathers. She put it in the pantry while she grated bread with which to stuff it.

Company came in, and Dinah did not get her turkey filled as she had hoped. She went to bed, setting her alarm for 5 o'clock, expecting to stuff the turkey before breakfast. When bedtime came no Blizzard was to be found.

The household was awakened at 5 in the morning by a scream from Dinah, which brought the family to the kitchen all armed and expecting to see a burglar. They found Dinah in a faint on the floor of the pantry, and beside her was the big turkey. On looking closer and hearing Dinah faintly whisper, "The cat," all eyes turned to look for the cat. No one could locate him until a smothered mew sounded from the inside of the turkey. Nellie peeked in and saw Blizzard's head sticking out where the stuffing is usually poked in. He was hauled out. His white coat was sticky and dirty, and his stomach stuck out like a wolf's in the fairy tale after he had dined off the ten little pigs.

Dinah locked Blizzard in the laundry until he should thoroughly repent. Another turkey had to be prepared, and Blizzard was forgotten until the day after Christmas. When Nellie went to take him out of his prison Dinah went with her.

"Will you ever do such a naughty thing again, Blizzard?" she asked him.

Blizzard looked right at her and said "Mew."

"See," said Ellen; "he says he never will, Dinah."

Dinah answered. "I guess that mew means he will never do such a thing again—this Christmas."

Counting the Cost.

O maiden, you are fair to see!
O maiden, will you be my bride?
Say that you'll run away with me
And be forever by my side,
For I will shield you from all harm,
Be your defense when tempest tossed.
Your shield shall be my strong right arm—
Er—say—what did that outfit cost?

That hat is a bewitching thing.
It matches your sweet eyes so blue.
I like that droopy sort of wing.
That ribbon bow's a daisy too.
You look just like a poster girl
Beneath that stunning kind of hat!
That's a swell buckle. Is it pearl?
What did your father pay for that?

That hobble skirt is quite all right.
It surely does appeal to me!
Perhaps it is a trifle tight.
Oh, what a comfort you will be
To me through all life's winding ways!
Your love makes glad this moldy earth.
Your laugh will brighten gloomy days—
Say, what is such a hobble worth?

So you'll elope, my pearl of pearls!
You're sure the step you'll ne'er regret!
Of course you are the best of girls.
Of course, sweetheart, I love you yet.
But still—ahem!—I'd better state
I'm not eloping, thanks, today.
I am convinced we ought to wait
Until the boss shall raise my pay!

Capacious Commandments.

"A little girl at our church," said a Cleveland minister, "knelt beside her mother while the commandments were being read. When the rector read, 'On these two commandments hang all of the law and the prophets,' the little girl whispered:

"'Mamma, how many'—

"'Sh!' hissed her mamma.

"'But, mamma, how many prophets are there?'

"'Why, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Habbakuk, Jonah, Haggai, Malachi, Zephaniah, dearie. I can't think of all of them without looking them up, but I fancy there must have been about twenty.'

"'Twenty? And they hanged 'em all on two commandments?'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Women Students In Germany.

Nowhere in the world have the universities a more masculine outward aspect than in Germany, and yet, if we may judge by recent statistics, feminism is surely gaining ground even in these strongholds. It is now only four years since women were by law allowed to study at German universities. Now they represent 5 per cent of the incorporated students. Berlin counts 845 (by far the largest number); Bonn, 255; Goettingen, 221; Munich, 188; Heidelberg, 165; Freiburg, 149; Breslau, 134, and Leipzig 103. To this total it is necessary to add nearly 1,800 unattached students, making the grand total of women students in Germany 4,500.—Westminster Gazette.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

owe their singular effectiveness in curing Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica to their power of stimulating and strengthening the kidneys. They enable these organs to thoroughly filter from the blood the uric acid (the product of waste matter) which gets into the joints and muscles and causes these painful diseases. Over half a century of constant use has proved conclusively that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills strengthen weak kidneys and 41

THE SPORTING WORLD

PETES' MANAGER AS O. H. A. REFEREE

A new face that will be seen in the hockey game this winter is that of Davy Rowan, the leader of the Peterborough Canadian League Club. Davy has been working out the Toronto professional hockeyists, getting into shape for the big season, not as a player, but a referee. Toronto is Davy's home and he will be ready for the gong when the season opens in the O. H. A. He should be an efficient official of the great winter game. It is hoped he will be, since there are mighty few real referees in the business who can be called efficient. One thing that the great winter game has been lacking in is the providing of officials to handle the game with any sort of rigid methods.

J. IRA SLATS DAVIS MAY RETURN TO DUTY IN THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Peterborough fans will welcome the news that Umpire J. Ira (Slats) Davis may be back in the Canadian League handling an indicator next season. At the meeting in Toronto on Friday, President Fitzgerald stated that he had received a letter from J. Ira and that gentleman had promised to behave were he permitted to come back to his old job. President Fitzgerald asked the opinion of some of the onwers, and two or three of them stated that he had always given good satisfaction and was well liked by the fans. It is more than likely that a chance will be given J. Ira next season to make good.

"SLATS" A GOOD ONE

"Slats" was one of the best umpires the Canadian League ever had and undoubtedly the funniest. Reports from other towns along the circuit were that Davis went too far occasionally in his witty remarks to the spectators. This was never the case in this city. Many a Peterboro fan went to Riverside Park last summer for the main desire of seeing Davis umpire. When he was in charge there were no delays, and he kept the players moving all the time. He was an inveterate joker, but his humor at Riverside Park was always of the bright and original kind and the fans liked it. Many a dull game was made interesting when J. Hird was umpiring. He got off many a good joke at the expense of the players and they took kindly to it. He also had the respect of the players, and they knew that they could just go so far with him.

HANGER WITH THE THREE SCHEDULES

Can be had by Calling at Review Office

A hanger bearing the three O. H. A. schedules of games for this district can be had by calling at the Review office. By the use of this hanger hockey fans can keep tab on the movements of the three local teams, and also record the score of each game, for future reference.

SPORT GOSSIP

Fred Doherty is scouting in Ontario for the Moncton team, which last year won the championship and provided the comedy end of a burlesque effort for the Stanley Cup. So far, Doherty has signed up Cross, a goal-tender, and Foyson, an O. H. A. player who has had a try-out with the Toronto pros., but didn't quite make it. Sydney has been s ek- Tetreau, who is with the Wanderers this year.

A Montreal exchange says:—There was a fair number of fans at the rink to see Walter Miller and Wilson work for the first time this season. These players reported on Saturday morning and broke into the game in the afternoon. Miller is a likely forward. He was put in to check Odie Cleghorn, one of the best men in the game, and showed himself to be fit for fast company. He has plenty of weight and is fast on his skates.

No doubt a bad man is bad and a good man good. The trouble is you never can be sure which is which.

She Knew.

An old bon vivant who kept a fine establishment received a visit from his maiden aunt. He took great pride in showing her over the place and pointing out its many treasures. As a special favor he let her have a glimpse of his famous wine cellar.

"You're the first woman who has ever set foot in here," he said.

"Gracious! I should say I was," she replied. "Why, the place is full of cobwebs."—Lippincott's.

Unduly Suspicious.

"Gwendolen, have you been out driving with a young man?"

"Yes, auntie."

"H'mph!"

"But he had only one arm that he could use, auntie; he had been vaccinated on the other one."

(Pause.)

Guess She's Right.

"The idea of coming to the dinner table with bare arms!" said the father. "You never knew your mother to do such a thing, did you?"

"Why, yes, father," said the girl. "Mother Eve always ate that way."—Yonkers Statesman.

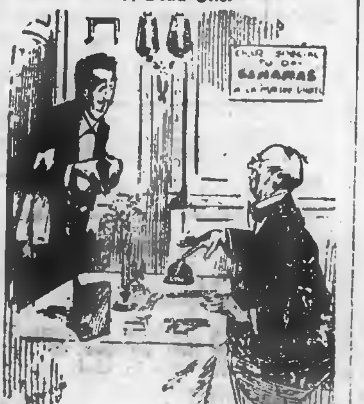
Astounding.

"You will be the victim of a fatal accident."

"Good gracious!"

"Calm yourself. It won't happen until the end of your life."—Pele Mele.

A Dead One.



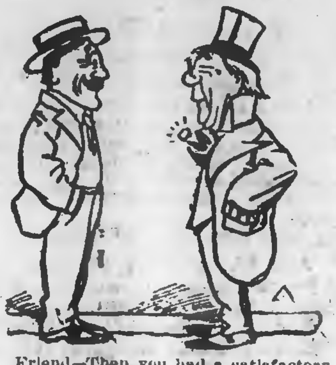
Laggard Walter—Did you ring the bell, sir?

Impatient Diner—No; I was merely tolling it. I thought you must be dead.
—Penny Pictorial.

THE COMMUTER'S REVERIE.

Whew, that was a run, but I caught it!
More luck! Here's a seat for me too!
Blamed train was on time. Never thought it
Could ever arrive when it's due.
Reminds me I should have seen Keyser
This morning and paid him the rent.
I hate to be owing that miser
The twentieth part of a cent.
Still, one can't remember—by thunder,
I haven't a paper to read!
Did I leave it at home, now, I wonder?
Pshaw! Very annoying indeed
To have this small pleasure denied me!
Good heavens, how pokey it is!
This man's got a paper beside me.
I'll just take a peep over his.
That Roosevelt cartoon's pretty rotten.
I don't think he smiles in that way.
Reminds me I'd almost forgotten
My teeth must be treated today.
Hello! What's this news about Skinner?
Dropped dead at his dinner last night!
Well, well, there's an end to a sinner
Who didn't treat any one right!
And so the old fellow's departed!
Oh, well, let's say "Peace to his soul"—
Jove, our furnace will have to be started
Next week! I must order some coal.
I'm glad I remembered that matter,
For winter is getting here fast—
Well, well, what's that racket and clatter?
Ah, reaching the city at last!

Satisfactory.



Friend—Then you had a satisfactory season?

Theatrical Manager—Very. Two of our most antagonistic critics died.—Philadelphia News.

The Innocent Cut Off.

Unregenerate Employer — Do you smoke?

Applicant for Clerkship—No, sir.

Unregenerate Employer—Drink?

Applicant for Clerkship—No, sir.

Unregenerate Employer—Frequent—ah—places of entertainment?

Applicant for Clerkship—No, sir.

Unregenerate Employer—Admirable, admirable, but it would be criminal to subject such a moral tone as yours to association with one of my low type. Good day.—Public Opinion.

He Was Precise.

"The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," is the motto of police witnesses at Ystrad.

"Did you see him coming through the door?" asked a solicitor in court.

"No, sir; through the doorway," answered the police precision in the box.—London Globe.

NEW OFFICERS FOR THE ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY

Mr. T. A. S. Hay is President —Lecture on Meteorites by Mr. H. B. Collier.

The Royal Astronomical Society, Peterborough Centre, held their annual meeting in the Laboratory room of the Collegiate last night, and officers were elected for the coming year.

President—T. A. S. Hay, C.E.

Vice-President—Thomas C. Elliott.

Secretary-Treasurer—Rev. Dr. D. B. Marsh.

Members of the Council—Duncan Walker, M.A.; W. A. Logan, C.E.; A. J. Seager, Henry Carveth, H. G. Keys, B.A.; A. J. Johnston, B. E. Eason.

Mr. H. O. Fiske is also a member of the council, ex official auditor and curator.

Librarian—Harold Crane.

The Society has had a very good year and prospects are bright for a better one, as a dozen new members have been enrolled.

Mr. H. B. Collier, of Toronto, a former president, gave a very interesting lecture on meteorites. Meteorites can be traced back as having fallen centuries ago, but it is only a little over a century that scientists were convinced that they fell from the air. Early historians tell us of the stones falling in the ages, and they were then regarded as sacred. Mr. Collier then explained the theory of meteorites and their composition. He showed a meteor that fell at Mezapil, Mexico, in 1887. It was composed of iron 83 per cent, phosphide of iron 10 per cent, nickel 4 per cent, phosphorous 2 per cent.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN RESIDENT

William Vanevery Had Been Ailing Since July

William VanEvery, an old and well known resident of this city, died this morning, aged 72 years. He had been ailing since July and was unconscious since last Saturday. Earlier in life he was in partnership with Mr. Robert Fair. At one time he was in business at Port Hope, and for many years he conducted a grocery store at the corner of Rubidge and Dalhousie streets. He was a member of All Saint's Anglican church and in politics he was a staunch Conservative. His widow, five sons and one daughter survive.

The funeral takes place to-morrow afternoon from the late residence, 208 Rubidge street, to the Little Lake Cemetery, and will be private.

A BEAUTIFUL CALENDAR

"In Meditation Sweet" a picture from the original pastrel drawing by Frank H. Desch may be admired on a beautiful Christmas calendar at the office of Dr. Browett, Optometrist, George street. Everyone should seize the opportunity of viewing this famous artist's latest graceful and charming feminine creation. It reveals a luxury of tone, a beauty of modelling and an exquisite coloring of face and hair. The pose is natural and unconscious, and the drawing contains distinguishing lines of refinement and good breeding.

The creator of "In Meditation Sweet" could not have adopted a more appropriate name for his creation. He is the author of the popular "Lady Caprice."

Anyone desiring to secure the calendar may do so on payment of $1 or he may have one free, with every $5 purchase at Dr. Browett's.

THEATRICAL

FRITZI SCHEFF

Fritzie Scheff, the noted light opera singer appeared last night at the Grand in the comic opera "The Love Wager." The music was not up to the standard of operas with so noted a star, although it was pretty and beautifully sung by Miss Scheff and ther company.

Miss Scheff, as the naughty Mitzi acted with plenty of life and displayed a wonderful voice. All her songs were vigorously encored.

The scene of the play is in Hungary and it savored somewhat of "The Chocolate Soldier," with soldiers, etc.

In the last act, a strenuous folk dance was given at the wedding feast, by Les Mascagni, and was heartily received by the audience. The "Four Leaf Clover" was the song hit.

TURKEY CAN NOW GO AHEAD WITH THE NEGOTIATIONS

Russian Premier's Speech in the Douma is a Reassuring Factor and it is Reported From Belgrade That Provocation of Austria Servian Papers Has Been Very Rigidly Prohibited.

OUTLOOK IS NOW PROMISING

London, Dec. 19.—The nature of the decision which the Turkish Government arrived at yesterday is not known, but it is believed to be such as to enable the peace conference to resume its deliberations.

Considering that under the terms of the armistice Turkey is debarred from revictualing her besieged fortresses, she has little to gain by undue delay. The growing strength of the military party in Constantinople may, however, have an unexpected influence on the development of the situation.

The Russian Premier's speech in the Douma, which was awaited with much interest, is regarded as a peaceful factor, but at the same time it is a plain indication to the world that Russia stands firmly behind the Balkan states in support of their securing all the legitimate fruits of their victory, and therefore may be regarded somewhat in the light of a warning to Austria.

Servia, meanwhile, is doing its best to avoid needless provoking Austria. Premier Patchitch, according to a Belgrade despatch, has written to the editors of the leading newspapers urging them in the interests of peace, to refrain from publishing articles provocative to Austria, and two Belgrade papers have been seized for attacking Austria.

In accordance with the request of the delegates to the peace conference, Sir Edward Grey has appointed Herman Cameron Norman, first secretary of the British diplomatic service to take charge of the secretarial of the conference.

Russia For Peace.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 19.—A desire for the preservation of European peace, combined with the determination to defend with the nation's whole strength Russia's vital interests, was the keynote of a speech on Balkan affairs made by Premier Kokovsoff in the Duma yesterday.

The Russian Premier paid a tribute to the warlike virtues and the unanimity of the Balkan peoples. He said that as the great Slavonic and orthodox power, Russia could not be indifferent as to "whether they obtain better conditions of existence and thus avert dangerous complications in the future." He continued:

"The Russian Government is glad it has not to change its calm attitude. There is no ground for suspecting Russia of selfish designs or of a desire to aggravate conflicts. The fundamental principles which will guide the Russian Government when the hour for final decisions has sounded are indicated by our past.

"Faithful to her alliance with France, and to her friendly relations with other great powers and sure of the latter's support, she sees no use in setting up one group of powers against another.

"The Russian Government hopes that the united efforts by which the powers are inspired will help them to arrive at an agreement which will reconcile their interests with the just demands of the Balkan States."

Toronto's Civic Cars.

Toronto, Dec. 19.—The City of Toronto went into the street railway business yesterday, when Mayor Hocken started the first civic car on its journey over the Gerrard street section of the city's own tracks, at three o'clock.

The Mayor, Board of Control, aldermen, ex-mayors, civic officials and representatives of various bodies interested in municipal enterprises and beautification, occupied the first car, which left Greenwood avenue a 3.03, reaching the Main street terminus just 12 minutes later.

TWO TRAINMEN WERE KILLED

Rear-End Collision Between Freights—Wreck at Ivanhoe.

Toronto, Dec. 19.—Two trainmen were instantly killed and two others seriously injured yesterday, as a result of two of the worst freight wrecks that have occurred this year on the Ontario division of the Canadian Pacific Railway. A freight train on the Toronto-Sudbury line crashed through the bridge at Byng Inlet at 10 a.m. yesterday and Brakeman Eugene Pacaud of North Bay was killed, and Conductor McLean and Engineer Thomas of Muskoka, were seriously injured. A heavily loaded freight train overran a switch near Ivanhoe at 6 a.m. yesterday and collided with a westbound freight. In the collision Fireman M. Richards of Havelock, Ont., lost his life.

At Byng Inlet the heavy freight locomotive was derailed at the approach of the bridge and crashed through the trestle, falling to the foot of the embankment at the first abutment and carrying the three trainmen with it. The track was torn up for a considerable distance and a stop put to all traffic over this line between Sudbury and Toronto. As a result the Winnipeg train, which should have arrived here at 3.25 yesterday afternoon, was forced to reach here via the Grand Trunk North Bay line, and did not arrive until four o'clock this morning.

The wreck at Ivanhoe was in a number of respects similar to the accident to the military train on Thanksgiving Day. An eastbound freight attempted to stop at a switch in order to allow the westbound train to pass it over the switch, and it collided with the other approaching train. The trainmen, realizing that a collision was inevitable, jumped to safety, with the exception of Fireman Richardson, who was caught between the engine and tender just as he was about to leap. His body was afterwards removed to Havelock, where he resided.

HANNA WOULD ASSESS LAND AT IT'S ACTUAL VALUE

Consideration of the Amendment to the Assessment Act is Resumed.

Canadian Press Despatch

Toronto, Dec. 19— Hon. Mr. Hanna told the special committee of the Legislature, when they resumed the consideration of the amendment to the Assessment Act this morning, that they would have to decide on the wisdom of increasing the income exemption and whether parcels of farm land and five acres and over in towns and villages should be valued for taxation on their productive value or by the sale price of adjoining properties. Hon. Mr. Hanna declared his personal preference for assessment of land at its actual value.

E. C. Drury, representing the Dominion Grange, considered all taxes on improvements a hardship and favored local option in taxation. He admitted that single tax would depreciate the value of farm land, which would be no hardship, as farm land was too high now.

James McEwing, also representing the Grange, said he was not asking for single tax. Many years of education would be necessary before the people would be ready to adopt that principle. They did want, however, local option in taxation of improvements. He contended that the fear of this tax was the cause of inferior buildings on mnay farms, on which point several members of the committee expressed their doubts.

Arthur Roebuck, of Haileybury, argues in favor of assessment on land and on improvements being made separately and giving the municipalities the right to exempt improvements from assessment or reduce assessment thereon. He told of a farm near Haileybury, assessed at a nominal amount for years, for which the owner was now asking fourteen thousand dollars. In the town of Cobalt where by special provision three hundred acres is taxed at a flat rate of ten dollars per acre, the taxation being mainly on buildings and other improvements, and the result is a condition of overcrowding and filth not equalled in Toronto. In the town of Engleheart, a commission holds one third for speculative purposes and it is not taxable. In his view, permission to exempt or partially exempt improvements would do more to develop the north country than all the roads the government can build on all the millions they can spend there.

MYSTERY OF STONEY CREEK MAY NEVER BE SOLVED

Great Lapse of Time Makes the Work of Authoritis s Very Difficult.

Hamilton, Dec. 19.—The woman's body found on the old Beulah farm two miles out of Stoney Creek is to be dug up and reburied in the village cemetery. John Macleod, who now owns the farm, learned yesterday for the first time that the remains were buried upon the bank of the pond, where they were found Tuesday by James Tweedle and bitterly resented this.

County Crown Attorney Washington declared that it was a shocking state of affairs and must be remedied.

In addition to the disappearance of Mrs. Henderson from the Beach district some seven years ago, the village is talking of the alleged disappearance of another woman who was missed from her home in Dundas some years ago and of whom nothing was learned, even after the most extended search and enquiry.

The close proximity to the lake beach, where many motor boats land in summer, makes it possible that the body may be that of one who came to the place in that way from Hamilton or some other point on the lake. It appears certain that the woman must have been murdered or a suicide, but the great lapse of time makes it exceedingly unlikely that any solution of the mystery will ever be found.

BOURASSA ON THE NAVY

He Vigorously Attacks Both Defence Policies.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—The most vigorous protest enunciated by a Canadian public man against any contribution by Canada to Imperial defence was given by Henri Bourassa, the Nationalist leader, as a guest of the Ottawa Canadian Club here last night. Mr. Bourassa spoke in the normal school before a large audience.

Mr. Bourassa sought to show that it was British diplomacy which had created the European situation, which had sowed the wind and was reaping the whirlwind.

He attacked the landed classes of the old country, accusing them of having kept the land for their own private amusement instead of for agriculture, and of having thus created the expensive necessity of maintaining a gigantic fleet to protest trade routes leading to the country so that the people might be fed from without instead of from within.

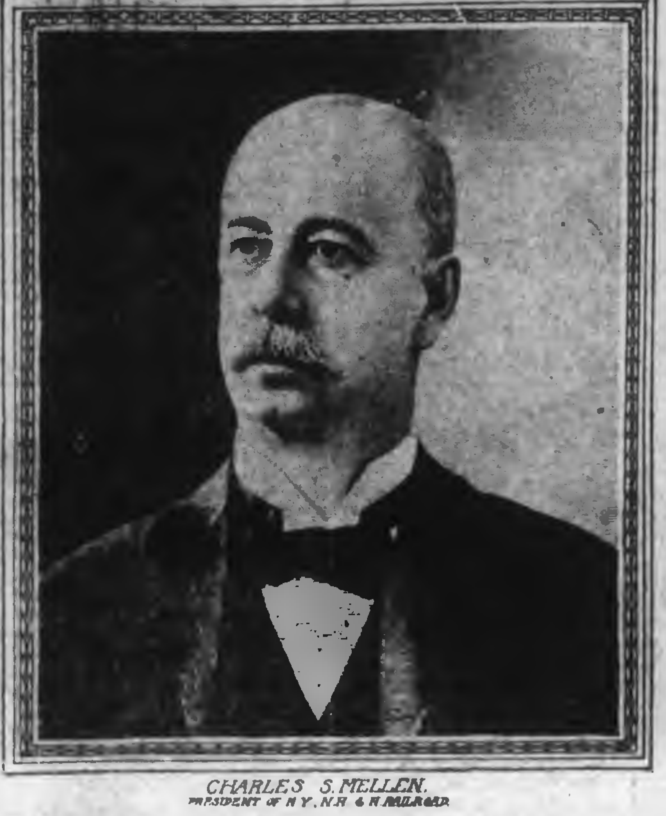
In all this, he asked, what was Canada's part? Did Canada share the triumphs of diplomacy? Did Canada do anything towards creating the necessity for enormous expenditure in armament?

Mr. Bourassa dwelt upon the legislative demands which he claimed had for many years been made by Canada only to be refused by England.

"If the foreign-born Canadian goes to England, he is a mere outcast, a man without a country in this humiliating position would Sir Thomas Shaughnessy or Hon. Geo. H. Perley find themselves if they were foolish enough to expose their Canadian naturalization to British law in the British Isles."

Mr. Bourassa unsparingly condemned both the Borden program and the Laurier amendment [illegible]

PRESIDENT MELLEN THE CHIEF FIGURE IN NEW HAVEN RAILROAD INVESTIGATION



CHARLES S. MELLEN.
PRESIDENT OF N.Y., N.H. & H. RAILROAD

Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, is the principal figure in the present investigations by the federal Grand Jury of the alleged deal of the New Haven road to block competition in New England. Because of the alleged traffic agreement between the New Haven and the Grand Trunk railroads citizens of the New England States are most indignant. With the federal Grand Jury probe into the affair and a possible investigation by Congress, the matter is creating worldwide interest. It is reported Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, president of the Grand Trunk Railroad, as well as Mr. Mellen, is anxious to testify during the investigation.

OPPOSITION IS TOLD THAT SHIPS ARE NOT A GIFT

Minister of Commerce, in Brilliant Speech, Says the Borden Policy is Designed to Spend the Money Where it Will do Most Good.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—Hon. George E. Foster contributed a notable speech to the naval debate yesterday afternoon, which roused the supporters of the Government to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Time and again there were great manifestations of applause, the Conservatives more than once rising to their feet and cheering wildly. The Liberals evidently felt that some message should go to the country from their side and Hugh Guthrie challenged the Government to dissolve Parliament and appeal to the electorate. To facilitate this, he said, the Liberals would expedite the passage of a redistribution bill.

Mr. Foster spoke for three hours to crowded galleries and an enthusiastic hearing from the Government benches. On the floor of the House were seated Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia. The speech of the Minister of Trade and Commerce was one of his best efforts in Parliament.

The Government, said Hon. Mr. Foster, was not giving money to England, it was spending the money of Canada for the defence of the Empire. Just now the heart of the Empire was Great Britain. It was in European waters that the fate of the Empire would be decided. Mr. Borden, he said, had visited England and had required intimate and secret knowledge possessed by British Government respecting the international situation and the danger of attack from Germany. This information would not be divulged, should not be published, but should not the Parliament rely upon Mr. Borden's assurance that an emergency existed?

Personally, Mr. Foster deprecated the use of the word "emergency." The resolution adopted by the House of Commons in 1909 pledged Canada to come to the assistance of the Empire by contributing generously to its naval defence whenever assistance was needed. We were not to wait till war was declared. The time to act was now, when we were assured that action on our part was needed.

It was said that we were sending money to England to build ships, but that we were not furnishing men to do the fighting. Just now the quickest and most effective thing Canada could do was to contribute money and ships. She could not send men to fight because several years of training was required to make men efficient on war vessels.

Mr. Foster took issue with the charge that there was to be no Canadian navy in the future. The permanent plan of the Government had not yet been announced and when announced would not be carried into execution without a mandate from the people.

Mr. Foster insisted that the vote of $35,000,000 was a temporary measure designed to meet a present urgent condition and entirely unconnected with the permanent policy of the Government to be announced hereafter.

He deprecated what he termed the huckstering character of the Opposition to the Government's policy. Canada, as part of the Empire, was vitally interested in preserving the life of the Empire. If she had $35,000,000 to contribute to that end she should make that money go as far as possible in achieving that end. The ships to be built should be built where they could be built most efficiently and most cheaply.

It was fifteen minutes to the time of adjournment for the Christmas recess when Mr. Foster sat down. Mr. Guthrie (South Wellington), who will resume the debate when Parliament reassembles, in moving the adjournment contented himself with pointing out that Mr. Foster had duly emphasized the tremendous magnitude and importance of the issue, and had also stated that if the measure were not passed by the House the country would insist on passing it.

"Why not now cut the Gordian knot?" asked Mr. Guthrie. "Why not accept the challenge from this side of the House? Bring in your redistribution bill. We will facilitate its passage. Then dissolve the House and go to the country. This seems to me to be the simplest, speediest and most satisfactory way of settling this great issue." (Liberals cheers.)

In the House yesterday Major J. A. Currie of North Simcoe introduced a bill amending the Naturalisation Act, by providing that an alien seeking naturalization must speak the English and French languages and must take an oath renouncing his allegiance to the country whence he comes, as in the United States.

Mr. Verville (Maisonneuve) introduced a bill to amend the Lord's Day Act, permitting musicians to play at sacred concerts and funerals on Sundays and receive payment for their services. It also provides that cooks and waiters in hotels shall have one day holiday each week.

Hon. Frank Oliver renewed his enquiry as to whether the Government proposed to extend the time for the location of South African veterans' land grants. He was informed by Hon. Mr. Roche that Parliament would be asked to grant an extension of not less than six months and possibly of one year.

REPORT ON PUBLIC SERVICE IS PRESENTED BY MURRAY

British Expert Recommends That the Numbers of Orders-in-Council be Cut Down and That Heads of Departments Act More on Their Own Responsibility.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—A report on the organization of the public service of Canada, made by Sir George Murray at the request of the Dominion Government, was laid on the table of the House yesterday by the Prime Minister. The report is a lengthy one, containing some thirty printed pages.

The report is divided into four parts. These are: First, methods employed in transaction of public business; second, control of appropriations and expenditures; third, the administrative methods and operations of the chief spending departments, and fourth, miscellaneous suggestions.

Sir George states that he was most impressed by the enormous amount of work the Ministers have to do under the present system in force in Canada. They both have too much to do and do too much.

The numbers of orders-in-council passed a year is between 3,000 and 4,000. This is too many. They deal with everything from a foreign treaty to the appointment of an excise man. Moreover, in theory at any rate, almost every decision of a Minister, however trivial, goes before his colleagues for approval. With the growth of Canada this system will break down by its own weight.

Sir George recommends a greater devolution of authority, that is, much that is now done by order-in-council should be done by the individual Ministers. That is further, that the Ministers should be given greater authority without submission to the Cabinet. Legislation would be necessary to effect such changes.

A committee of Ministers should be appointed to deal with this matter and to recommend such duties as may be left to the individual Ministers. No harm would be done, save the report, if the Treasury Board were abolished and the duties performed by the several Departments concerned.

The report also considers the relief of individual Ministers by the transfer of some of their duties to their deputies and to others.

Sir George recommends that the provisions of the Civil Service Act be extended to the outside service of the Government, thus taking it from the political arena. It was undesirable, however, that the commission should interfere in the matter of promotions. Sir George finds that there have been cases where considerations "otherwise than merit" have resulted in promotions in the service in the past. He makes the recommendation that promotion should be left to deputy heads, only on the understanding that merit alone should count.

A pension system of retirements is suggested. No retirements are to be allowed for ill-health unless there is a medical certificate that the ill-health and incapacity for work is to be permanent.

The provisions which allow certain officers to serve over the usual number of years is declared to be of doubtful value. The practice of deducting from salaries a certain amount on a pension is of doubtful value and should be abolished.

The bulk of the report deals with conditions in the inside service at Ottawa, and it is pointed out that the method of classification of clerks and paying salaries in different Departments is widely divergent, though the work in each case is similar. A committe of Deputy Ministers to regulate classifications is strongly advocated and the need of promotion by merit alone is emphasized.

Because their work is similar, the report suggests, the amalgamation of the customs and inland revenue departments would not be impossible.

CONFESSION A FAILURE

Condemned Italian Murderer to Expiate His Crime To-morrow.

Montreal, Dec. 19.—It is now claimed by local Italians that Carlo Battista, condemned to hang to-morrow for the murder here of a fellow-countryman, made his confession connecting many of them with a Black Hand society which he said managed a white slave traffic of continental proportions, and was responsible for the death of Petrosino, the Italian detective connected with the New York police force, in the hope that his sentence would be commuted, or at least a reprieve would be granted him until an inquiry could be held. The Minister of Justice has, however, declined to intervene.

Yesterday Battista had an interview with his wife and son, who have come up from New York. He wept bitterly and vehemently protested his innocence.

Toronto, Dec. 19.—The question of assessment was discussed by the Conference Committee of One Hundred of the Toronto Board of Trade yesterday, and member after member found fault with the present method of taxation in Ontario, and particularly in Toronto. The discussion will be resumed on Wednesday, Jan. 8, when, it is understood, a formal resolution urging reform will be submitted.

The Christmas Pudding

Tradition has much to do with the partiality to a pudding of this sort for Christmas, and, whether it is handed in by a neat maid in cap and apron, by a stately butler in livery or by the unpretentious housewife herself, it should not appear on the table until it is time to serve it.

Place the pudding on a generous platter, decorate it with bits of holly and dress with a good sauce, which should be in a separate dish.

As the pudding improves with age, it may, like fruit cake, be prepared in advance.

To keep it fresh until Christmas wrap in oiled paper and keep in a tin which has a tight fitting lid.

Then the pudding need only be warmed up when sent to the table.

How to Make the Pudding.

If you intend to make a boiled pudding see that all molds and basins required are perfectly dry before greasing them and then use good butter for the purpose. Take care that the molds are filled to the top with the mixture and that it is pressed well down. Have clean pudding cloths. Dip them in boiling water and flour them before tying over and allow for swelling.

Let the water be bubbling violently before putting the molds in it. See that the water covers them.

As it evaporates in boiling add more boiling water so as not to check the cooking, which must go on steadily all the time.

Plum puddings properly made and boiled will keep at least a year if hung in a cool, dry place.

When Baking the Pudding.

If you prefer to bake the pudding take one and a half cupfuls of beef suet free from skin and chopped fine, one and a half cupfuls of raisins stoned, one and a half cupfuls of currants which have been washed and picked over, one cupful of brown sugar, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, four eggs, one cupful of milk, half a cupful of citron cut in very small pieces, a pinch of salt, half a grated nutmeg and one glassful of orange juice.

Put all these ingredients in a deep bowl, adding the eggs just as they drop from the shell, flour and baking powder sifted together and, lastly, the orange juice.

Mix into a batter which should be very short. Pour into cake tins which have been liberally buttered and bake in a steady, even oven for two hours.

Serve with a lemon or vanilla sauce.

English Plum Pudding.

For a rich old fashioned plum pudding take eight eggs, one pound of best butter, one pound of flour, one pound of currants, one pound of seeded raisins, one pound of sliced citron, one pint of milk, a small loaf of bread, half a teaspoonful of ground mace, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a pinch of salt.

Break the bread in small pieces and crumble it in the milk, add the beaten eggs, the creamed butter, then the fruit well floured. Grease a cloth, put a large plate in the middle of it and heap the pudding on the plate. Then tie it up securely, but leave plenty of room for the pudding to swell. Boil for three hours, adding more water from time to time if necessary.

Serve with a sauce of butter, creamed with sugar and flavored with nutmeg and lemon juice. When ready to serve stick almonds all over the pudding, first blanching the almonds. Make a little hole in the top of the pudding and pour half a pint of brandy over it and serve blazing.

A Cheap Pudding.

What could be more economical than this pudding. Mix together one and a half cupfuls of flour, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of grated suet, one cupful of seeded raisins, one cupful of cleaned currants or chopped prunes, one cupful of grated carrot, one cupful of grated potato, one-quarter of a cupful of minced orange peel, nutmeg, cinnamon and clove to taste.

To make the sauce beat together one tablespoonful of cornstarch, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of brown sugar. Set on the stove until heated, then turn in hot water, a little at a time, and cook until the consistency required. Add four tablespoonfuls of grape or apple jelly, with spices or flavoring to taste, and serve hot.

BORN ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Some Famous People Who First Saw the Light on or About Dec. 25.

There is some uncertainty about the year and date of the birth of Clara Barton, founder of the Red Cross and famous philanthropist, who died this year, more than ninety years old, but it is generally believed that she was born on Christmas day in 1820 or 1821.

Lord John Morley, the celebrated British author and statesman, Gladstone's lieutenant and secretary of state for India in the Asquith cabinet, was born on Christmas eve, Dec. 24, 1838. Seven years later to the day King George I. of Greece first saw the light.

Lord Marcus Beresford, brother of the famous British admiral, was a Christmas day baby, as were also Lady Grey-Egerton and the Countess of Rothes, one of the survivors of the wreck of the Titanic.

Among those who were born on Dec. 26, "just too late for Christmas dinner," were Admiral George Dewey, the Earl of Leicester, Sir James Linton, the painter; the Duchess of Leeds, Sir James Rankin, member of the British parliament, and James D. Stephens, representative from California in the American congress.

CHRISTMAS WITH THE TOILERS OF THE SEA

LANDLUBBERS that you are, did you ever reflect that there is a world where Christmas is as meaningless a day as the 24th or 26th of December? Did you ever think far enough beyond the spicy vapors of your own plum pudding to realize that the seafaring folk were living their Christmas day as if they knew naught of its fame? They do know what it means, however, as well as ever do you, but winds lash and waves thump on the 25th as on every other day, and it's a foolish sailorman who counts on turkey or holly berries. The chances are he'll see little of them.

Christmas is disobliging enough to come in the very beginning of the maddest weather, and the weather never gives way one inch. The pilotboat people and the life savers make pathetic little attempts at holding holiday, but ten to one they will be nothing more than attempts. If the sea chooses to make merry in its own way the sea commands and must be obeyed.

The captains of the life saving stations along the beach try each year to celebrate with their men. A turkey is always brought to the headquarters and a good meal prepared around it as a star attraction. But anywhere from drumsticks to nuts and raisins may come the signal from the coast guard. Perhaps a crab fishing boat has capsized; perhaps it is a big ship going down—the result is the same. The Christmas turkey is left to grow cold, the mince pie is forgotten, and it's off to launch the lifeboat and then to the oars and away. Night or day the summons may come. If at night there are a flashing of lights on the beach and a fight, man against storm, in the blackness of the surf.

On the lightship provision is made for a good dinner, but there the pleasure ends. Day and night the ship rides at anchor ten miles off shore. Always the clanging of the fog bell is heard and the lights are watched, and break in the monotony there is none, save for a better bill of fare than usual and an extra glass of grog, then back to the bell and the lights again, and men forget what Christmas celebrated or that it was celebrated at all.

It was during the carving of the last turkey that the bells rang fiercely, for a fog was driving in past the heads, and lights were being enveloped in it. Two new men were among the crew, and they sprang, frightened, away from the table. The old sailors assured them that it was no trouble out of the ordinary, but they could not be induced to come back to the dinner. They are blase now and are laughing at other new men, but their companions have not forgotten to mention the dinner that they missed by gazing shudderingly into a winter fog and expecting the death of themselves or some one else every moment.

Christmas is a lottery to the pilots. No man of them knows when his turn is coming to guide a ship into port, and ships must be guided when it is their captain's will. Some of the pilots may have a snatch of the day at home in the midst of Santa Claus gossip and tin horns and stuffed stockings. Whoever the other pilots may be, they are on the water with a good dinner stowed away awaiting its opportunity, which may or may not come. If a ship is suddenly sighted, then never mind the dinner.

The life on the great steamers and sailing vessels is more systematic, and it is worth while to prepare for as much merriment as the homesickness of empty sea view will permit. There may be a Christmas tree and music and dancing; but, be you a seadog or a landlubber, it's all the same—you would rather be at home over a table that does not roll and spend a good Christian Christmas with all its traditional nonsense.—San Francisco Call.

The American Girl

Why Her British Sister Can't Compete With Her

By F. A. MITCHEL

Two gentlemen were sitting together in the Carleton club in London smoking and sipping the beverage before them, the topic of conversation falling upon the American women who were then beginning to capture scions of nobility in England.

"How do they do it?" asked one, a burly man with mutton chop whiskers.

"They've got so much in 'em," replied the other, a tall man with a drooping blond mustache.

"Have you ever had any experience with them?" asked the burly man.

"Experience? Well, I should think so," said the other with a smile that indicated he could tell a story if he would. Then, setting down the glass he was sipping from, he turned to his friend and added, "It's all past and gone now, and I can't see how any harm can come from my telling you about it."

"About what?"

"That's what I'm going to give you, but I mustn't begin at the wrong end, you know. It happened when I first went into the diplomatic corps and was attached to the Paris legation as secretary. At that time the eyes of the powers were concentrated on Egypt and the Suez canal. Our government wanted to get its hands on it in order that it might maintain a supremacy in Egypt as well as in maritime affairs, both merchant and navy. But it wasn't a case of grabbing things as we'd been used to doing—that is, signifying a wish to open trade with a people, then getting them in debt to us, then send in a few war vessels to collect the debt, then assume a protectorate to see that the thing didn't occur again. Oh, no! It wasn't any such simple case as that.

"Well, the premier and all the cabinet here were thinking and scheming as to what kind of a trick could be played to get control of the canal and yet keep within the law of nations. One morning my chief, the ambassador, sent for me in hot haste, and when I appeared he locked all the doors, closed all the windows and whispered in my ear:

"'There's a large block of stock of the Suez canal offered for sale. The German embassy has got hold of the fact, and Count von Sterlitz, one of its best men, will start for Berlin on the 6 o'clock train to inform his government of the fact in order that it may buy this controlling interest. I am going to rely upon you to delay him while I send a man across the channel to represent the matter to the premier in London, that he may make the purchase for England. Now, gather your wits and go to work. I know you have a genius for such matters and won't fail me.'

"This last was taffy, you know, and the ambassador only said it to spur me on.

"'Have you been informed how Von Sterlitz will travel?' I asked.

"'I have. My informant got it from his valet. The count has told the valet to have a grip with toilet articles ready for him at 5 o'clock and to call a cab off the street at 5:30.'

"'Very well; I will do the best I can in the matter, but you have given me a very delicate job to perform. Let us hope for the best.'

"It was then 11 o'clock in the morning, and I had made an engagement to lunch with Miss Alice Stringfellow, an American to whom I had been paying some attention, which I flattered myself had not been disagreeable to her. I left the embassy intending to send her word that I was unable to keep my appointment when it occurred to me in my perplexity that a woman in a matter of duplicity is worth a dozen men, and, calling for a cab, I drove straight to her house.

"I had nothing to fear in giving her my confidence, for she was not involved in diplomatic chicanery and the United States was not especially interested in the Suez canal. At any rate, I threw caution to the winds; told her what I had been directed to do and begged her for heaven's sake to give me an idea.

"'It is now 11:30,' she said, glancing at a clock, 'and you have but six hours to form a plan and execute it—that is, if you intend to prevent the count's reaching his train. I think this should be done if possible. If not some one must go with him, trusting to find an opportunity to delay him on the way or from communicating with his government on his arrival at the capital.'

"'Good gracious!' I exclaimed. 'You have got it in a nutshell!'

"I was so bewildered myself that the rapidity and clearness with which her brain worked astonished me. I sat gaping at her while her fair brows were drawn together with intense thought. Presently she arose and paced the floor, still thinking. It was half an hour before she spoke, I all the while sitting like a dunce waiting for her to solve the problem.

"'Suppose,' she said, suddenly pausing in her walk and turning to me, 'that I can suggest a way of kidnaping the count. Do you know of any place where you can take him and keep him for awhile?'

"This gave me something definite to think about, and I concentrated my mind on it, but to no purpose.

"'Never mind,' said my counselor; 'you can take him anywhere, for if my plan is carried out it won't make much difference so long as you take him where he will not be known. Now listen.'

"She gave me her plan. I didn't have much confidence in being able to carry it out, and told her so, whereupon she said that the principal part of any plan was the ability with which it was executed. I left her that I might make the arrangements she suggested, hoping that I would be able to do so in the brief time allotted. My adviser promised to be on hand and do all she could to prevent any slip ''twixt the cup and the lip.'

"At 5 o'clock, dressed in the plain livery of a cabman and my face made up, I drove my cab to a point near the ambassador's house and waited. Cabs were passing, some empty, some with a fare inside. I had maintained my position for some time when the door of the count's residence opened and his valet came out bareheaded and looked up and down the street. As ill luck would have it, an empty cab was passing and nearer to him than I. He hailed the other cabman.

"I was in an agony of disappointment when a lady appeared—I knew not from whence—and called the cabman the valet had hailed. He pulled up to the sidewalk, and the lady got into his cab, leaving my vehicle the only one in sight. The valet beckoned me, and I drove up to the door of the count's abode.

"In ten minutes Von Sterlitz appeared, carrying his own grip. His valet opened my cab door for him and told me to drive to the station. I drove away feeling that the principal crisis was past, and my heart was full of thankfulness to Miss Stringfellow, whom I recognized as the lady who had turned the scale in my favor by taking the other cab.

"During the afternoon I had purchased my vehicle, including its driver's clothes, and it had been delivered at a stable where I kept my horses. I had secured a short rubber tube and, having bored a hole in the cab just back of the driver's seat, had introduced one end of the tube into the cab. On the other end was a rubber bulb, in which had been placed a substance I had purchased from a chemist which, blown into the carriage, would render the occupant temporarily insensible.

"Purposely driving through a street but little used for a thoroughfare, I pressed the bulb. I heard the count try to let down a window, but I had driven a nail in both window frames, so that neither could be moved. He cried out to me to stop and tried to open the door, but I had employed a locksmith to alter the lock, so that it could not be opened from the inside.

"The count's efforts soon ceased, and I whipped up my horse, driving straight to a retreat for invalids I had in mind, and on reaching it told the physician in charge that I had picked up a fare who had acted very strangely and on opening my cab door I had found him insensible. The count was carried into the building and put into a room, where the doctor sought to revive him. Before he succeeded I said:

"'Doctor, when this gentleman comes to himself you're not going to turn him loose, are you?'

"'Not till we know who he is.'

"'He told me a wild story about being in the employ of the German government, and I think he's crazy. If you let him go without summoning his friends to take him away you'll do it on your own responsibility.'

"'Never fear. I'll exercise a proper caution.'

"By the time I left the retreat the evening train had started for Berlin and there was no other till early morning. I drove to my stable, assumed my proper clothing and hurried to the residence of Miss Stringfellow. I had been half in love with her for some time, and in the exuberance of my gratitude and admiration I told her that if I couldn't go through life with her for a companion I would not go through it at all. That's the way the American girl plays her game."

"That's all right," said the burly man, "but how about the controlling interest in the Suez canal?"

"Count Sterlitz didn't succeed in getting out of the retreat till about noon the next day and couldn't get a train for Berlin till 6 o'clock in the evening. Meanwhile the morning after I had done my work the premier was awakened before daylight to be told that the stock was for sale, and, getting out of bed, he consummated an arrangement to buy it. It was duly purchased, and today, though England has no treaty rights above other powers in the Suez canal, she owns a controlling interest in it."

"And your wife was"—

"Miss Alice Stringfellow, and you are the only man outside diplomatic circles who knows that England's interest in the canal was obtained through the ingenuity of an American girl. My marrying her gained me the post I so long occupied at Washington, and my whole advancement in the corps is due to her."

"Did Von Sterlitz ever discover who had kidnaped him?"

"Not except that it had been done by some one in the interest of the British ambassador. We guarded the secret carefully, for it would never do for a British diplomat to be known as descending to act the part I played. It would have been all right to hire some one to do it, but for a secretary of legation to play cabman would not accord with the dignity of the British nation."

The average spinster insists that she is because she wants to.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—Foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was good and there were orders for 400 loads at an average of 1½d to 3d per quarter for shipment in all positions up to May-June next, but owing to the continued steadiness of prices in Winnipeg and the strength displayed of late in all the foreign markets exporters are not anxious sellers and the volume of business doing is not large, but sales are being made every day. The local market for oats is steady under a fair demand, and the demand for carlots of American corn is increasing, but the trade in all kinds of barley is quiet. There was some inquiry from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour and sales of a few odd lots were made. Local trade is fairly active. Demand for millfeed is good and sales of bran were made for export to the U.S. A fair trade is passing in butter for local account, but the demand from outside sources is slow. In cheese the feeling is firm with a steady demand from over the cable. Eggs are active and firm and a fair trade is doing in provisions.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 14 were 2175 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 1925 hogs and 50 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1150 cattle, 1100 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 300 calves.

Owing to the colder and more favorable weather for keeping stock there was a fairly good demand from butchers and packers for cattle, and as the supply was not excessive, the tone of the market was firm. There was no fancy Christmas stock offered, but there was a number of good loads of cattle which were more useful to the trade than the very heavy steers and the market on the whole was fairly active. The top price realized for the best steers was $6.50 and sales of other grades were made from that down to $4 per cwt., while cows brought from $3 to $5.50 and bulls from $3.50 to $5.50 per cwt., as to quality.

The tone of the market for lambs continues strong and prices have scored another advance of 25c per cwt. The demand for choice stock was active and sales were made at $7 to $7.25 and good at $6.75 per cwt. There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep, which are firm at $4.50 to $5 per cwt. The demand was active for calves and a good trade was done at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each, as to size and quality.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for hogs under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $8.90 and in a few odd instances as high as $9 to $9.25 was realized for a few small choice lots, weighed off the cars.

Coughs, Colds Bronchitis

If there is an ailment in the throat or chest, it is surely essential that the remedy be conveyed direct to the affected part. It's because the healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed into the sore, irritated throat and bronchial tubes, because its balsamic fumes kill the germs and destroy the cause of the trouble. These are the reasons why Catarrhozone never yet failed to cure a genuine case of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Throat Trouble.

The wonderfully soothing vapor of Catarrhozone instantly reaches the furthest recesses of the lungs, produces a healing, curative effect that is impossible with a tablet or liquid, which goes merely to the stomach, and fails entirely to help the throat or lungs.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing, and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c and $1, at all dealers. 10

THE ANTI-TREATING CAUSE

The Roman Catholic and Protestant churches of Calgary have united in a movement to get young men to take a pledge not to give or take a treat across the bar. A "Non-treating club has already been formed in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, with a large membership. Rev. Father D'Alton, parish priest, says that in Dublin the liquor business has fallen off 50 per cent., because of the stoppage of treating on a large scale.

At the last session of the Legislature Premier Whitney introduced a resolution declaring against the treating habit, and announcing that the Ontario Government was prepared to enact a law against treating in any bar in the province. That policy has been well received in Ontario by the temperance people, and others. It is not total prohibition at all, because in local option the people of each locality have the power to decree for themselves whether there shall be liquor sold in the community or not. But to abolish the treating system is to strike at the very root of the drink evil. About three-fourths of the liquor sold over the bar is sold as the result of treating. Nine-tenths of the solitary drinkers, those who drink because of their liking for liquor itself, because of their unquenchable thirst for liquor, first contracted their appetite by treating. They did not, in taking their first or second or third drinks, go into the bar and order the liquor for its own sake. They were treaters first, and if they had never been treaters, they never would have been habitual drinkers. To stop the drink evil is to stop half or more of the liquor traffic.

The question is, of course, can such a law be enforced. Can such a rule be carried out without a policeman in every bar to read the understandings of those who line up? How the law is to be efficiently enforced is a matter for the Government to settle. But the law ought to do much good, for if voluntary abstention from treating be of such great value, surely a general prohibition, of much wider scope, ought to be of much greater value.

THE NAVAL DISCUSSION

The argument put up by Hon. George P. Graham, that the Borden contribution of $35,000,000 for three Dreadnoughts, is the first step in seventy years away from the ideal of self-government, and the contention of Dr. Michael Clark that the Borden naval policy is an invasion of our autonomy and right of self-government, are not arguments that appeal to the people of Canada.

If a man who has an income of $1,000 a year feels that his security in making that amount comes from the protection of a church, is he curtailing his liberty or his right to independent action if he gives that church $25 to increase its effectiveness?

If Canada wants to give three Dreadnoughts to the British navy to increase the Empire's defence, and incidentally provide more protection for itself, is it losing its power of self-government by making such a gift? Canada votes the money, presents the ships. The ships can be reclaimed to Canada if at any time Canada deems that action desirable, to form the nucleus of a Canadian navy. As for rendering prompt aid to Britain by manning such ships with Canadian men, the policy is unacceptable and the Laurier men who bought the Niobe and Rainbow as training ships ought to know. The crews of these were recruited mostly from the Old Country, after Canadians would not enlist, and half of the Canadians who did enlist deserted. The talk about Canada hiring a substitute is foolish. If the government of Canada depended upon furnishing Canadian crews to those battleships, the British navy would have mighty little use of them. As for the argument that when they were returnable to Canada they would be obsolete, that is no more true in this case than in the case of the Laurier proposals to build Canadian ships. They all get obsolete. The talk of tribute is nonsense. Because one man gives another a Christmas box as a thank-offering, does that mean that he renders tribute? Because Canada wants to help the Empire directly, does that mean tribute? If such a policy be accepted, then Canada ought to do nothing for the Empire, nothing for Britain, nothing except pile up armaments on its own shores. That would be very handy indeed if Canada negotiated a reciprocity treaty, or wanted to become independent of the British Empire. Two or three years ago the Laurier people were afraid of their lives to do anything either for Empire or Canadian naval defence beyond the Rainbow-Niobe scheme. The Cabinet held in suspense for months the tenders for the Bristol cruisers it was suggested they should build. The Laurier pack of hounds are in full cry, but their lot comes easy because they are in Opposition, and promises made now will carry no more weight when they regain office, if they do for the next 20 years, than did the promise to institute a tariff for revenue only made in 1893.

GOOD ROADS

The "Good Roads" number of "Farm Improvements" is due to the widespread demand all over the country for the improvements of our rural highways. One can hardly pick up a magazine or newspaper without seeing some article written on this all important topic. Not only is the farmer interested in this movement, but all other classes have joined in the demand, including merchants, railroads, manufacturers, highway officials, tourists, and all progressive citizens. Not only do they want good roads that will stay good, in other words they want permanent roads and roads that can be built at a reasonable cost.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Although aldermanic candidates cannot distribute cards bearing their picture or platform after January 1 there is nothing in the statute to prevent them publishing the same in the Review— or Examiner and Times.

The suffragets of Glasgow cry "Cowards!" at the young men students who smash their windows; but at least the latter are not so cowardly as to claim immunity on the ground of sex. Is there any courage to women's committing crimes and misdemeanors to vindicate their equality with men, and them claiming immunity on the ground that they are not men but women!—N.Y. Tribune.

Storm and Calm.

Storm and calm is a jolly game. First place a circle of chairs at an even distance apart. Then the youngsters take their places and each one chooses the name of a fish. An extra child is selected to begin the game. He runs round outside the circle, crying:

"A storm is near! A storm is near!"

Then, when it pleases him, he adds:

"Swim deep, swim deep, oh, herring dear!"

The child who answers to the name of herring rises and trots after the leader, who repeats the former cry with the herring joining in. In this manner all the fish are chosen and their voices imitate the gradual rising of a storm. Suddenly the leader shouts loudly:

"The storm is over," and all the fish, leader included, bolt for seats. As the company is a seat short the child who fails to secure one acts as leader next time.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of the late John Mills took place on Monday from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Wm. Magee of Mary St. The deceased had attained the grand old age of 82 years, was well known and highly respected. His love for active labor never flagged and when he was overcome by a stroke he was attending to his usual daily employment. Loving hands soon conveyed him to a place of comfort and rest, but in a few hours, the continuous unconsciousness merged into the sleep of death on Saturday evening. There were no traces of pain or suffering to mark the close of a long and useful life.

The late Mr. Mills was born in Donegal, Ireland, where he enlisted in the army during the Crimean War, but his regiment was not called to the front. He had served, many times, as one of a guard for the late Queen Victoria. He emigrated to Canad ain 1861, settled at Lifford in the township of Manvers, where he was successful and happy till 16 years ago when his beloved wife was called to the Land of Rest. Since then he has resided in Omemee continuously to the time of his demise. He was a life-long Orangeman, and attended the last celebration at Peterborough. In religion he was a member of the Methodist church, in politics, a Conservative.

Interment took place at St. Mary's Cemetery, Manvers—near the place he had spent the best part of his life—and where many old friends and neighbors had gathered to pay their last tributes of respect to the memory of one whom they had learned to admire. There are seven children left to mourn his removal; five sons, Robert, James and George, of Manitoba; Norton, of Lifford, and T. Albert, of Bobcaygeon; two daughters, Mrs. Barrett, of Manitoba, and Mrs. Wm. Magee, of town, to whom as well as to many other near relatives, the sincerest condolences are extended.

ROUND TABLE CONFERENCES

Will be Attended by Board of Education Representatives

Mr. Robert Fair, member of the Board of Education, was in Toronto yesterday, attending the Executive Council of Trustees, Department of the Ontario Educational Association, held at the Palmer House. The chief feature was the arrangement of the 1913 meeting program of the trustees department, to be held on Tuesday of Easter week, when most of the time will be given to round table conferences. Each Board of Education throughout the province is being specially urged to send representatives and place before the association any subject, matter or complaint, and it will be brought into discussion.

A POPULAR YOUNG ACTOR

"Billy the Kid" in which the popular young actor, Berkeley Haswell is being featured this season, is undoubtedly one of the best plays of its kind on the road. It is a melodrama, but it tells a concise and powerful story, with due regard to sequence, so often missed by melodramatic writers. The play abounds in strong situations, the dialogue is clever and there is plenty of comedy. The production is a handsome one, and the star's supporting company exceedingly well balanced. "Billy the Kid," is to be presented at the Grand, on Christmas Day, December 25th, matinee and evening.

MR. BURNHAM STATES HIS POINT OF VIEW

A day or two ago, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., offered the Ottawa Journal an interview, relative to his position and recent utterances on the matter of what he had stated relative to the suppression of the French language in Canada. He desires that this point of view be fairly understood, and said—

"A most extraordinary state of affairs has suddenly arisen in Canada. It appears to have begun in a conflict concerning language between English-Canadian and the French-Canadian. As a matter of fact it arose by command of his Lordship, Bishop Fallon, who took the means best suited to his purpose for furthering that purpose.

"The story leading up to the present trouble is a long one and does not begin in Canada. It begins in Rome. Many years ago the great Pope Leo XIII, swept the world's horizon with his infallible glass and found that the forces of the enemy were going to pieces of their own weight, but that his own forces needed re-organization. He laid the foundation for the re-organization in one of his famous treatises upon the condition of the modern world. In it he appealed to his clergy and to all good Catholics to gird themselves up anew for a fierce conflict and a more glorious victory. Pius X., the present Pope is carrying the late Pope's policy. He is putting the theories into action. He is re-organizing the forces of Catholicism. To the world of thought he addressed the encyclical against modernism in which he re-affirms with adamantine severity the doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope and of the Pope alone. Catholics of late years had begun to talk so much of the church that they had begun to think that a concensus of Catholic opinion was the real ruling power of Christendom. This the present Pope has swept aside with one word. Without the Pope there is no church. It is he who is infallible, and he alone. He alone as Pius X says 'represents God Himself.' The democratic principle is annihilated in thought and in the church. The world must follow suit. What is man that he should be minded or the language of men that it should be perpetuated!

"To unify an obedient world is the plan of the new movement. The unify the English-speaking world would be the greatest conquest a Pope has made since the Reformation divided it. The inspiration and infallibility of the Bible had hitherto been used by Protestants to offset the inspiration and infallibility of the Pope. But this claim has disappeared. The seat of human authority is to be in Man himself. Protestants have thrown away their one supernatural anchor. 'The Lord has delivered them into our hands,' cried the Pope. The Pope alone stands for the voice of God, calling as from a window of heaven to mankind. How, then, is the English-speaking world to be united? Not by using the least Catholic part of it as a base, but by using the most Catholic. Canada is that part. Forty-one per cent. of it is Catholic. But as Cardinal Bourne has said in his great address to the English-speaking Catholic world, 'What is it that divides Canada?' It is the perpetual fight of race with race of the French and English. If the French would but give up their mother tongue, see what they could do for their holy mother-church and for one greater than the church, the Pope, who holds the keys of heaven. So Cardinal Bourne speaks directly to the French-Canadians. He addresses them by name and lays bare the Pope's desire. Bishop Fallon suddenly sees the expansion of the French language in Ontario. Like an eagle, he dashes at his prey. In vain the French cry out: 'We will obey the law. Do not crush us. We are loyal subjects of the King.' But it is not the King of the British Empire that is the real King. The French must be made loyal to the Pope, the only true King. Earthly kings are but the servants of the people. The Pope is the servant of God. Protestants are opposed to the French language too. What then remains? There remains to be seen whether the people of Canada are concerned in settling their difficulties themselves or whether they shall move at the bidding of him who is not one of them, to aid a cause that regards democracy as a sin except when it obeys the orders of the infallible vice-gerent of God."

LAKEFIELD NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Lakefield, Dec. 19.—Miss Reynolds, of Bethany, is the guest of Mrs. W. Baptie at present.

Mr. R. G. Clifford, of Peterborough, spent a few days in the village last week.

Mr. L. J. Labelle, of Sneldrake, Mich., spent Monday in the village visiting old friends.

Mr. (Dr.) Blakeman is visiting her parents at Cardinal, Ont.

Miss K. Vincent, of Peterborough, spent Friday evening in the village.

On Tuesday evening at a representative meeting of the men of St. John's church, it was decided to adopt the duplex envelopes for weekly offerings to local and missionary funds. An every member canvass will be undertaken by a committee of men very shortly.

Court was held in the Town Hall on Monday afternoon last, when two young boys appeared before County Magistrate Edmison, of Peterborough, to answer to the charge of cruelty to animals. From the evidence it appeared that the boys had thrown stones at a cat, causing its death. Both boys were found guilty and were each fined $5 and costs, amounting to $8.60.

A regular meeting of the Young People's Association of the Presbyterian Church was held in the Sunday school room on Monday evening at eight o'clock, when a splendid program was given.

Rev. and Mrs. Walsh, of Toronto, are spending a few weeks' vacation in the village.

SCHOOL BOARD.

A regular meeting of the Public School Board was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening of last week.

The members present were Dr. J. R. Fraser, in the chair, and Trustees Tanner, Galvin and Ridpath.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Finance Committee presented the following report and recommended payment of the same:

J. M. Bygott, express and cartage	$14.54
Village Council, cement walk	126.16
H. G. Fitzgerald, supplies	4.78
W. J. Charlton, coal	191.30
Total	$336.78

The report, on motion, was received and adopted.

An application was received from Mr. C. E. Kennedy asking renewing engagement as caretaker of the Public and High Schools.

Moved by Trustee Tanner, seconded by Trustee Galvin, that the application of Mr. C. E. Kennedy as janitor be accepted at present salary.

Moved by Trustee Tanner, seconded by Trustee Galvin, that the secretary write Miss Waterbury, accepting her application as teacher at a salary of $175.00. The Board then adjourned.

The well known collie dog "Buster" owned by Miss Ray came to an untimely end on Monday last from poison. "Buster" was one of the best known dogs in the village, and was a great favorite of all. It is thought that the dog came across the poison accidentally. Dr. Kennedy did all in his power to save the animal, but his efforts were in vain. The poison had taken too great an effect.

On Monday evening, December 16th the Rev. Ben Oliel, assisted by about twenty young people, dressed in varied and picturesque costumes gave another of his "Evenings in Palestine." This time it was "Living Scenes from Life in Jerusalem," acted by groups of persons in costume, and accompanied by suitable descriptions and explanations. The concert was a very interesting one and was much enjoyed by all.

The ice on Lillcrap's Bay is in excellent condition for skating, and many of the young people are taking advantage of it.

Miss Beatrice Gordon, who has been spending the past few weeks in Peterborough, is at present in the village.

MUCH EVIDENCE IN THIS CASE

Only Three Witnesses Heard up to Noon To-day

The non-jury assizes were continued this morning with the Cardwell versus Breckenridge action still unsettled. Up to twelve o'clock the case appeared to be one of indefinite duration only three witnesses having given their evidence. Mr. Watson, K.C., and L. M. Hayes, K.C., are arguing the case for the plaintiffs, and J. J. Hellmuth, K.C., and F. D. Kerr, for defendant.

CHOIR BOYS TO SING CAROLS

The choir boys of St. John's church will again visit the Protestant Home on Christmas Eve and sing Carols and other Christmas music under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey.

Offers Big Hotel as Gift.

Haileybury, Dec. 19.—John Lumsden, the lumberman of Ottawa, has offered his hotel at the foot of Lake Timiskaming, worth $55,000, to the King Edward Memorial Hospital for Consumptives. J. M. Godfrey, Toronto, one of the fund trustees, has been authorized by Mr. Lumsden to convey the property.

It was formerly run as a summer hotel, the Bellevue, and is easily reached from Mattawa on the C.P.R. or from Haileybury. It is in the midst of the most wonderful wild scenery, lake and forest.

CENTENARY PROGRAMME

British Peace Committee Lays Out Elaborate Plans.

London, Dec. 19.—The British committee, organized for the celebration in 1914 of the centenary of Anglo-American peace, has drawn up a very comprehensive program which was made public yesterday.

It is proposed that a monument to George Washington be erected in Westminster Hall, adjoining the House of Commons.

It is also proposed that Sulgrave Manor, Northamptonshire, the ancestral home of Washington, should be purchased, and that an organized effort be made on both sides of the Atlantic and in the British colonies to promote well-considered educational methods and the growth of the feelings of mutual respect, affection and good-will, as well as mutual knowledge among the peoples of British and American descent.

Lectureships at the principal universities, prizes for essays on Anglo-American relations and new school readers are to be included in the educational scheme.

It is estimated that for these purposes $250,000 to $300,000 will be necessary, and substantial subscriptions have already been received.

This announcement was made yesterday by Earl Grey at a meeting held at the Mansion House, and presided over by the Lord Mayor of London. Many prominent persons were present.

Earl Grey pointed out that although the boundaries of Canada and the United States are side by side for four thousand miles, there is not a sentinel, a fort, nor a gun along them. He recalled the visit to Ottawa of Elihu Root and the impression created by his emphatic declaration that peace between the two countries would remain unbroken. The sum mentioned is indispensable for an adequate celebration is $250,000.

Remember, drop a post card to Mr. Miles at once, and receive by return mail this handsome map, without any charge whatever.

Bonar Law Made Mistake.

Montreal, Dec. 19.—A London special cable to The Witness yesterday says:

"From a party standpoint there is now no question whatever that Mr. Bonar Law made a disastrous mistake in his proposal, made at a meeting at Ashton-under-Lyne, under the presidency of Sir Max Aitken, to shift the odium of imposing taxes on food of the people of the United Kingdom from the shoulders of his own party to those of the overseas Dominions.

"To-day there is a chorus of dissent from the Conservative press, and there is a growing opinion that Mr. Bonar Law's leadership of the Unionist party is fast drawing to a close, as there is a powerful and rapidly-increasing section of the Unionists who are determined to shake themselves free of the cause of tariff reform."

May Discharge Force.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 19.—This city will have only one policeman if a disagreement between the council and the Provincial Government continues. The Government at present appoints the chief and the city pays him. The city has applied for the power to appoint the chief, who appoints the force.

In order to force the Government to surrender control of the appointment, the City Council yesterday adopted a resolution presented by H. R. McLellan, commissioner of safety, providing for the reduction of the force to one man on Dec. 31.

Silver lavalliers, as well as silver rings, are fads of the moment.

A PLAGUE OF RABBITS.

Australia Doesn't Seem Able to Check the Spread of the Pests.

Australia is still suffering from a plague of rabbits. Ceaseless slaughter of the bunnies is effectual only in checking in a few instances their spread, for they breed so rapidly that extermination seems impossible. Stock raisers are wire netting their properties, digging out the burrows and destroying all surface cover. The government is helping by selling wire netting at a nominal price. In the hot districts they are poisoning the water.

Eight or ten rabbits eat or destroy as much grass as one sheep. As there are many millions of rabbits the loss is appalling.

Evidence of the way the rabbits are being slaughtered is the fact that from New South Wales alone 5,718,839 pounds of their skins were exported in 1911, 5,050,000 pounds in 1910 and 3,185,000 pounds in 1909. The total exportation of skins from the commonwealth of Australia last year was 10,-385,716 pounds.—New York World.

Blasting With Water.

A new method of mining is being practiced in German and other coal shafts that is said to do away with dangerous blasting, while also avoiding much of the risk of spontaneous explosion of coal dust. Deep holes are bored in the coal and water is introduced into them by pipes under heavy pressure. The water finds its way through the coal fissures and opens them up until the mass is loosened, when it is readily removed while wet without any dust or the use of any tools other than a light pick and a shovel.—Harper's.

Bacon's House.

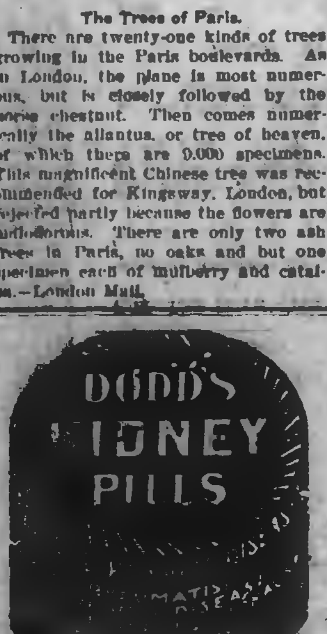
Lovers of Bacon will be grieved to learn that his house at Gorhambury is falling to rack and ruin. It has been more or less of a ruin for years past, but on revisiting it the other day after a lapse of some years I found one of the Roman statues gone, and of the other one only the trunk remained. One of the Roman medallions had gone. Unless something is done promptly the whole building will fall to pieces. It is to be hoped that Lord Verulam will take steps to preserve the house of his illustrious ancestor.—London Graphic.

A Major Butt Memorial.

Designs have been completed for the memorial bridge which the city of Augusta, Ga., is to erect in honor of Major Archibald W. Butt, who perished in the Titanic disaster. It will be a handsome re-enforced concrete structure in three arches, spanning the Augusta canal, which is 150 feet wide. Memorial adornments, including a bronze tablet and a handrailing formed of sixteen inverted cannon linked by a heavy cable chain, will be added by the Archibald Butt Memorial association.

The Trees of Paris.

There are twenty-one kinds of trees growing in the Paris boulevards. As in London, the plane is most numerous, but is closely followed by the horse chestnut. Then comes numerically the allantus, or tree of heaven, of which there are 9,000 specimens. This magnificent Chinese tree was recommended for Kingsway, London, but rejected partly because the flowers are malodorous. There are only two ash trees in Paris, no oaks and but one specimen each of mulberry and catalpa.—London Mail.



How Little Jack Guessed A Christmas Secret

T was the afternoon before Christmas, and the air was full of big, feathery snowflakes. Jack and Mary stood at the window watching them, and Baby Jane sat on the floor.

"See how pretty they are!" cried Jack, clapping his hands. "They're just like fairies going to a Christmas party."

Mary clapped her hands, too, and Baby Jane thumped her rattle on the floor and crowed. But Mrs. Brown looked out of the window rather anxiously.

The store was a mile away, and the snow seemed to come thicker and faster every minute.

"How do you s'pose Santa Claus can get here in such a storm?" asked Jack, at which Mary's face clouded.

Perhaps this thought was troubling Mrs. Brown. She didn't answer for more than a minute, not until Jack spoke again.

"Pooh 'n' nonsense!" he said. "This isn't much of a snow. I could go in it myself well's not."

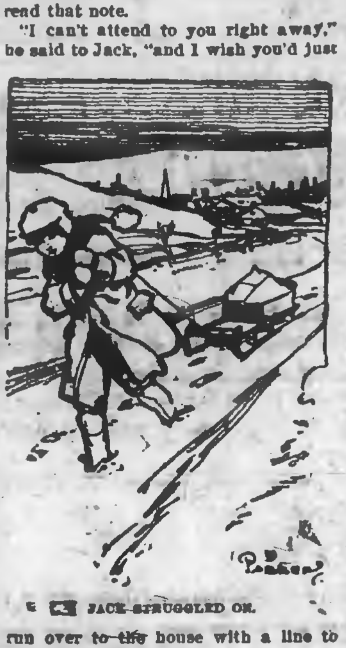
"Could you, dear?" asked his mother quickly. "I'm afraid it's a chance if papa gets home before tomorrow, the wood road will be so blocked, and I want some things from the store tonight. Do you suppose you can go with your sled, Jackie?"

"Why, yes!" cried Jack, delighted enough, and in a very few minutes be was ready to start.

"Give this note to Mr. Simpkins," said his mother, "and then you won't have anything to remember. And be careful, dear, and hurry home as fast as you can."

Mr. Simpkins' eyes twinkled when he read that note.

"I can't attend to you right away," he said to Jack, "and I wish you'd just run over to the house with a line to Mrs. Simpkins for me."



JACK STRUGGLED ON.

"Yes, sir," answered Ted.

Mr. Simpkins had the bundles tucked away in the sled box and covered with thick brown paper, that the snow couldn't get through, when Jack came back.

"Hard night for Santa Claus to get around," he said, pinching the boy's red cheek. "Do you suppose you'll see him at your house?"

"I hope he'll come," answered Jack politely, "but I don't guess I'll see him, sir."

"I saw him once," Mr. Simpkins said soberly, "when he was a little boy, about your size. He looked a great deal like you too."

When he got home mother had a plate of hot oatmeal pudding with sugar and real cream waiting for him, and she whisked the bundles out of the sled box and into the pantry in a hurry.

All this time the snow kept falling, falling, and the wind blew until the little house fairly shook. If it had been set on a hill there is no saying what might have happened. Jack felt a good deal troubled. He told his mother what Mr. Simpkins had said about Santa Claus when she was tucking him into bed for the night.

"I'm 'fraid he can't get here," said he, "and then Mary will be so disappointed."

But his mother laughed, stooping down for the good night kiss. "Don't worry, dear," she said. "Santa Claus won't mind this little storm."

And, sure enough, when morning came the three little stockings hanging beside the chimney were stuffed as full as they could hold.

Jack looked thoughtful a minute. His eyes danced. He put his lips close to his mother's ear.

"I do b'lieve I know what Mr. Simpkins meant," he said, "but I shan't tell Mary. And it's lots of fun, just the same."

We all believe life should be lived richly, but we grumble at the expense.

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

I HAD been west taking a convalescent patient to his home and was returning to Toronto when a case fell unexpectedly into my hands. The Pullman conductor startled us early one morning by calling out to know if there was a physician in the car. There was no response, so without hesitation I offered my services. He took me at once into the stateroom and introduced me to a worried-looking young man. There was no need to ask his trouble. On the couch tossed a little girl of five or six years, her cheeks and eyes bright with fever.

I had a few simple remedies with me, but the child showed rather alarming symptoms of an aggravated cold. Deciding to take no risk, I sent a telegram ahead, and when we reached Winnipeg a physician with necessary medicines came aboard and accompanied us to Port Arthur.

Dorothy escaped all of the maladies with which she was threatened and by the time we reached Toronto was very much better. However, Mr. Singleton, her father, retained me, and the three of us went to a fashionable hotel.

The little girl continued to improve, but the spontaneous gayety of childhood was lacking.

Christmas was approaching and Dorothy was now able to go about. I was instructed to take her to shops and matinees—in fact, to do everything to afford her amusement. Her father suggested that she give a Christmas tree for twenty less fortunate little girls, and he kept the big limousine car touring the shopping district while we played Santa Claus.

One day we had been out all of the afternoon. Dorothy had selected twenty dolls, and in retrospect I viewed my own meager childhood and fancied what such a glorious afternoon would have meant to me, but the child appeared more listless then usual. Feeling rather anxious, I took her temperature, gave her some stimulating nourishment and asked her to get into my lap while I read to her.

Dorothy had the beautiful old-young manners in which the little children of the rich are drilled, and always treated me with careful consideration and politeness, regardless of her own wishes. Obediently she climbed into my lap, put her head against my shoulder, and I began to read aloud a wonderful Christmas tale. We are all of us children in the story. Dorothy was very quiet, and as I turned a page I looked down to see if she had fallen asleep. To my consternation the wide blue eyes were brimming with tears, fast overflowing and running down the child's white cheeks. As I dropped the book and clasped her closely in my arms she gave way to convulsive sobs.

Mr. Singleton came in. The opening of the door roused Dorothy, and, seeing her father she stretched eager arms to him and cried out:

"Father, dear I don't want a tree. I just want mother for Christmas."

I placed the child in her father's arms and left the room. An hour passed and then Mr. Singleton rapped on my door. He told me the story. Mrs. Singleton was not dead, as I had supposed; she was in Paris, and if the separation of which he told me was caused by fault of hers he did not so much as hint at it.

Mr. Singleton cabled at once to Paris. There would just be time.

Christmas Eve came and still no word, and though Mr. Singleton's face looked thin and strained, he started out with Dorothy at noon, telling her they were going to have a grand and glorious time that afternoon.

I was left to attend to the last details of the tree that stood in glittering bravery in the center of the sitting room. There was a lot to do, and I was bustling around when the door flew open and a radiant young woman rushed in, calling:

"Dun! Dorothy!"

Stopping quickly, her look arrested by my uniform, she exclaimed: "He—she—oh, who is ill?" She faltered, going white.

My smiling assurance that all was well brought forth a thousand questions, and we both talked at once, and I helped her off with her wraps. She cried in my arms and kissed me with fervor when I told her of how Dorothy had begged for her, and then she bubbled over and we had a gay afternoon finishing the tree.

Mrs. Singleton was on the stepladder laughing down at me when Dorothy and her father came in. The laugh died on her lips, but I caught his glorified look and heard Dorothy's glad cry. Then I crept silently from the room, feeling the loneliness of spinsterhood as I had never thought to do.

Whom to Thank

"I suppose you feel very thankful to Santa Claus for providing you with such a fine turkey?" said the minister to Uncle 'Lijah's little boy.

"Naw, sah," replied the piccaninny. "Uncle tole dis chile ter be than'ful ter Farmer Green fur leavin' his henhouse dore on de jar."

STRATEGY

It Was Practiced by a Girl In Behalf of Her Lover

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Great heavens, you are to fight the best swordsman and the best shot in the German army!"

The words were spoken by Madeline Crosby to Fred Barrington, both members of the American colony in Berlin.

"That being the case, I may as well bid you an eternal farewell," said the latter.

"You must apologize."

"Tell me how the trouble came about."

"I was dining at a cafe. A man in the uniform of a German officer sat at the next table. I was trying to give an order to the waiter and, I presume, got the wrong word for something I intended to express, for the officer smiled. I asked him what he was smiling at, whereupon he laughed. I must have blundered worse than before. I was angry, and, picking up part of a loaf of bread lying on the table, I threw it at him, striking him in the face and breaking his eyeglasses."

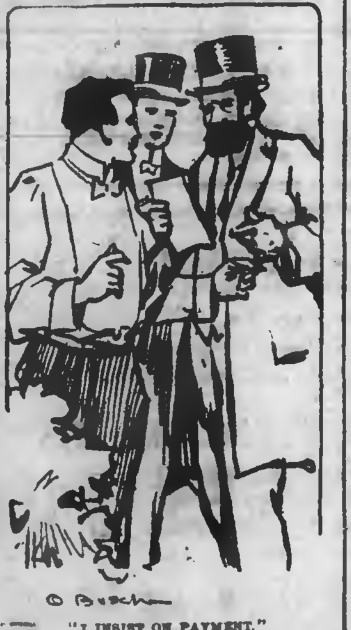
"Were there many in the cafe besides yourselves?"

"It was full. There were a number of army officers present."

"Then there is no hope for you. An insult to a German officer in the presence of his comrades can only be wiped out by an encounter. I know Captain von Ballenstein, having often met him at social functions. And I know his reputation as a shot and a swordsman. How could you have been so rash?"

"I would do it again under the same circumstances."

"Luckily you have but one life to lose. When does the meeting come off?"



"I INSIST ON PAYMENT."

"Not till the day after tomorrow. You see I need all the time I can get for practice, so I made an excuse to have the affair put off as long as possible. By the bye, how did you hear of the affair?"

"At the reception last night at the palace. Several persons spoke of it."

"At home the police would be watching to prevent such a meeting."

"Well, goodby. When we meet again I suppose it will be in heaven. I must go to my fencing master for practice."

"Practice! Little good practice will do you against Captain von Ballenstein. If he would only wing you it would be another matter. But he never permits his antagonist to get away in that fashion. When he fought his first duel he disarmed his antagonist. So great was his reputation that all the young bloods in the army were ambitious of the honor of having been out with him and he was constantly provoked. Then he commenced to wing them. This not stopping the annoyance, he began to kill them. It is now understood that any one who insults Captain von Ballenstein will be killed."

"May I not call once more before I"—

"No. I am too provoked with you."

She extended her hand. Barrington bent his head and pressed his lips upon it. Then for the first time a sad look appeared on his face, usually a stranger to care, and, turning, he left her.

Miss Crosby threw herself on to a sofa and covered her face with her hands. She loved this hot blooded South Carolinian, though as yet there had been no lovemaking between them. Indeed, this danger of losing him had revealed to her her true feelings toward him. She sat in deep thought, absorbed with the problem as to how she might prevent this sacrifice of one she loved without tarnishing his honor. She could gain access to the emperor, but at that time he had never interfered to prevent a duel, though since he has done so in cases where there was not sufficient cause. No; there was no ordinary way to carry her point. If she acted at all it must be by stratagem.

Presently she started up. A plan had suggested itself to her. Calling her butler, she said to him:

"Heinrich, I wish you to find me a loan broker or whatever those persons are called who have money to lend at high rates of interest and tell him to come to see me at once."

"Yes, fraulein." And the man withdrew, wondering what his rich mistress could want of a loan broker. He returned with one Moses Wiel, who asked the lady what he could do for her.

"Do you know Captain Herman von Ballenstein?"

"I know him well, fraulein."

"Quite likely. I have understood he is heavily in debt."

"Captain von Ballenstein does not at present owe me anything."

"But there are plenty of his due bills on the market, are there not?"

"They are perfectly good. His grandfather is very feeble and cannot live the year out. At his death the captain will come into a fine estate."

"How many of Von Ballenstein's due bills can you buy—I mean to what aggregate amount?"

"None at a discount."

"At a premium?"

"Whatever amount is desired."

"Very well. Go and buy as many as possible and report to me this evening what you have succeeded in doing."

Sitting down before a desk she wrote him a check for such funds as he would need for the purpose, though he protested that any funds in advance from her were not necessary. He left her, assuring her that he would have no difficulty in filling her order and the troubled look that had rested on her face partly disappeared.

The same evening the broker reported that he had purchased various due bills signed by Captain von Ballenstein to the amount of 90,000 marks, and, returning her a balance of 10,000 marks less his commission, left her.

The next evening, notwithstanding that she had refused Barrington permission to see her again before his meeting with Captain von Ballenstein, he called, as she expected he would, for a final goodby.

"You are beginning to realize your position, I perceive," she said, noticing a sadness resting on his features.

"There is an especial cause for regret," he replied.

"And that is?"

"I have been suddenly made aware at the approach of almost certain death that there is one I would not leave."

Miss Crosby cast down her eyes and waited. Barrington continued:

"Were it not for this prospect of being snuffed out I could not muster courage to tell an heiress that, were I permitted to live, my life would be worthless to me without her. Since I must die I feel privileged to do so. Madeline, I love you."

An hour later Barrington left Miss Crosby's residence, the sadness with which he had entered in one respect relieved, in another intensified. He knew she loved him and that there was little doubt that he would be killed in his coming encounter. His only hope was that his enemy would leave a little life in him and that he might recover.

The ground on which the affair was to take place was in a secluded spot near Berlin. Von Ballenstein arrived first and found a man waiting for him, who stepped up to him and presenting a bit of paper said:

"Herr Captain, I hold your note for 15,000 marks. Before you put your life in jeopardy I insist on payment."

The captain looked annoyed as he replied that he could not so suddenly raise the amount, and that his reputation for skill in such matters precluded the likelihood that he would be even injured. But his creditor stood firm and, turning to a man whom he had brought with him, said:

"Herr Sheriff, you will make the arrest."

One of Von Ballenstein's seconds stepped up and, learning of the proposed arrest for debt, asked the amount of the bill. When it was given him he wrote an order on his bank for it. At the same time Barrington arrived, and the captain's party were about to measure off the ground when the creditor produced another due bill, this time for 20,000 marks. This amount was taken care of by another of Von Ballenstein's friends, but the obligations kept coming. They were all secured till 97,000 marks had been disposed of, when the funds of the party gave out. Three thousand marks remained to be paid.

Barrington had been a silent spectator of these proceedings up to this point, when he was informed that the duel must be deferred till his adversary had returned to the city and arranged for the payment of the remaining 3,000 marks.

"It would be a pity that Captain von Ballenstein should be deprived of the pleasure of killing me for the want of so small an amount. I have that much in a letter of credit which I will make over to this bloodsucker and we will proceed."

This was too much for Captain von Ballenstein. "I not only withdraw my challenge," he said to Barrington, "but permit me to apologize for having laughed at your attempt to express yourself in the German language."

Then the party returned to Berlin and to breakfast.

Madeline Crosby, now Mrs. Barrington, kept the secret of her strategic interference that saved her lover. It was supposed in Berlin that Von Ballenstein's creditors really prevented the fight. Barrington's offer to go security for his opponent's debt that the captain might be permitted to kill him was favorably commented on and the latter was excused by his fellow officers of the army for not making mincement of one with such thoroughbred instincts.

Fall of Bizani Certain.

Athens, Dec. 18.—The continued assaults by the Greeks on Fort Bizani, the key to the town of Janina, and regarded by the Turks as impregnable, have been so successful that its defenders will be able to resist only a few hours longer, according to a semi-official account of the fighting around Janina.

The batteries of Bizani were silenced after a bombardment which lasted all day yesterday. One shell destroyed the artillery magazine while others put out of operation in succession the guns of the enemy's batteries.

The right wing of the Greek forces is advancing towards Fort Drom at the summit of the mountain opposite Bizani. Great confusion prevails among the defenders of this fort. The guns are being removed and the Turks are leaving.

G.T.P. To Cut Rates.

Winnipeg, Dec. 18.—To prevent, if possible, any repetition of last year's conditions at the head of the lakes in connection with the movement of all-rail grain to the millers in eastern Canada, and with a view to giving the farmers in western Canada every opportunity of marketing their grain to the greatest possible advantage the Grand Trunk Pacific are establishing rates to the Atlantic seaboard for export, and to eastern Canadian points via Chicago. These rates are in addition to rates on the Fort William basis to Duluth, Superior, St. Paul and Minneapolis, which have been in effect since last February.

These rates carry with them milling-in-transit privileges, and are expected to be of great benefit to the millers in Ontario. The rates to eastern Canada take effect on the 20th of this month, and those for export on Jan. 20, 1913.

Higher allowances to deserted wives from deserting husbands? Thus is the cost of living increased to the poor man!—New York Tribune.

A Paris scientist predicts that the next generation will contrive to make electricity a substitute for beef. If that happens there will, of course, be an advance in the price of electricity.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary of England are said to be rivals for supremacy, but it is pretty generally conceded that Queen Alexandra has the sympathies of the people, who are much fonder of her than of the colder and more conservative Queen Mary.

ICELAND'S DRUNKEN ORGIES.

They Got So Bad the Nation Adopted a Total Prohibition Law.

In its addiction to the use of alcohol Iceland developed a national problem like China's with regard to opium. Like China, too, Iceland finally got its eyes open to what the habit was costing, not only in character depletion and personal misery, but in plain dollars and cents. With the beginning of this year a total prohibition law went into effect.

There are only about 85,000 people in Iceland. The chief city is Reykjavik, where the new Althing House is located. Along the coasts and on the edges of the fiords are the trading stations, to which the farmer carries his produce on horseback. With him there used to go habitually a wooden keg for replenishing. As a rule, the farmer was drunk before he started for home and almost entirely dependent upon the sagacity of his pony to get him safely back to the farm. Interesting stories are told of the intelligence and devotion of these beasts. When the man would roll off into the roadway the dumb brute would stand over him until he roused from his drunken slumber and could proceed on his way. When finally he reached his destination a family orgy began, in which even the children were allowed to join.

The nation's fight against alcohol was precipitated by the Good Templars in 1885. Three years later there were a number of flourishing temperance societies. In 1900 a law was passed forbidding the manufacture of alcoholic spirits, and in 1908 a prohibition bill was laid before the constituents. A hard fight ensued on the "personal liberty" issue, but the majority of the people had become convinced that the nation's hope lay in a complete divorce from alcohol, and the bill became law on Jan. 1, 1912.

Chroniclers of the Icelandic story claim for Iceland the honor of being the first country in the world to forbid the sale of intoxicants throughout its territory.—New York Post.

WINTER TOURIST TRIPS

Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern, luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With one change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast, where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides, it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m., January 6th, via Detroit, for Palm Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

Rest and Good Looks.

Every woman should learn to rest if she is anxious to keep her good looks. The one who leads a very busy life should acquire the habit of availing herself of every few spare minutes for this purpose. Let her analyze the art of relaxation and practice it in this way:

Hang the arms loosely at the side and then begin to move them slowly backward and forward from side to side. Now open the fingers wide and shake the hands loosely from the wrists and after this practice the same exercise with the legs and feet.

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

THREE NORWOOD MEN CAUSED TROUBLE

One Was Arrested And His Pals Attempted His Rescue From P. C. Reid---Each Was Fined $5.75

A strenuous struggle occurred shortly after eight o'clock last night, when P.C. Reid was taking three Norwood men into custody for acting in a disorderly manner while intoxicated. The officer while patrolling his beat saw the three men going east on Hunter street, shouting and swearing. He followed them to the Munro House, where he arrested one of the trio named Patrick Heffernan. The other two men commenced to interfere with the police officer in the hope of liberating their friend.

A big crowd followed the constable all the way down Water street, right to the police station. Just before the officer could get his man inside the door, a brother of the arrested man jumped on P.C. Reid and tried to pull his companion away.

Chief Thompson, Sergeant Adams and Detective Newhall were inside the station and gave P.C. Reid assistance. A free fight lasted for about five minutes inside the station before the men were finally overcome and locked up.

In police court this morning three of them who are brothers named Patrick, Richard and Michael Heffernan, and another party, John Hert, were all found guilty and fined $5.75 each, to be paid forthwith. Patrick was charged with being drunk and disorderly and the other three with obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty.

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER MADE BEST SPEECH OF HIS LIFE

Memorable Scene in House at Ottawa, as the Minister of Commerce Replies to the Opposition Speakers on the Navy Debate.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., arrived home from Ottawa on the early train this morning. To the Review he said the scene at the closing of the House yesterday was one long to be remembered. A large attendance with the Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia greeted Hon. Geo. E. Foster, who on rising to begin his speech in connection with the naval debate, was cheered and applauded to the echo by the Government members.

Much was expected but not as much as Mr. Foster gave. For two hours and a half he handled Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Graham, Mr. Oliver and Dr. Clarke without gloves.

"It is freely conceded," said Mr. Burnham, "that he made the greatest speech of his life and possibly the best ever delivered in the House at Ottawa.

"Immediately after the close of his speech, the Government House party withdrew. This is said to have given some dissatisfaction to the Opposition, who were prepared to go on with the debate, but Mr. Guthrie simply challenged the Government to go to the country on the question after redistribution, which the opposition would aid in every way in its power, and then moved the adjournment till after Christmas."

TO OPEN NEW HALL.

Mr. Burnham and Col. Scott, Grand Master of the Orangemen of British North America, went to Campbellford to-day to open a large new Orange Hall. Mr. Burnham who has been invited to deliver an address will speak upon the French and the Church.

VALUABLE AND INTERESTING EXHIBITS AT THE MUSEUM

Commencing to-morrow and continuing each day, short talks on the exhibits and curios at the museum at the Public Library will appear in the Review. Press representatives were the guests of Curator T. A. S. Hay last night and two very pleasant hours were spent. It would be impossible to do justice to the museum, in the space available to-day.

At the present time, Mr. Hay is handicapped by the lack of display cases for the articles constantly coming in. There is no appropriation for the carrying on of the work, so that assistance in the way of donations of cases and furniture will be appreciated.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY CAN NOW DO BUSINESS

The Co-operative Society of Peterborough, operating under a charter of this Province, held their first meeting of shareholders last night, when Mr. Joseph Begley presided over a large attendance. After preliminary business had been settled Mr. W. Edwards took the chair, and the election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mr. Jos. Begley.

Treasurer—Mr. Alex. Murary.

Committee—Messrs. Common, Duncan, Lancaster, Hickey, Cuffe, Haw, Adams, Harding, Sharp

Secretary—Mr. J. Pitchford.

The result of this meeting enables the newly elected committee to transact business as a legally incorporated body, the former committee being purely provisional.

Seigneurs Ask Intervention.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The seigneurial court of Canada, being the direct lineal descendants of the original French feudal lords of the country, yesterday, through Forsythe de Fronsac, Vicompte de Marechal de Bisson, presented to the State Department a petition begging the United States to intervene to oblige Great Britain to submit to the arbitration of The Hague the claim of the seigneurs to their vast estates and properties in the new world, of which they assert, in their petition, they were unlawfully dispossessed by the swarms of English peasantry which overran Canada after the cession of that country by France, in 1763.

Declaring that this action on the part of the British Government was in direct violation of the treaty with France, the petitioners beg the Government of the United States to take up their cause and insist that it be arbitrated before the Panama Canal tolls question is laid before The Hague tribunal.

The State Department will give the petition the usual consideration.

No Seafaring Instinct.

London, Dec. 19.—Truth, which takes an independent liberal outlook, especially on matters of an Imperial nature, expressed the opinion yesterday that Laurier's view that Canada's fleet should be in her own ports will eventually be the view of a great majority of Canadians, and assuredly in the long run is the best policy for England and the Empire generally. However, the idea of Canada building and manning ships right away is a trifle chimerical.

"The truth is," declares the paper "that Canada and Australia have not the seafaring instinct which goes before the creation of sea power. All navies worth anything have grown out of merchant shipping."

GREEKS RECOMMENDED BY TURKS TO TAKE BETTER AIM

Constantinople, Dec. 20.—During an engagement between Turkish and Greek fleets off Dardenelles Straits recently, the rival commanders exchanged pleasantries by wireless. The Greek commander telegraphed: "We have occupied the Islands of Tenedos and await your orders." To this the Turkish Admiral replied, "Your shells are falling wide. We would recommend you to take better aim." Little damage was done in the engagement.

London, Dec. 20.—The peace conference held a brief session yesterday. The Turkish delegates announced that fresh instructions had been despatched from Constantinople by special courier, therefore adjournment until Saturday was taken, by which time instructions should reach London.

News comes from the Ottoman capital that the Government is empowering the delegates to proceed with the negotiations with the Greek as well as the Balkan plenipotentiaries. This decision tends towards peace, as there has been a suspicion that the Turks were manoeuvering for time so that they might strengthen their army.

The conference is now in exactly the same position as the Portsmouth conference after the first week's work. The different parties are daily feeling the ground before striking a decisive blow.

After the sitting yesterday some of the Balkan delegates expressed disgust at the way affairs were dragging, while five armies and three besieged towns were enduring all the sufferings of war and the respective countries were the prey of desolation, misery and death.

A Bulgarian delegate observed that the Turks were much mistaken if they delayed the conference, hoping to strengthen their army with troops from Asia. These reinforcements were chiefly composed of undisciplined Bashi-Basouks, who would prove a serious danger not to the enemy but to the Turks themselves.

In the meantime the allies are concentrating greater forces along the Tchatalja front to enable them, if war is resumed, to arrive at Constantinople within a few days

The prevailing opinion is that the various postponements are aiming at intervention by the powers. Turkey hopes to obtain better terms through the powers, some of whom have predominant interests in the Ottoman Empire. Besides, Turkey would consider it less humiliating to cede territory on pressure from the powers than at the command of those Balkan States, which were depicted to the Mussulman world until recently as negigible quantities.

The Greek proposals will be more complicated than those of the other allies, because they include the question of capitulations, which Greece alone among the Balkan States, enjoys in Turkey with the great powers. The capitulations, originally imposed on Turkey by the Republic of Genoa in 1553, include exemption from taxation for foreign subjects, special courts and other privileges. Greece is ready to accept a clause in the treaty with promising to renounce the right of capitulations when the other powers do the same.

Another delegate arrived yesterday. He brought important papers to Premier Veniselos. He is Rizo Rangabe, whose father, writer, poet, and archaeologist, was called "The Victor Hugo of Greece."

FOUR-YEAR-OLD PLAYMATES DROWNED WHEN ICE BROKE

While Standing on Thin Ice Two Tots at Swansea Break Through—Position of the Bodies Seems to Show That the Girl Attempted to Save Her Companion and Was Drowned Too.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—One tiny hand protruding from a hole in the ice led to the discovery of the lifeless bodies of Albert Samuel Prosser, aged four, and Bessie Morton, also four years, in a pond at Swansea at 4.45 yesterday afternoon.

When taken from the water the bodies were quite cold, showing that life had been extinct for at least 30 minutes. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, M.P.P., of Mimico, worked until late in the evening in an attempt to restore the two children to life, but his efforts were of no avail.

The position of the bodies when they were located would indicate that the little girl lost her life attempting to save the boy. It was only her arm that could be seen above the water, and her other hand was resting on Albert's. He was lying about two feet under water.

It is thought that the two children had gone on to the pond to slide. The boy ran ahead, stamping with his foot to test the ice. The ice gave way and he went through. To all appearance Bessie ran forward and held out her hand to him. But he was too heavy for her. The ice broke again and they were drowned. The pond itself is in a deep gully. The western side is the only way the gully can be entered with safety. Here Southport street borders the pond, separating it from the main marsh to the west, known as Sewer Pipe Pond.

The boy and girl reached the pond by Southport street. There is a thicket growing around it, and only one clear entrance to the ice is afforded. This is directly behind the house of D. Walker, whose yard extends to the water.

Although there are fully a dozen houses within a stone's throw of where the drowning occurred, no one heard any cries or saw the accident. There was a concert being given in the village school to close it, preparatory to the Christmas holidays. Nearly every house in the vicinity was locked up while the parents attended the concert to hear their children recite or sing.

Bessie and Albert were to young to attend school, so they had been sent out to play. They were seen at Sylvester's grocer store on Windermere avenue about four o'clock. They then disappeared.

LEFT ESTATE TO FAMILY

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—The will of Sir Richard Cartwright was entered for probation at the court house here yesterday.

The total estate is valued at $238,292.90, but out of this debts, amounting to $155,000, will be taken. This leaves his widow, three daughters and six sons with less than $80,000 to share among them.

To his widow he leaves all the household furniture, plate, linen, china, provisions and other household effects, in addition to a legacy, to be paid to her by the executors.

All the rest of his estate and effects, both real and personal, were left to the disposal of his two sons, Dr. Richard C. Cartwright and Alexander D. Cartwright of Ottawa, who are to sell the real estate together or in parcels by public auction or private contract, with power to make any stipulations as to the title or evidence of the title or otherwise.

The surviving sons will also call in and convert into money the residuary personal estate, and therefrom pay all debts and funeral expenses.

The annual income, rents, issues and profits of this residuary are to be paid in quarterly payments to his wife during the whole period of her life.

To his three daughters — Harriet, Eliza, Frances Madeline and Mary Josephine, he leaves $20,000 each, to be paid after the death of his wife. In the event of anyone of them dying, leaving an heir or heirs, the money is to be bequeathed to them when they are twenty-one years of age.

The late Sir Richard Cartwright owned real property valued at $28,000, bank and other stocks valued at $63,790.27, furniture valued at $3,000 and several other effects, bringing the total up to $238,392.90.

No mention is made in the will of the proceeds of Sir Richard's book, which is reported as having a tremendous sale.

WHITNEY PULS QUIETUS ON TAX REFORM MEASURES

Assessment Committee, Declares its Faith in the Merits of the Present Act if Properly Interpreted—Premier Sharply Criticizes "New-Fangled" Methods.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—Tax reform received a severe blow yesterday. The two bills introduced by N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, and J. A. Ellis, Conservative M.P.P. for Ottawa, were rejected by the special tax committee. These bills aimed at a radical revision of the present Assessment Act. The committee, by a vote of 20 to 7, decided that the proposed legislation was unsuitable, or, in other words, the present act was entirely satisfactory—if properly administered.

After the bills had been put out of commission the Government side of the committee introduced a motion, which nobly defended the present Assessment Act, and carried it by a similar vote to that which defeated the Rowell-Ellis bills.

Mr. Rowell made an amendment to the Government motion to the effect that there should be a lower tax on improvements than on lands, including buildings, businesses and incomes, but this also met the fate of the Liberal leader's bills.

Sir James Whitney, who was in England during the previous sitting of the committee, gave his views during a general discussion on taxation. In vigorous terms he classed the Rowell-Ellis amendments as entirely unnecessary. He was positively opposed to the principles of the bills. They suggested a harum-scarum remedy for a disease which did not exist in the province. "Until we need a change let us stay as we are," said he. "There is no necessity for such single tax legislation."

Sir James spoke for about a half-hour against a revision of the Assessment Act, as proposed. "In my humble opinion, admitting everything that is contained in the two bills, you still have to prove the necessity for a change of the Assessment Act as it now stands. If municipalities get proper assessors no amendment to the act whatever is necessary. I would suggest that elaborate explanations of the act should be sent to every assessor in the province, and after a time if the act does not work out satisfactorily, it would be up to the Government of Ontario to show it. There is one statute on the statute books with which no fault can be found, and that is the Assessment Act."

The Premier wanted to know where the single tax policy had worked out satisfactorily. "What is there in this new system that we should have it?" he asked. "Why not wait to see how it works in other places? Is it not better to use our own wit than to follow every doctrine proposed by any Tom, Dick or Harry on the continent?" He said that the single tax system was not poison, but the class of papers that took it up did not express the sentiment of the people. Because new communities had accepted it there was no reason why Ontario should gallop over the proposition and accept it holus-bolus. Sir James was very much amused at the predictions of certain newspapers, while he was away, that tax reform had scored a great victory already, the whole matter of the new "progressive" legislation being settled.

If the Assessment Act was not working out satisfactorily to all classes it was not the fault of the act, but it was due to inefficient officials. All that was necessary was the appointment of capable assessors by councils.

Additional information was heard by the committee during the morning session. Ernest Drury of the Dominion Grange said that the present system was a hardship to progressive farmers. He believed that the general public was opposed to the taxation of improvements. Fifty-five out of 165 township clerks in Ontario, in reply to a circular sent out by the Grange, said that land values were assessed higher than improvements. This fact showed a general evasion of the act and a large amount of local option existed. Mr. Drury urged the local option policy, it being his belief that the matter should be largely left to the discretion of local judges. The farming community would welcome local option in matters relating to taxation. There was no reason why a farmer should be penalized for improving his own property.

James McEwing said that the Dominion Grange did not want single tax. Local option was what was desired, so that any [illegible] might be free to tax or not to [illegible]

THE MAGIC CARPET

A Thanksgiving Story.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

The committee on repairs walked down the aisle and wagged disapproval at each pew.

"It never struck me before how untasteful it was to have every pew carpeted different," wheezed Miss Lee importantly. "They look just like folks' houses. Jeremiah Little's is got a piece of his parlor carpet spread on it, and all it needs is a basket of wax flowers to make you think you're sitting in his front room at a funeral."

The other members of the committee cast surreptitious glances at their several pews, each with its gayly covered floor and fat, carpeted hassocks. Then they looked at Sarah Lee's own pew, with its neat red floor covering that exactly matched the carpet in the aisle.

Miss Lee reddened. "That's neither here nor there," she said hurriedly. "The facts are these: Daniel Merton has sent us $1,000 for the church repairs. Dr. Long says $500 will be needed for repairs to the building and belfry. The other $500 is to be used by the ladies of the committee to redecorate the inside and for a new carpet to cover all the pews."

"My pew will remain as it is," said Serena calmly.

The committee drew a unanimous breath of dismay.

"I know it," replied Serena.

"I should think that when a man cares enough for the old church he was baptized in to send $1,000 for repairs it would be a delicate attention on the part of the committee to refurnish his old family pew," said Dr. Long's wife bitterly.

"Perhaps Mr. Merton would prefer to see the old church restored rather than redecorated. He must have tender recollections of the old pew with his mother's carpet on the floor and the same old hassocks he knelt on when a boy. I am sure he would rather see the chancel restored to its oldtime beauty rather than done over in the latest fashion," said Serena Webb eagerly.

"Rubbish!" sneered Sarah Lee. "A man as smart as Dan Merton—a man who left Redbush a poor young man and is today a millionaire—must be up to date. He ain't no back number," she ended, with a triumphant relapse into slang. "He'd admire to see his money's been put to some good purpose."

The other ladies nodded approval of this statement, all save Serena Webb, who was gazing wistfully at the dim and faded frescoes in the chancel.

"So, you see, Miss Webb, Dan Merton would be pleased enough to have his old family pew done over new. We're planning to have it all done by Thanksgiving and then invite him down and have a regular thanksgiving over the hull thing," said Miss Lee persuasively.

"My pew will remain as it is," said Serena firmly as she turned toward the door. "I have paid for it."

"Very well," returned the other bitingly. "I shall take care to let Dan Merton know that a stranger has come to Redbush who ain't grateful enough for his generosity to try to please him. I shall let him know."

Once within the gate of her quiet, old fashioned garden her straight, slim figure relaxed into a rustic seat. She clasped her white hands behind her sunny brown head and surveyed the low, ivy covered house with contemplative eyes.

"The Merton homestead and the Merton pew are the possessions of an eccentric spinster," she mused whimsically. "First, Daniel Merton, president of the cordage trust, writes and commands that I sell him his old home for an absurdly high price, which I refused because the house just suits me, and I am tired of wandering. Again, he sends a gift to his church, and they demand that I tear out the charming, old fashioned furniture of the Merton pew—and transform it for him! I am selfish enough to like it as it is—and to believe he will like it best too! But I am afraid of that Daniel Merton, a man who has risen to such eminence, as he must possess a strength of purpose that will at last prevail upon me to part with this charming place!"

With a little sighing laugh she went into the house—the quiet house which she occupied with her servants and her pets. Her kinsfolk were awaiting her in another distant country. Serena was young yet. She was thirty-five, and she was lonely.

* * * * * * *

For weeks after that September day the Redbush church was closed for repairs. Heavy canvas covered the old Merton pew and protected it from showers of lime and plaster and later from the dripping brushes of painters and decorators.

Little by little the old church took on a new appearance. Shaky timbers were strengthened, the great belfry was repaired and the bell rehung. Gray paint restored the building to Quakerlike respectability. The furnace was mended, and the organ was repaired.

Indoors the warm glow of the old red carpet was replaced by sober brown pile, and the newly varnished pews were carpeted with the same material. Wooden foot rests took the place of the discarded hassocks, and polished seats were supplied instead of the comfortable cushions.

The faint pinks and reds of the old decoration gave way to sea green walls and chancel. It was all very new and very hideous and extremely uncomfortable.

The minister was joyful and the congregation was gratified at the splendor of the shabby old church. The committee on repairs proudly sent in their report on the Sunday before Thanksgiving day. At the same time the minister read a letter from Daniel Merton saying that he would gladly accept their invitation to attend the special services on Thanksgiving day.

Cold and crisp the day dawned, and the usual festivities of the day were pushed forward that none might miss the services at the church.

There was a rustle of expectation as the people gathered in the redecorated edifice. Up in the front pew, on the right of the aisle, in the old Merton pew, with its still gorgeous turkey carpet and hassocks, sat Serena Webb, conscious that her seat was a blot on the fair scene.

In the front left hand pew sat Dr. Long and his wife, nervously awaiting the arrival of Daniel Merton, for it was understood that the great man was to be ushered into the good doctor's sober brown pew.

The last bell was ringing, the choir was rustling the pages of their books and the organ was growling a low voluntary when there was the insistent blast of a horn and then the soft chug-chug of a motorcar. It stopped at the church, the door opened, and then Redbush drew a long breath as Daniel Merton walked up the aisle and was ushered into Dr. Long's seat.

For several moments he knelt in prayer, and then he arose and looked about him as the service began.

He saw a strange church and strange people. He had borne in his mind's eye for years past a quaint old church with warm red carpet and many pews, each furnished according to its owner's fancy. There was nothing here to remind him of the past and his boyhood save the seat across the aisle.

There in the old Merton pew, with its ancient turkey carpeted floor and fat hassocks, sat a slender woman with sweet, serious face bent above her book. That was what Daniel Merton saw in the old pew where he had knelt when a boy.

The people of Redbush saw a tall, thin man with a handsome face lined with care, a man plainly dressed as one of themselves, and those who had known him when a boy traced in his countenance a vague likeness to the ambitious lad of twenty-five years before.

Then they saw him look about the church with impassive face, which did not change until it reached the old Merton pew. They saw his keen eyes rest on Serena Webb's face and on the old time furnishings before they turned to cast a sweeping glance up and down the aisle at the brown carpet.

Then they saw him leave his seat and deliberately cross the aisle and sit down beside Serena Webb. Serena blushed and shared her hymn book with him.

The service was long, for the good people of Redbush were very grateful to their beneficent townsman, and the minister must express their gratitude in sonorous sentences that a millionaire might appreciate.

A year afterward Sarah Lee surveyed the church in high disdain. Workmen had completed its restoration to its original decorative scheme, and the florist's men were banking palms about the chancel.

"To think Serena Webb should marry Dan Merton after all—never saw him in her life till that Thanksgiving day," murmured Mrs. Long in Sarah's ear.

"That there old turkey carpet did it," sniffed Sarah Lee. "Just to think of him insisting that everybody must carpet their own pew to suit themselves! Even old Hulda Jones has made her a braided mat for hers. Redbush is behind the times."

In the meantime Daniel Merton was whispering to Serena in the garden of his old home. "It was the combination of you and the old pew set in the midst of that hideously decorated church—it was you, sweetheart, that broke through this crust of money getting and made me again in heart like the boy I used to be."

"I am so glad," murmured Serena happily. "Let us always keep the old turkey carpet, Dan. It carried you back to your boyhood, it brought you across the aisle to me, and it has carried us both to happiness. It is a magic carpet, indeed."

Force of a Stream of Water.

The effect of the hydraulic motor, which is used for the purpose of removing masses of earth, well nigh passes belief. A stream of water issuing from a pipe six inches in diameter, with a fall behind it of 375 feet, will carry away a solid rock weighing a ton or more to a distance of fifty or a hundred feet. The velocity of the stream is terrific, an the column of water projected is so solid that if a crowbar or other heavy object be thrust against it the impinging object will be hurled a considerable distance. By this stream of water a man would be instantly killed if he came in contact with it even at a distance of a couple of hundred feet. At 200 feet from the nozzle a six inch stream, with a 375 foot fall, projected momentarily against the trunk of a tree will in a second denude it of the heaviest bark as clearly as if it had been cut with an ax. Whenever such a stream is turned against a bank it cuts and burrows it in every direction, hollowing out great caves and causing tons of earth to melt and fall and be washed away in the sluices.

The average woman knows more about some other woman than she knows about herself.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

Where the Old Country Gets Its Great Supply of Christmas Trees Every Year.

To tell the truth, we do not trouble very much about the matter. Father bought it somewhere, and while we were asleep—or pretending to be—loving hands covered it with candles, and bags of sweets and toys and dolls and little flags, and made it shine and sparkle like the King's crown. But when we stand before it and clap our hands and cry "O-o-o-oh!" we do not, as a rule, stop to bother as to how it is there comes to be such a thing as a Christmas tree at all.

As a matter of fact, a good many older people have tried to find out where the Christmas tree came from, but nobody seems to be quite certain yet as to how many years ago the good old custom was started.

Some learned men have told us that it came from ancient Egypt. They say that at certain winter festivities the Egyptians used a slip of a palm tree with twelve shoots on it, this, of course, representing the year with its twelve months. I do not think, however, that our Christmas tree has anything to do with that twelve-shooted slip of palm. It is more probable that it is to be traced back through the old customs of the country which gave it to us—Germany.

Far away back in the ages—"once upon a time," as the fairy tales say—the people called Teutons believed all kinds of things about a mystic ash tree with the curious name Yggdrasil. This, with its roots and branches, they thought, united the world of the living and the world of the dead. The branches of this tree, they supposed, bore gifts for men to take. There you have the idea which most probably led to the custom of having once a year a tree laden with presents.

When the custom really started just as we see it in our homes to-day is doubtful, but the people in the ancient city of Strasburg are proud of the fact that more than three hundred years ago they introduced it. The Christmas tree does not seem to have been mentioned in any book until the year 1605, when an unknown writer called attention to the new custom at Strasburg. In those days, however, the Church did not approve of the Christmas tree—I expect because it was of heathen origin—and we are told that a preacher named Professor Dannhauer, of Strasburg Cathedral, spoke very strongly against it.

Well, the Christmas tree became very popular indeed in Germany, but you may be surprised to know that it is only about seventy years since it was taken to England. When Victoria the Good married Prince Albert in 1840, many new German customs were introduced into the old country, and the Christmas tree was one of them. At Windsor Castle in 1846 there was a huge tree forty feet high, which was laden with presents said to be worth no less than $45,000! That was something like a tree wasn't it?—but I do not suppose it gave a bit more pleasure than the little tree you see in a poor man's cottage window.

Since then the Christmas tree has been a prominent feature of the Christmas festivities of the Royal Family. Queen Victoria encouraged the custom.

In Germany at Christmas time every house has its tree, and the trade in fir trees in every German town is enormous. In London something like 70,000 trees of various sizes are sold at Covent Garden.

CHRISTMAS RECIPES

Celery Soup

Ingredients: One quart of broth, 1 pint milk, 2 heads of celery, 1 large Spanish onion, 2 ozs. butter, pepper and salt, 1 tablespoonful of cream cornflour.

Method—The broth must be white, made from veal bones or from boiling a fowl. Take the white part of the celery, see that it is quite free from grit, cut it into small pieces, and slice the onion.

Put the butter into a stewpan, add the celery and sliced onion, let them cook for a few minutes, but be careful that they do not brown at all. Now add the broth, and a good seasoning of pepper and salt, and simmer all together until the vegetables are quite soft. Rub through a sieve and return it to the stewpan with the milk, to which has been added a dessertspoonful of cornflour, stir until it has boiled for a few minutes, and just before serving add the cream. Serve very hot, but do not let it boil after the cream has been added, or the appearance of the soup will be spoiled.

Minced Turkey

The trimmings of a large carcase will make a delicious mince. To each pound of minced turkey allow 1 oz. of finely chopped ham and the same quantity of onion. Fry in a little clarified dripping with ½ oz. of flour sprinkled over. To this add ½ pint of stock made from the bones; season with salt and pepper and, if liked, a dash of lemon juice. The mince may be served simply garnished with croutons (little pieces of fried bread), with or without poached eggs. It may also be used as a filling for patty cases or allowed to get cold; it can be shaped into cutlets, rolled in egg and breadcrumbs, and fried, or is a delicious stuffing for grilled rolls of bacon.

Sausage and Chestnut Dressing

Boil forty chestnuts, and when cooked remove the outer and inner skins. Put them in a mortar and pound. Add 1 lb. of sausage (free from skin), and, if liked, the turkey liver chopped. Mix all together thoroughly and season with pepper and salt.

Galt Leans To Single Tax.

Galt, Dec. 20.—Galt assessors made a large increase in land values in their ratings, which exceeded last year's assessment by over a million and a half. The court of revision has allowed in 123 repeals reductions amounting to $50,000, but only in one case was the land value reduced. It looks like a move toward single tax.

The First Christmas

AN OLD STORY AS IT CAN BE TOLD TO CHILDREN.

GOOD MORNING Phyllis

ONCE upon a time there was a Year One. And, strangely enough, it was not the beginning of the years. The world was already very old; nobody knows how old. People had been living on the earth, time out of mind, in mighty nations, fighting great battles and building great cities. Somehow, everything seemed to begin over again that year, because that was when the King came. And we have taken it ever since as the most important of all dates. When we say that this present year is Nineteen-hundred-and-twelve, we mean that the Year One was just so many years ago.

It is always to be remembered about that year that one of its days was Christmas Day.

You may not think that strange. Christmas comes so regularly every year, like apples in autumn and snow in winter, that it seems to belong to the order of Nature, and one may easily imagine that it has been celebrated always, and that it is as old as boys and girls. But the truth is that there was never any Christmas till the Year One.

Year after year, and year after year, the evergreen trees grew in the woods and nobody came to get them. Nobody thought of lighting them up with candles or of loading them down with candles. The holly showed its berries of red, and the mistletoe its berries of white, and nobody paid any attention to them, except perhaps the Druids, whoever they were; and they had never heard of Christmas. The twenty-fifth day of December came and went, like the twenty-second and the twenty-ninth; and boys and girls were born and grew up into men and women with never a Christmas carol nor a Christmas tree nor a Christmas gift, and without having so much as heard of the singing angels or of the Holy Child. Because that was before the King came.

Now in the Year One there lived in a quiet little place, in a small village hidden among hills, a young girl named Mary. I cannot tell you how old she was, but we will guess that she was at the age when girlhood passes into womanhood. Neither can I tell you how she looked, or whether her eyes were brown like the earth or blue like the sky; but we may be sure that she had a sweet face, because she was very good and gentle, and had a fair and sweet soul.

And one day Mary was sitting alone in her room. She may have been reading, for we know that she loved to read. A poem which she wrote, called the Magnificat, is full of the memories of books. Or she may have been sewing, for she was presently to be married, and would be getting ready for the wedding. She was to marry a neighbor, the village carpenter, named Joseph. It was a spring morning, and the flowers were in blossom, and the birds were singing, and the sun was shining. Thus she sat, with her heart full of beautiful thoughts, when of a sudden such a gleam of splendor shone about her that it seemed as if the sun had been under a thick cloud and had just come out and begun to blaze in good earnest. And Mary turned to see where this new brightness came from, and there beside the door, dressed all in white, stood a resplendent angel.

THE DUNCE

And the angel said, "Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." And Mary was afraid, and began to tremble; so that the angel said "Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God." Then, while she held her breath and listened, he told his wonderful errand. God had seen the sin and sorrow that were upon the earth. He had heard little children, and even grown men and women, fathers and mothers, crying. He knew how people were trying to be good and making a sad failure of it because they were ignorant or weak. And now God was about to do what He had long promised. He was to come and live among us. God had, indeed, lived among men always, as He does to-day; always and everywhere we are in the presence of God. But now He was to make Himself known in a new way. The King of Glory was to take our human nature upon Him, and become a man like us. He was to come, not in His royal robes of splendor, not in the garments of the sunset, not with His holy angels with Him, but as a little child, to be born as we are, to grow as we grow, and thus by living our life to teach us how to live. And when the King came in His humility Mary was to be His mother.

And Mary said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to Thy word." And the angel departed from her. That was the first day of the Year One.

Months passed after this angelic visit. The green of spring deepened into the green of summer, and lilies grew in the fields and the fruits ripened and were gathered into barns, and the cold nights came on. And one night there were shepherds in a pasture close by the Town of Bethlehem, watching their flocks.

We seldom see shepherds in this country. The men with sticks who drive sheep through the streets are not true shepherds. Shepherds never drive sheep; they go before and call them and the sheep know the shepherd's voice and follow him. While the flocks are in the fields the shepherds stay among them or keep them from straying off and getting lost, and to protect them from wolves and bears in places where such wild animals are found.

There are countries where the grass is green all the year round, and where almost the only snow which the people see is on the tops of the mountains. In such countries the sheep can feed in the fields even in the winter.

In the old time—in the Year One—people when they went to church on great holy days carried little lambs with them. That would seem queer nowadays. Imagine a [illegible] everybody had a lamb under his arm instead of a prayer-book! I am afraid that most small boys, and even some small girls, would find it hard to sit perfectly still in a church full of frisky little woolly lambs. But in those days they were used to it, and did not mind it. The people brought the lambs to give to God. And they brought the very best lambs, because they wished to give God the very best they had. Some of these lambs came from these Bethlehem pastures; and they who took care of the church lambs would be good shepherds, gentle and kind men.

So it was in the winter night, and the stars were shining and all was still, and in the fields the flocks were sleeping while the shepherds watched. We may guess that, as they watched, they talked together and told each other stories—especially about David, who when he was a boy, had lived at Bethlehem and had lain out many a frosty night in that very pasture with his sheep, and once had killed a lion and a bear. The lion and the bear had come to get the sheep, and young David had fought with them and killed them. And they sang the Shepherd's Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd." And they spoke of the King of Glory, how He would some time come, according to the promise; and they wondered how He would look, and what He would be like when He came. And they said, "When He comes He will be seen here in Bethlehem." For that was written in the Bible.

Then, as they watched and talked and sang, suddenly something happened.

All at once a great and wonderful light began to shine—brighter and brighter, in the black sky, till the night was like the day. All the clouds came out in the splendid garments which they wear in the early morning and in the late afternoon. And out of the central shining appeared an angel of the Lord, gleaming like a flame of fire. The shepherds fell upon their faces, not daring to look up, hardly daring to listen or to breathe, while the angel spoke. "Fear not," he said, "for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. The King has come! To-night He is born, yonder in Bethlehem. There shall you find Him, sleeping in a manger."

And then the sky grew brighter still, as if behind the clouds the gates of Heaven itself were swinging open, and out there came angels upon angels, a multitude of the Heavenly host, shining and singing. This is what they sang:

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth, peace,
Good will toward men!"

Then the chorus ceased, and the choir went back into Heaven, shutting the golden gates behind them; and the night was dark and still again, and the shepherds were alone. So up they leaped, crying one to another with great joy, "Let us go to Bethlehem and see! Let us find the King!" And off they went, down the frosty road, their eager feet making a great noise in the silent night, and their breath white behind them.

Now, all that day travelers had been journeying in unusual numbers along the ways which led to Bethlehem, for it was the time of a census. Caesar Augustus, Emperor of Rome, wished to know how many people were living in that part of the country, so that he could make them all pay taxes. Every man had to go to his own city—that is, to the place in which his family belonged. So there was a great stir all about the land, with men going to this place and to that to have their names written in the census-books. Among the others, out of Nazareth came Joseph the carpenter, because he was of the family of David, and with him Mary, his espoused wife, who was to be the mother of the King. Down they came like other poor folks, over hill and dale, till they arrived at Bethlehem. But when they reached the town there was no place where they might stay. Every house was full of guests, and the inn was already crowded. The only shelter was a stable—a common stable, strewn with hay, with dusty cobwebs hanging from the rafters, and occupied by cows and donkeys. There, accordingly, they went.

And there, while the angels sang and the sky blazed over the pastures of the sheep, the King came. The King of Glory came! The mighty God, the Maker of all things, the Lord most high, came to dwell among us. And behold, He was a little child. And Mary wrapped Him warm in swaddling clothes, as the way is with babies, and laid Him in the manger.

There the shepherds, all out of breath with running, found them—Mary and Joseph and the Babe lying in a manger. And they told what they had seen and heard about the singing angels and the King of Glory, while Mary listened, remembering the angel who had appeared to her. So the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the wonders of that night.

And thus was kept the first Christmas, the Christmas in the Year One, with carols by the choir of Heaven, and God's own Son, the Saviour of the world, coming a Christmas gift for all mankind.—G. Hodges, D.D.

THE HOLY CITY.

JERUSALEM is lifted twenty five hundred feet above the level of the sea, and holds the central place in that line of ancient shrine-cities—Beersheba, Hebron, Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Bethel, Shiloh, Shechem—which stretches along the mountainous plateau of Judea, between the valley of Jordan and the plain of Philistia. "The sides of the north" slope down gently to the gray, crenelated walls and towers, the Jaffa Gate, the New Gate, the Damascus Gate. Within those bulwarks, which are thirty eight feet high and two miles and a half in circumstance, Jerusalem is "builded as a city that is compact together," covering, with her crooked streets and huddled houses, the two or three rounded hills and almost-obliterated valleys in which the northern plateau terminates. South, and east, and west, the valley of the Brook Kidron and the valley of Hinnom, surround the city wall with a dry moat three or four hundred feet deep. Thus the city stands, as it were, on the knuckles of a closed hand stretched out toward the southeast, impregnable from all sides except the north, where the wrist comes down from the higher tableland. This northern approach, open to Assyria, and Babylon, and Damascus, and Persia, has always been the weak point of Jerusalem. She was no fortress unassailable in natural strength, but a sacred city, a lofty shrine, whose refuge and salvation were in Jehovah—in the faith, the loyalty, the heroism which He inspired in the people who trusted Him.

Jerusalem is still one of the high places of the world, consecrated in the imagination of Mohammedans and Christians alike.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

LONG ago angelic harpers sang
the song we sing to-day,
And the drowsy folk of Bethlehem may have listened as they lay!
But eager shepherds left their flocks,
and o'er the desert wild
The kingly sages journeyed to adore
the Holy Child!
Has any man a quarrel?
Has another used you ill?
The friendly word you meant to say,
Is that unspoken still?
Then, remember, 'twas the Angels
Brought glad tidings of good will!

Of all the gifts of Christmas, are you
fain to win the best?
Lo! the Christ Child still is waiting
Himself to be your guest;
No lot so high or lowly but He will take His part,
If you do but bid Him welcome to a clean and tender heart.
Are you sleeping, are you waking?
To the Manger haste away,
And you shall see a wondrous sight
Amid the straw and hay—
'Tis Love Himself Incarnate
As on this Christmas Day!

Ring Out the Old, Ring in the New

NEW YEAR'S MORN.

Long ere the lingering dawn of that bright morn
Which ushers in the year, the roosting cock,
Flapping his wings, repeats his 'larum shrill;
But on that morn no busy flail obeys
His rousing call; no sounds but sounds of joy
Salute the year—the first foot's entering step,
That sudden on the floor is welcome heard,
Ere blushing maids have braided up their hair;
The laugh, the hearty kiss, the good new year,
Pronounced with honest warmth. In village, grange
And borough town, the steaming flagon, borne
From house to house, elates the poor man's heart,
And makes him feel that life has still its joys.
The aged and the young, man, woman, child,
Unite in social glee; even stranger dogs,
Meeting with bristling back, soon lay aside
Their snarling aspect; and in sportive chase,
Excursive scour, or wallow in the snow.
With sober cheerfulness, the grandame eyes
Her offspring round her, all in health and peace;
And thankful that she's spared to see this day
Return once more, breathes low a secret prayer,
That God would shed a blessing on their heads.

GRAHAME.

THE WASSAIL BOWL!

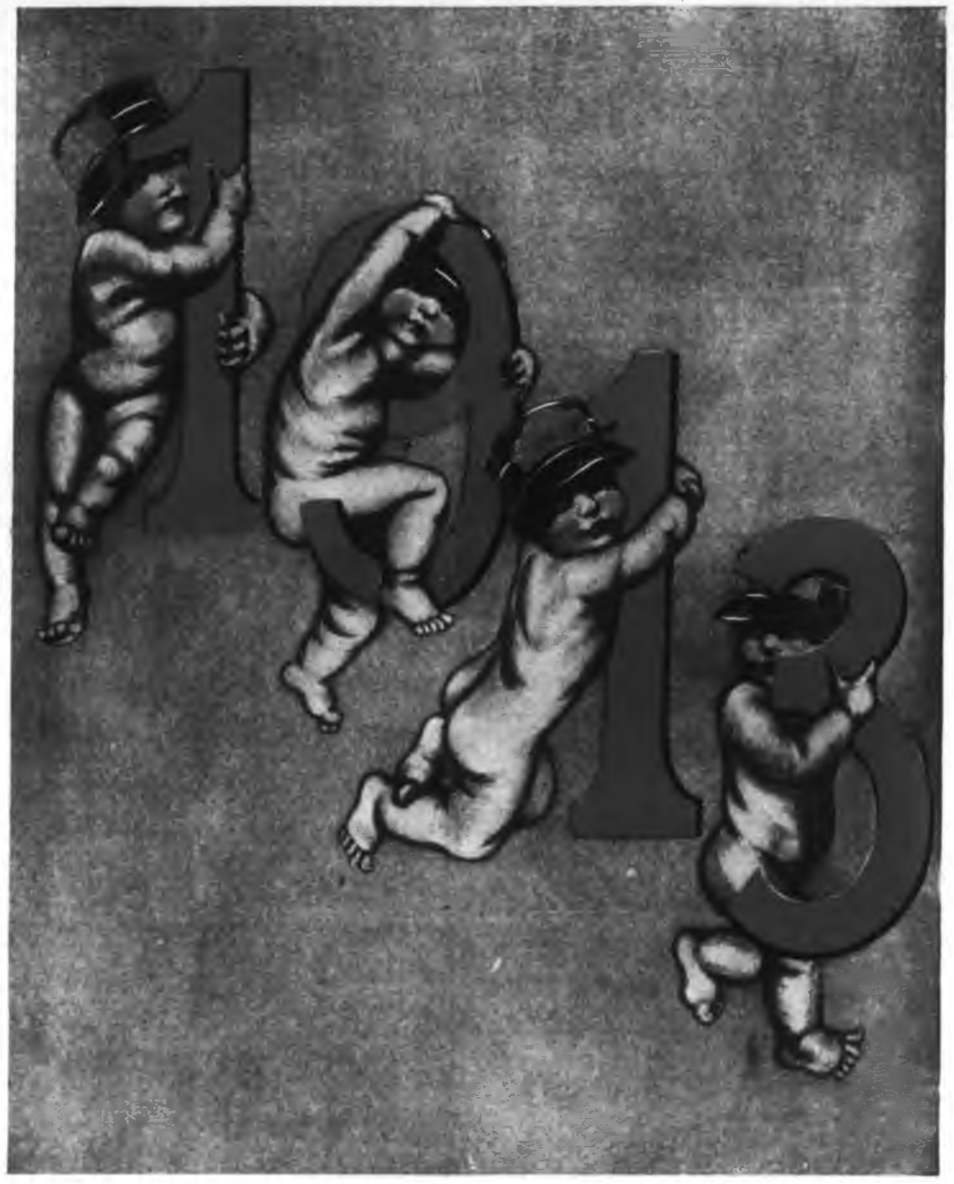
THE MERRY-MAKINGS of New Year's Eve and New Year's Day are of very ancient date in England. The head of the house assembled his family around a bowl of spiced ale, comically called "lamb's wool," from which he drank their healths; then passed it to the rest that they might drink too. The word that passed amongst them was the ancient Saxon phrase, "Wass hael"—that is, "To your health". Hence this came to be recognized as the wassail or wassel bowl. The poorer class of people carried a bowl adorned with ribbons round the neighborhood, begging for something wherewith to find the means of filling it, that they too might enjoy wassail as well as the rich. In their compotations they had songs suitable to the occasion, a Gloucestershire example of which commenced.

"Wassail! Wassail! Over the town,
Our toast it is white, or ale it is brown;
Our bowl it is made of the maplin tree,
We be good fellows all:—I drink to thee."

The custom of wassail at the New Year was kept up in the monasteries as well as in private houses. In front of the Abbot, at the upper end of the refectory table was placed the mighty bowl styled in their language "poculum Cavitatis," and from it the superior drank to all and all drank in succession to each other.

The corporation feasts of London still preserve a custom that affords a reflex of that of the wassail bowl. A double-handled flagon full of sweetened and spiced wine being handed to the master or other person presiding, he drinks, standing, to the general health, as announced by the toast-master, then passes it to his neighbor on the left hand, who drinks, standing, to his next neighbor, also standing, and so on it goes till all have drunk. Such is the well-known ceremony of the loving cup.

Till very few years ago in Scotland the custom of the wassail bowl at the passing away of the old year might be said to be still in comparative vigor. On the approach of twelve o'clock, a "hot pint" was prepared—that is a kettle or flagon full of warm, spiced and sweetened ale, with an infusion of spirits. When the clock had struck the knell of the departing year, each member of the family drank of this mixture. "A good health and a happy New Year and many of them," to all the rest, with a general handshaking, and perhaps a dance round the table, with the addition of a song to the tune "Hey Tuttie Taitie." The elders of the family would then probably sally out with the hot kettle, and bearing also a competent provision of buns and shortbread, or bread and cheese, with the design of visiting their neighbors and interchanging with them the same cordial greetings. If they met by the way another party similarly bent, whom they knew, they would stop and give and take sips from their respective kettles.



New Year's Musings

HOW TIME flies! Here we are again with our cheery greeting! Happy New Year!

What is your worst fault? What is mine? Are you going to reform with the New Year?

To make your New Year a happy one be sure to make some one else have a happy New Year.

* * *

Regrets for the past will not strengthen the future. "Forgetting the past—press on," is the better way.

Our resolutions for the New Year should be definite and specific. Do not say simply that you will be more liberal, but say just how liberal you will be; not say that you will be more faithful, but say just what duties, neglected in the past, you will engage to perform in the future.

Get ready to start the New Year with kindly feelings and more noble ambitions. Make the New Year of 1913 a day to which you can always look back with pleasure and gratitude.

Delight and pathos are inextricably mingled with the thought of New Year's Day. It is only a conventional point of time; any other would do as well. Every day closes an old year and begins a new one; but for that we cannot help feeling that this day, which is agreed upon throughout Christendom for the beginning of a new year, is somewhat unique. The pathos comes from the review of the past, and from the sense that another notch has been cut for us on the stick of time. The delight arises from the anticipation of the new and better experiences of the year to come.

It is because nearly all of us live on hope, because we are mentally sustained by expectations, that New Year's is always welcome. It is the one day of the twelve-month—Christmas is chiefly for children—that appeals most to men and women. Much of its attractiveness depends, for the multitude, on its nominal newness. We are all familiar and weary with the old. We are ever sighing for the new, which seems as if it would bring a change of mind and condition. New Year's is not a whit newer for its name, as every one who thinks for a moment is aware, but names are potent, more potent often than things.

A good resolution for the hard-worked housewife to make for the New Year is that she will find time each day for a nap, or a rest at least of fifteen minutes; that she will take every other evening at least for reading or playing games with her children, and at least one afternoon in the week for a social visit, a ride, a walk. These would not be impossible for the busiest woman, who will look carefully into her methods and see if there are superfluities she can cut off, trimmed underclothing that can be made plain, and thus save sewing and ironing; cakes and pies and preserves, for which plainer wholesomer food can be substituted.

Mortals were tempted and tried, almost beyond endurance, and we spoke no word of encouragement or sympathy. The friendliness and the poor and the sick and the solitary we have neglected and passed by. Oh! how cold and selfish, and uncharitable we, nearly all of us, have been! And thus the New Year comes [illegible]

As you turn this corner into the New Year, look back a minute over the road you have been travelling the past year. It seemed a long way when you started out, but it has been traversed at last. Have you been true to yourself? If not, once more before you step out into the pure New Year, renew your promises to your better natures. Don't stray, but linger near the pleasant outlooks, keep near the bits of high ground where you breathe purer air and can see off Heaven's high hills of blue, make the motive pure work for the object.

A Merry Christmas

SANTA CLAUS IN THE CITY

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

Copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

IN days of yore old Santa Claus
Had a delightful time.
The chimneys all were big and wide
Through which he had to climb.
But nowadays our modern ways
Afford him little ease.
When he climbs through our skimpy flues
He has an awful squeeze.

They say he has an ample form,
With girth profound and vast,
And first thing anybody knows
Some day he'll get stuck fast.
But this is not the worst of it,
For how can Santa crawl
Into a modern city flat
That has no flues at all?

His bursting pack upon his back,
He clambers up the walls,
Climbs ladders like a steeplejack,
To make his midnight calls,
And once some city children saw
A roly poly shape
On Christmas eve go past their flat
Upon the fire escape.

With buildings twenty stories high
And flats on every floor,
More girls and boys who want more toys
Than ever were before,
The way poor Santa Claus is worked
Is certainly a shame,
But he is such a good old sport
He never quits the game.

If buildings should grow taller yet
And still more girls and boys
Keep being born, each one to get
A longer list of toys,
I do not know how Santa Claus
Can visit such a mob.
But, I'll be bound, he will be found,
As always, on the job.

PLAYING SANTA CLAUS.

A Tragedy of a London Fog in the Suburbs of Streathton—But It Ended Well.

By C. Malcolm Hincks, in the Novel Magazine

Police-Constable Parker stood at the corner formed by the aristocratic thoroughfare known as Acacia Grove and the much less dignified street known as Church Roard, in the London suburb which, for the purpose of this story, shall be known as Streathton.

It was Christmas Eve, but the weather certainly did not tend to inspire one with a feeling of peace on earth and goodwill towards mankind. The crossing-sweeper, who was furtively eyeing the constable, had been sworn at and rewarded in the ratio of three to one.

"When it's snowy," he confided to a butcher's boy, who had stopped to relight the stump of a cigar he had found in the gutter, "people thinks it's real Christmas and does yer well, but this bloomin' fog upsets 'em. Would you unbutton yer top coat to give a chap like me a penny a night like this?"

"No, I bloomin' well shouldn't!" declared the butcher's boy with decision as he moved off.

P.-C. Parker stamped his feet on the damp pavement and wished himself anywhere but where he was. This was his first experience of a London fog, for he had been in the Metropolitan Force only a few months, and he did not like it.

"Bloomin' 'ole to be in on Christmas Eve!" he growled. "Only six o'clock and yet 'ardly a sign of life about the place. Why couldn't they let me do a beat in the 'Igh Street? There is somethin' goin' on there at all events, even if you can't see it proper for the fog."

As he had come on duty he had marched along the High Street where the light from the shop windows, the naphtha flares on the costers' stalls, the branches of holly and evergreen, the gaily-dressed grocers' windows, and the rapidly-moving, and for the most part, happy-faced, crowd, did convey something of that peculiar, indescribable feeling that people associate with Christmas.

"Give me Mugford!" growled the constable, as he turned and slowly began to pace his beat. "Don't believe in all the talk about London streets paved with gold; I've only seen 'em full o' slosh. Law! At Mugford we knew it was Christmas, festivities we 'ad, and—beg pardon, sir!"

An old gentleman had almost collided with him, for the fog was gradually becoming thicker, and the lampposts in Acacia Grave were few and far between.

"Ah, constable," said the old gentleman genially, "can you direct me to a house in the road of the name Westdene?"

"Westdene, sir?" suggested P.-C. Parker thoughtfully. He had been in the force long enough to know that it paid to be civil to benevolent-looking old gentlemen on Christmas Eve.

"Yes, that's the name. Absurd idea, constable, giving a fancy name to a house in a road like this. In my young days a number sufficed, and postmen were much happier."

"No one 'as a number in Acacia Grove," said Parker; "they've all got names, rum 'uns, too, some of 'em. It's difficult to see names properly in this 'ere fog, and as I'm walking along that way maybe you'd like me to show you the 'ouse?"

"That is very good of you; you see I am er—acting as Santa Claus."

P.-C. Parker glanced at the large bag in the old gentleman's hand, noted the kindly smile, and felt sad.

"Kids of to-day don't believe in that sort o' thing, sir; they looks at each thing to se if there's a label with the price on it."

"You are a very cynical young man," observed the old gentleman, as with difficulty he kept beside him.

"Been six months in the Force," P.-C. Parker shortly.

[illegible] old gentleman nodded as though such an experience were an excuse for anything, and then they walked on in silence for a few yards.

"I want to make this one of the old-fashioned, fairy Christmases for my grandchildren, constable," he said at length, "and—er—really I'm glad I've met you, you see, I'm going to do a little amateur burgling."

"Oh, are you?" said P.-C. Parker shortly, stopping in his walk and regarding his companion severely.

The old gentleman laughed.

"I thought you'd think it funny," he said. "You see, I'm Mr. James Brittenden, and I'm going to stay with my son Charles for Christmas; they don't expect me until ten o'clock to-night, but I caught an earlier train than I expected from the country, and as I came along Holborn it struck me that I would give the youngsters a great surprise. I'm going to get in through the nursery window, leave the toys I've brought, go and dine somewhere, and then return to the house and tell them that under the table in the nursery they will find a lot of things that Santa Claus has left."

"'Ow do you know you're goin' to get in so easy?" demanded the constable, still regarding the elderly gentleman with some suspicion.

"Oh, I shall manage all right. You see, I want to startle my son and his wife as well as the children. I was always fond of a joke—ha, ha, ha! What! Is this the house? Thank you. Good-night, officer! Merry Christmas! Drink my health to-morrow, will you?"

"Good night, sir, thank you, sir—same to you!" gasped P.-C. Parker, gazing blankly at the coin which the street lamp just above him disclosed to be a half-a-sovereign.

"Lor'," he muttered, as he resumed his beat, 'fancy 'avin' any suspicions against a generous gentleman like that. I'd like to be one o' them kids an' 'alf a tick, I don't believe there are any kids at that house. I've never seen 'em, anyway. Now, I wonder if the old buffer is up to any little game. I'll go and see what—curse the fog. It's coming on worse than ever!"

He turned and walked back towards the gate of the house where he had left the amiable amateur Santa Claus. The old gentleman's story about the children was probably a blind—he had thought to throw him off the scent. Then the half-sovereign was bribery and corruption. Probably it was bad; he tested it with his teeth; no, it wasn't bad; but all the same—

"Help! Police! Thieves!"

A dishevelled servant girl had run to the gate of Westdene and her piercing cry came weirdly through the fog.

P.-C. Parker broke into a run.

* * * * * *

"Bless my soul! They've altered the room. Now how on earth am I to find the nursery?"

Mr. James Brittenden deposited his bags on the floor and gazed round in blank bewilderment. On his last visit he remembered the nursery had been the room on the first floor that was approached by a flight of iron steps from the back garden. Several of the residents in Acacia Grove who possessed the same arrangement used it as a morning room, and sat out on the little balcony at night, but his son had turned it into a nursery. Mr. Brittenden had expected to have had to climb through the window overlooking the balcony, but had found the door unlocked, and so saved himself trouble.

"If I go out into the hall I may meet a servant or someone and that

NOT A DAY OF JOY FOR ALL

"It's Christmas time, friend! What will you do about it?" asks L. D. Stearns in Suburban Life. "Mothers! Aunties! You who love to see your babies bend, crooning softly, over their family of dolls, with that grave little smile of dawning motherhood flitting tenderly over their faces, just within a stone's throw of babies who have no dolls, and the mother heart beats in their bosoms just as it does in that of your own sheltered darlings; but their faces are grave, and sharp and old; and little drawn, white lines show about their mouths; and their eyes are not like the eyes of your children. The other day, a baby opened its eyes for the first time on this old earth; but in the home was no stove, no bit of warmth, no food—almost no clothes! On another street, in the midst of plenty, a woman, with two small babies toddling about, the father out hunting for work, cries—with red lids: 'We've not a dollar in the house, and nothing to eat!' Oh, mothers—oh, adoring aunties—life isn't made up of just prayers and sitting reverently in church, keeping one day in the week holy! There's a tryst to keep with life that is spelled in many, many ways, if you'd make it complete."

Build better roads than the Romans

CANADA is alive to the vital importance of good roads. Every land-owner knows that they contain the secret of greater prosperity; that they mean more farms, more profitable crops and more valuable land. Every merchant knows that they alone can swell his trade and his profits by giving him more customers and making it easier for those customers to get to his store.

But just what do we mean by "good roads?"

But people in prosperous, fertile Canada do not have to be content with such make-shifts.

They are going about the work of providing proper highways as they have gone about everything else—carefully, systematically, intelligently.

Concrete road

A BROAD statement? Yes — but it is supported by incontrovertable facts; by the experience of more than twenty years and by the most exhaustive tests and investigation. It is admitted to be the fact by the foremost road authorities on the continent. It is guiding the road-building policy of great commonwealths.

The Romans—history's greatest road-builders—used a crude form of natural concrete to build the highways that have given service for two thousand years.

Until this present century, no later nation was able to equal the Romans as road-builders.

Now, we can build better roads than the Romans, for less money than our fathers paid for roads that would not [illegible] half the lifetime of [illegible] them.

MODERN concrete, made with cement produced by modern scientific methods, is more enduring in every cubic yard than the best the Romans ever made. Modern road-making machines enable a dozen men to lay more—and better—road in a day than a hundred Roman slaves could put down in a week. In a few years these modern concrete roads will have paid for themselves — and will still be there, practically as good as new, to pay their builders and succeeding generations, annual profits.

Concrete has been proven to be the best material for any sort of highway. It has carried the heavy, congested traffic in the heart of great cities; it is cheap enough to be within reach of the smallest town; it can be laid by the ordinary road-gang of the most isolated farming district.

The materials are close-at-hand; the work provides employment for home labor; practically all the money spent for concrete roads [illegible] at home.

YOU owe it to yourself—as a merchant, a professional man, or a farmer—and to your community—as a citizen—to use your influence on behalf of this modern "best road." We have made it easy for you to do so by collecting all the information necessary to thoroughly post you on the subject—and putting it into convenient form.

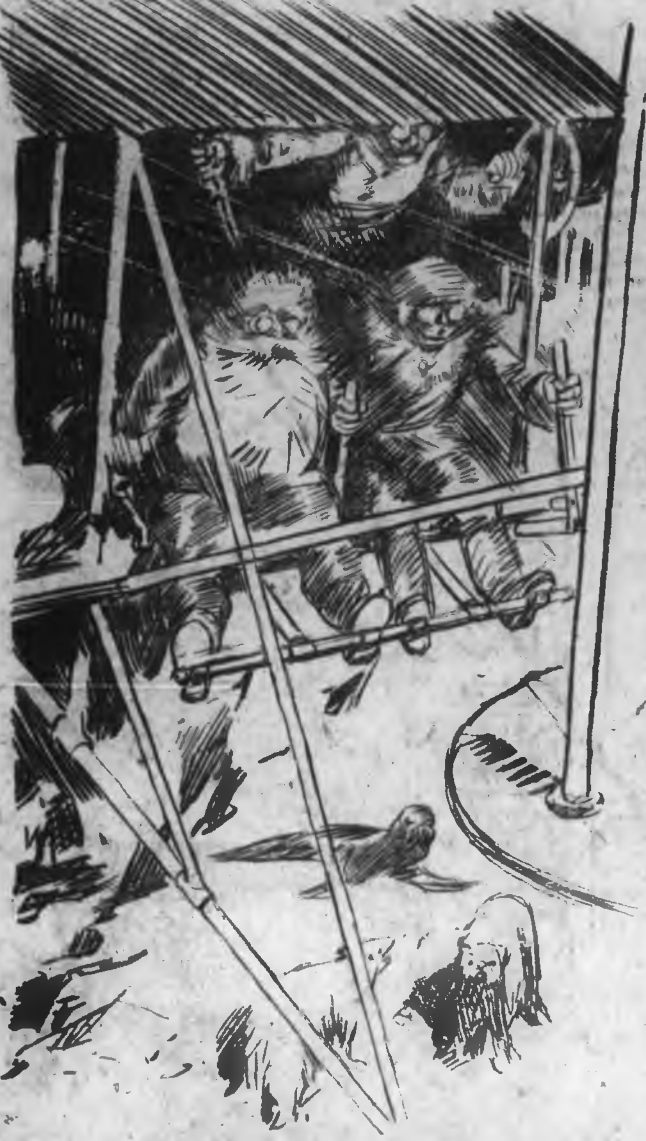
OLD KRIS and the WHIRLWIND



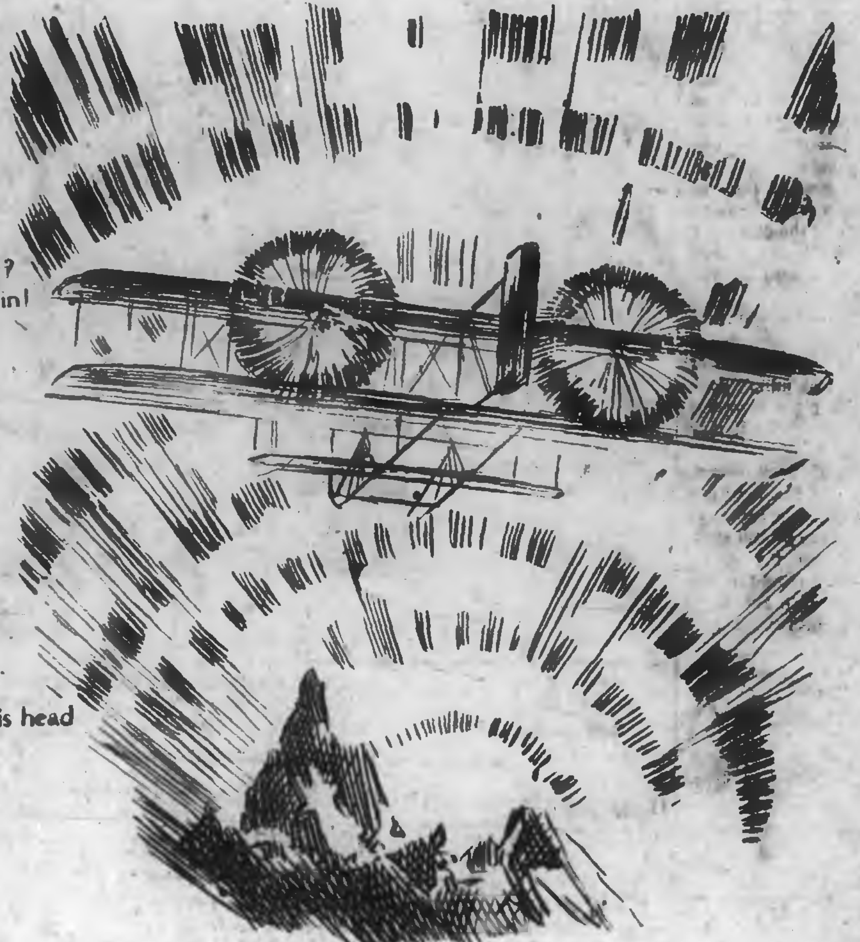
A Strange Misadventure of Nineteen Hundred and Ten

By Anthony H. Euwer

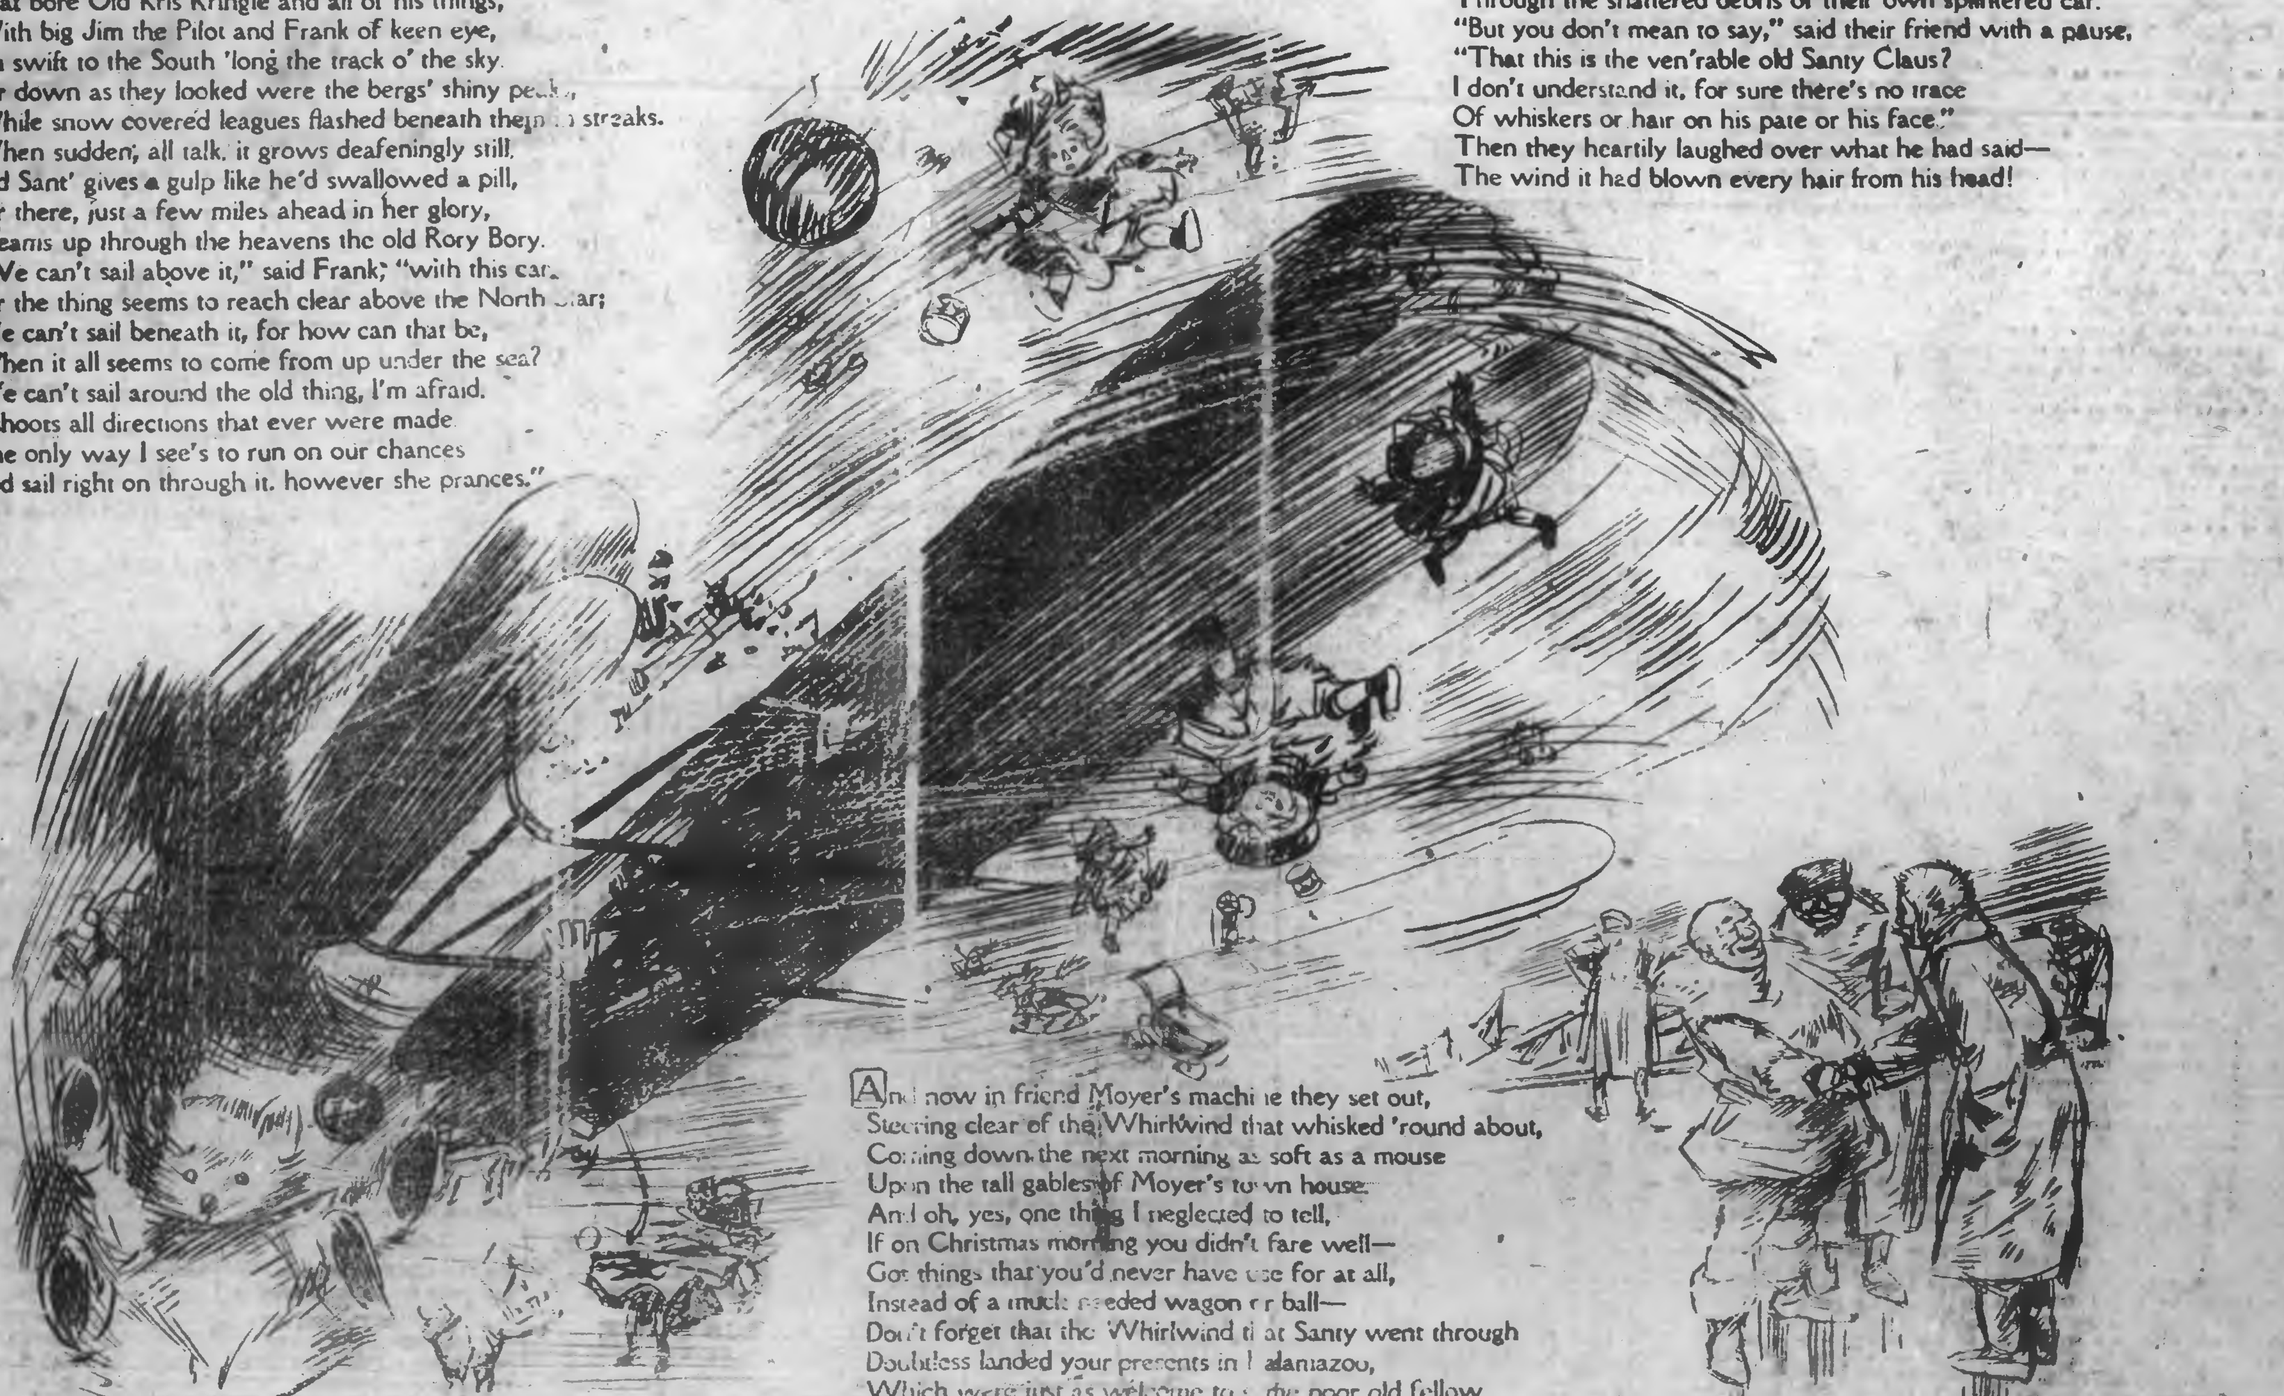
The North Winds they howled, and they shrieked, and they roared:
The Polar Bears growled and the Walruses snored
The North Winds they howled through the Aero Car's wings
That bore Old Kris Kringle and all of his things,
With big Jim the Pilot and Frank of keen eye,
On swift to the South 'long the track o' the sky.
Far down as they looked were the bergs' shiny peaks,
While snow covered leagues flashed beneath them in streaks.
When sudden, all talk, it grows deafeningly still,
Old Sant' gives a gulp like he'd swallowed a pill,
For there, just a few miles ahead in her glory,
Streams up through the heavens the old Rory Bory.
"We can't sail above it," said Frank; "with this car,
For the thing seems to reach clear above the North Star;
We can't sail beneath it, for how can that be,
When it all seems to come from up under the sea?
We can't sail around the old thing, I'm afraid.
It shoots all directions that ever were made
The only way I see's to run on our chances
And sail right on through it, however she prances."

So the North Wind blew on with terrifical speed,
A cannon ball shot would have seemed slow indeed;
Toward the great dancing arches of orange and violet
They headed straight onward—Frank, Kris and the Pilot.
"Quick, do as I tell you! Avast there!" yelled Frank;
"Hold fast to that wheel, there, and tighten the crank—
Gib Fluff to your Flew'ard! Equilib to the Baft!
Three—Ten with the Flipper! Hard down: are you daft?
Hard down with the Wizzles! Your Woops to the Wain!
Now bear on your Galley Rope—swing her amain."
But ere he had uttered the last of his volley
There came out of Santy one mighty "Gee! Golly!"
While Jim jumped around like a Jack in the Box
As they shot through the region of Rorial Shocks.
Oh, say, did you ever swing 'round till you're dizzy?
Or drink bromo seltzer just when it was fizzy?
Or see moving pictures where acrobats run
Like jiggly eggbeaters turned loose in the sun?
If so, then you'll know how it felt on that night:
As they sailed through the waves of the Rorial Light.

Goodness knows where they'd been had not Frank kept his head
And stuck to the rudder while onward they sped.
"Gee, that was a dandy!" he said, "What's that tick?
Why, blest if it wasn't just fifty miles thick!
And oh, what we did to it! Notice the hole!
I can look clear back through it and see the North Pole!"
And now for long hours the paddle wheels fanned,
As they flew ever onward down toward the South Land.
But hold there! "Down Brakes!" on a sign they've just read:
"Keep well to the right of the great berg ahead."
And there, with its peaks reaching full five miles high,
A great gleaming iceberg towers into the sky.
"Timely warning," said Jimmy. "If what I've heard's true,
That's where the great Whirlwind blows round like a screw.
Best give me the tiller here, Frank, I'm by far"——
"No, I'll see us through now—you stay where you are."
But while they were talking there came a big lurch,
Which rolled Santy headlong from off of his perch.
Frank swung round the tiller, but to his dismay
They had skewed from the track of the North Wind Highway:
And now they were headed, with fury thrice doubled,
Down the big spiral track, where the air foamed and bubbled.



If all the worst whirlwinds that ever existed
Were bunched up together and twirled 'round and twisted,
Then loosed helter skelter to see what they'd do
You'd have some idea of how this one blew.
And the beautiful gifts—one and all they took flight
And were blown like confetti out into the night.
With a dip and a tremble, a scrape and a bump,
She finally landed in one tangled lump.
And just as they got up, a-thinking, "Well, how
In the world will we ever get 'way from here now?"
They saw not a stone's throw away from them there
A big Aeroplane undergoing repair,
Where a man was at work—Hezekiah B. Moyer—
Whom Jim recognized as his former employer,
Who'd now repaired all of his own broken gear
Save only a bolt on a wing in the rear,
Which need they soon met without ransacking far
Through the shattered debris of their own splintered car.
"But you don't mean to say," said their friend with a pause,
"That this is the ven'rable old Santy Claus?
I don't understand it, for sure there's no trace
Of whiskers or hair on his pate or his face."
Then they heartily laughed over what he had said—
The wind it had blown every hair from his head!



And now in friend Moyer's machine they set out,
Steering clear of the Whirlwind that whisked 'round about,
Coming down the next morning as soft as a mouse
Upon the tall gables of Moyer's town house.
And oh, yes, one thing I neglected to tell,
If on Christmas morning you didn't fare well—
Got things that you'd never have use for at all,
Instead of a much needed wagon or ball—
Don't forget that the Whirlwind that Santy went through Doubtless landed your presents in Kalamazoo,
Which were just as welcome to the poor old fellow
As you would have found his pocketbook or umbrella.

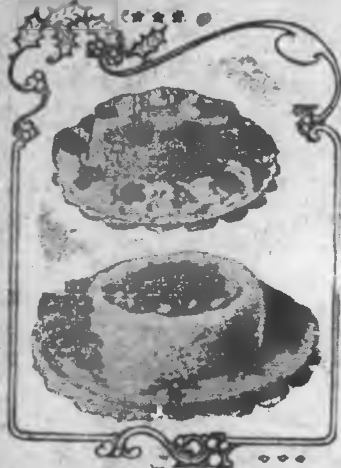
FANCY DISHES.

Molded Rice or Gelatin May Be Handsomely Decorated.

The side dishes for the Christmas banquet should be made as attractive as possible. Fruit and nuts may be served in gelatin. Chicken salad may go to the table in a rice mold or sweets may be used in the same form. The mold chosen for the rice should be one of those with a hollow center, in which the salad or dessert may be placed. Parsley or bits of holly can be laid along the outside of the dish, and, in the case of gelatin desserts, they may be adorned with candied or maraschino cherries.

A delicious fruit cream is thus made: Take two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in a pan and cover it with a cupful of cold milk. Soak for an hour and then place it over a saucepan of boiling water that it may dissolve slowly.

Whip half a pint of thick cream, sweeten it to taste and flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and a cupful of chopped dates. Strain the gelatin slowly through muslin into the cream (which must be evenly stirred meanwhile), place in a wet mold and when set turn out and garnish with split glace cherries. Garnish with sprigs of holly or pine.



DESSERT AND SALAD IN MOLDS.

A handsome fruit mold may be made as follows:

Prepare gelatin in the usual way. When slightly cooled pour it over Malaga grapes and halves of English walnuts in the bottom of a china or crystal bowl.

The grapes should be halved and the seeds removed, and if the gelatin is not a tart flavor orange or lemon juice should be added.

Stir slightly to distribute the fruit, stand in a cold place to chill thoroughly and serve with sweetened whipped cream. Garnish with sprigs of holly.

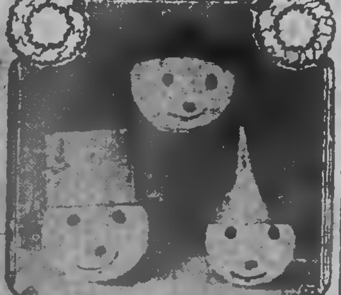
CHRISTMAS NUTS.

Served In Various Forms In Dainty Souvenir Boxes.

Nuts or nut dainties are generally part of the Christmas feast. Sugared or salted almonds may be served in souvenir boxes like those illustrated here. These are made of cotton to represent snowballs, the eyes, nose and mouth being painted on with water colors. The tin cup and funnel make quaint covers for the larger boxes. Fancy lids shaped out of pasteboard may be covered with crape paper.

When mixed nuts are served have them cracked before they are taken to the table. See that there is a small portion of salt at each cover. Nuts with salt are valuable as an aid to digestion.

If you prefer to make your own salted almonds put an ounce or two of almonds in a bowl, pour boiling water over them, cover and let them stand for five or six minutes. By pressing them between the finger and thumb the skins will readily come off. Dry in a clean cloth.



FANCY ALMOND BOXES.

Put a tablespoonful or less of olive oil, according to the quantity of almonds, in another small bowl. Put in the almonds and stir them round till all are coated with oil. Then roll them in salt. Put them in the oven, which should be moderately hot, and leave them till a pale brown. Take them out, shake off the superfluous salt, and when cold they are ready to serve.

Sugared nuts are nice. Nearly all nuts except peanuts are palatable in this shape. Hickory nuts and butternuts are especially good.

Have the meats picked from the shells. Boil granulated sugar with enough water to dissolve it, stirring as little as possible. When it can be drawn out in a thread stir in the nuts and let them cook a very little, for if left too long on the stove the oils will be drawn from them. Pour thinly on platters, and when cold they will be found to separate easily.

Appearances are deceitful. Even French pastry doesn't taste as good

SANTA CLAUS' MISTAKE.

A Story of a Christmas Morning and a Boy who Interfered with Santa's Plans.

It was very early Christmas morning; it would have been quite dark in the bedroom if it had not been for the bright street light outside the window.

Side by side against the wall stood two white beds. In one slept Charlie Kennedy, aged five; in the other, Donald Kennedy, aged seven, lay awake.

From the foot of each bed hung a stocking.

"It looks like night out of doors," thought Donald. "But I b'lieve it is really morning, and if it is morning I shall just have one peep into my stocking to see what Santa Claus has brought me."

Donald slipped a bare pink foot cautiously out of bed, then the other followed, and in his blue and white striped pyjamas he crept to the well-filled stocking and emptied the contents on the quilt.

In the dim light he could see a ball, a knife, a Chinese puzzle, an orange, and a box of sweets, also a clockwork motor boat.

He put the things carefully back, then looked longingly at his brother's stocking.

"I'll just peep at Charlie's. That will be no harm," he thought.

Charlie had much the same as Donald, only in place of the clockwork motor boat, there was a cannon. Donald handled it lovingly.

"Santa Claus ought to have known that I mean to be a soldier. He should have given me this cannon," he muttered. "Charlie is to be a sailor, so the motor boat would be just the thing for him. Santa Claus has made a mistake—that's what he has done."

Donald put back Charlie's presents and crept into his warm bed. But he could not sleep; he kept thinking of the cannon and the motor boat.

"I am sure Santa Claus has made a muddle about us. I shall set things right."

And so saying, Donald got out of bed once more, and put Charlie's cannon in his own stocking, and gave his brother the motor boat.

Having done this, Donald once more got into bed, and this time he soon went to sleep.

II.

It was Christmas Day and breakfast-time. Around the breakfast table in the dining-room, decorated with evergreens, sat Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, Donald and Charlie, and their sisters Doris and Rose, whilst Uncle Bob was placed between Donald and Charlie to see that they 'behaved themselves," as he laughingly remarked.

As they were all chattering, Ellen, the parlormaid, entered with a tray. On the tray was a letter.

"I wonder who it is from?" remarked Mrs. Kennedy. "I am sure the post has never arrived as early as this on Christmas Day."

"It is addressed to Master Donald and Master Charlie, and I found it in the drawing-room grate, ma'am. It looked just as if it had fallen down the chimney," said Ellen.

"What a peculiar place for a letter! Do let me see who it's from. Shall I read it out to you, boys?" asked his mother.

"Yes, please, mummy. I expect it is from Santa Claus. I dare say he dropped it down the chimney in passing," said Donald.

Mother and father smiled at this suggestion, whilst Uncle Bob grinned broadly.

"Why, it is from Santa Claus, as you said," remarked Mrs. Kennedy, looking very surprised. He writes:

"Dear Donald and Charlie,—A line in great haste to say that I have just found I have made a mistake about the things I put in your stockings last night. I did not know before which of you had settled to be the sailor and which the soldier, or I should have given the presents differently. Now I know, and, to make up, please look in the porch, and the box of soldiers you will find there is for the boy who had the motor boat, and the box of sailors for the boy to whom I gave the cannon. I hope this will please you both. I should have left the soldiers and sailors in your bedroom, but it is nearly light as I write this, and I am of a nervous disposition, and should not like you to see me, as I am so shy.

"Your loving friend,
"Santa Claus."

"How thoughtful of Santa Claus to write!" said Mrs. Kennedy. "I suppose Donald has the motor boat, so will get the box of soldiers; and Charlie has the cannon, so will have the sailors."

"No; I have got the motor boat," said Charlie. "And Donald has the cannon."

Donald did not say anything, but he looked very, very solemn.

"Oh, why did I change my motor boat for the cannon?" he thought.

He looked even more serious still when the parcels in the porch were opened, for the box of soldiers was the most splendid one he had ever seen. There were rows and rows of horse and foot soldiers, with shining swords and brightly-painted coats. The sailors were very nice, but nothing came up to soldiers in Donald's eyes.

"I think there has been some mistake," said Uncle Bob, noticing the piteous expression on his nephew's face. "I had a private talk with Santa Claus, and told him particularly that you were to be the gallant soldier of the Kennedy family, and Charlie the sailor boy. There has been a mistake somewhere, I am sure."

As the hours of Christmas Day went by the Kennedy children were happy, contented [illegible], playing with their new toys—all but Donald, and he looked more and more solemn.

III.

It was Christmas night; Donald and Charlie were in bed. Charlie was asleep, but Donald lay awake. Presently manly footsteps passed the half-open door.

"Uncle, uncle—is that you?" called Donald.

"Yes; why aren't you asleep, young man?"

"I can't sleep; I am worried, uncle. Please sit on my bed, quite close to me. I want to confide in you."

Uncle Bob smiled in the dark.

"Speak on," he said.

"Uncle, you seem to know more about Santa Claus than the rest of us; you are friends with him, aren't you?"

"Yes; Santa Claus and I make little plans together sometimes. What is the matter?"

"Well, it is like this. I thought that Santa Claus had made a mistake when I saw the motor boat in my stocking and the cannon in Charlie's, so I thought I'd put the mistake right. If I had left them as they were, I should have had the soldiers; and I do want them."

"I thought something odd had happened," said Uncle Bob. "Another time you must leave Santa Claus to rectify his own mistakes. I am sorry about the soldiers, but you must be content with the sailors."

"I am awake," came from the other bed. "Donald can have the soldiers. I'd really rather have the sailors, but I did not like to say so," said Charlie.

So Donald had the soldiers and Charlie the sailors, and everyone was pleased.

And Donald has made up his mind not to interfere with Santa Claus' plans another Christmas.

WHEN WAS THE CHRIST CHILD BORN?

IT is not generally known that there is a grave question as to the actual date of Christ's birth.

For many centuries we have celebrated Christmas on Dec. 25 and have not troubled ourselves with chronological inquiries. That course is no doubt reasonable and proper, for the churches have sanctioned it.

As a matter of fact, few modern theologians and chronologists agree as to the date of the birth of the Saviour. What most of them agree in, however, is that it did not occur on Dec. 25.

A point on which there is still more unanimity is that Christ was not born in the year which we call 1 A. D. He was born at least four years earlier.

The present method of computing the years was introduced by the Roman abbot Dionysius Exiguus in the sixth century and came into general use two centuries later, during the reign of Charlemagne. He placed the Nativity on Dec. 25, 754, A. U. C.—i. e., after the founding of Rome. Nearly all chronologists agree that he was wrong by about four years. Christ, according to them, was born 750 A. U. C., or 4 B. C., if not earlier.

Much evidence is offered in support of this. According to Matthew ii, 1, Christ was born in the days of King Herod I. or the Great, who died, according to Josephus, at Jericho A. U. C. 750, just before the Passover. This date has been verified by the astronomical calculations of the eclipse of the moon, which took place on March 13 in the year 750 A. U. C., a few days before Herod's death.

Allowing two months or more for the events between the birth of Christ and the murder of the innocents by Herod, the nativity must be put back at least to February or January, 750 A. U. C. or 4 B. C.

The star which guided the wise men has been brought into service in the attempt to fix the birth of Christ with scientific accuracy. Between 1603 and 1604 the great astronomer Kepler observed a conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn, which was made more luminous by the addition of Mars in the month of March, 1604. In the autumn of the same year he observed near the planets Saturn, Jupiter and Mars a new fixed star of uncommon brilliancy.

It was blazing and glittering "like the most beautiful and glorious torch ever seen when driven by a strong wind" and seemed to Kepler an "exceedingly wonderful work of God."

He thought that this phenomenon might lead to the determination of the date of Christ's birth. By careful calculation he ascertained that a similar conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn, with the later addition of Mars and probably some extraordinary star, took place repeatedly between the years 747 and 748 A. U. C.

THE CHRIST CHILD.

The discovery of Kepler was almost forgotten until the nineteenth century, when it was independently confirmed by several eminent astronomers, among them Schubert of St. Petersburg, Ideler and Bencke of Berlin and Pritchard of London.

The majority of theologians agree that the date of Christ's birth cannot be fixed accurately from the New Testament or from any other source.

A Perfect Christmas.

Let us try to imagine what a scene the world would present if all men the earth around could have and enjoy one perfect Christmas—one day in which the Christmas spirit should manifest itself in every human heart in all its happiest, truest, largest meaning. What a foretaste of the millennium such a day would be! What sorrows would be mitigated, what misery assuaged, what enmities, jealousies, bitternesses, would be buried never to be renewed! Such a Christmas even for one day would be a source of immeasurable blessing to the world. It could not fail to break the crust of human selfishness beyond restoration and set many springs of kindness and good will flowing, never to cease. While such a Christmas, even for a day, can exist only in the realm of dreams, it is within our power to make each recurring Christmas measurably like it by translating our wishes into deeds, by making the best of our means and opportunities to make life a little brighter and a little sweeter for those around us and a little nearer like the life we could truly wish for all mankind.—Leslie's Weekly.

The Usual Result.

"What do you want for Christmas this year, John?" asked his wife.

"I don't know," he replied.

"All right," she said. "I'll get you something for the house."

Sometimes a man lies to his wife

JACK HORNER PIES.

They Are Indispensable Features of Juvenile Christmas Parties.

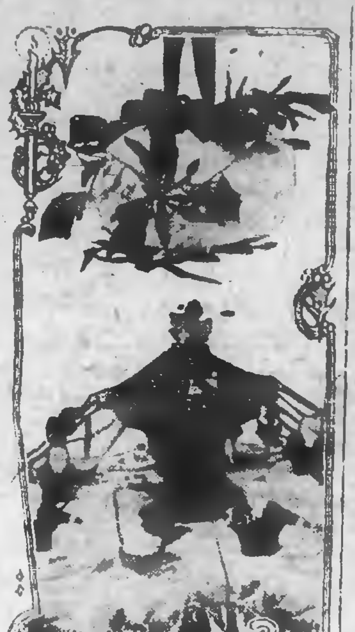
When there are many children in the family a Jack Horner pie is not a bad accessory to the Christmas dinner. It is a pleasant way of distributing individual souvenirs.

An appropriate Christmas centerpiece of this description is a huge snowball that looks like the real thing, and has twelve smaller balls in it, each one of these containing a present.

The ribbons by which the presents are drawn out are of different colors and hang over the sides of the big snowball.

More effective in color is an enormous ball made of a mass of red flowers, and from the center of each hangs the ribbon attached to the gift.

Another Jack Horner pie is in the shape of a snow man so true to life that he even has on the old hat and holds a bundle of switches. All around the place where his waist line ought to be are the ribbons by which the presents are removed from his capacious interior.



JACK HORNER PIES.

Still another variety is the huge red cornucopia that is decorated with gold paper and holly berries and is suspended from the chandelier over the table, the ribbons hanging within convenient reach of the guests.

Did You Ever Consider
How much your earning ability represents?
What is your income? Is it $1,200, $3,000 or $5,000 per year? How much capital at 6 per cent. interest would it require in order to equal your present income? $50,000 at 6 per cent. interest equals $3,000 per year.
Your earning capacity is your family's capital. How long would it take to accumulate a sum which, at interest, would provide sufficient income, in the event of your death, to support your home and educate your children?
You, no doubt, believe that if you do not die you will be able to create an estate. Statistics show that the majority of people die leaving nothing. Are you positively sure that you will live to create this estate?
Life is uncertain—men apparently in the best of health die suddenly. In order to make provision in the event of your death the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will, by your depositing a comparatively small amount each year for a definite number of years, pay to your wife or child, or estate, immediately upon receipt of proofs of death, a certain amount of money. This offers you the means of creating an immediate estate in the event of your death.
The two illustrations herewith will show the benefits of a policy of Life Assurance as issued by this Company.

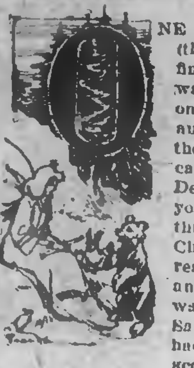
A Midsummer Visit From Santa Claus



ONE time somebody (they could never find out who it was) played a joke on Santa Claus and tore off all the leaves of the calendar up to Dec. 22, which, as you know, is only three days before Christmas. It was really midsummer, and the weather was very hot, but Santa Claus, who had always gone according to his calendar and had never found it wrong, believed time must have slipped by him without his realizing it.

He had been rather taking his time in the workshop and had scarcely half enough toys to go around, so he was much worried how to give presents to all his children.

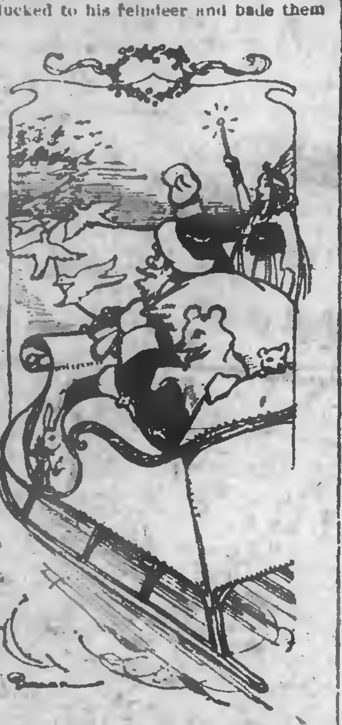
A fairy heard him talking to himself about his troubles and had a splendid idea. She hurried into the woods and told the other fairies and all the beasts and birds and bugs about Santa Claus' trouble, asking their help in the matter.

"I don't see how we can help much," said a little bear cub. "We can't make toys."

"No," said the fairy, "but you can be toys. My plan is for us to offer to take the places of the toys that Santa Claus needs. We fairies can be dolls, for there are lots of dolls' dresses in Santa's workshop, I know."

"Splendid!" Santa said. "Just hop aboard my sleigh, which is hitched in the front yard, and we'll be off."

So the animals and fairies and everything else hopped into Santa's great sleigh, and he, climbing to the seat, clucked to his reindeer and bade them fly over the ground. But they could not move the sleigh, for there was no snow on the ground. Santa Claus did not know what to do, but the fairy declared that she could fix that difficulty.



SPREAD THEIR WINGS AND FLEW OFF.

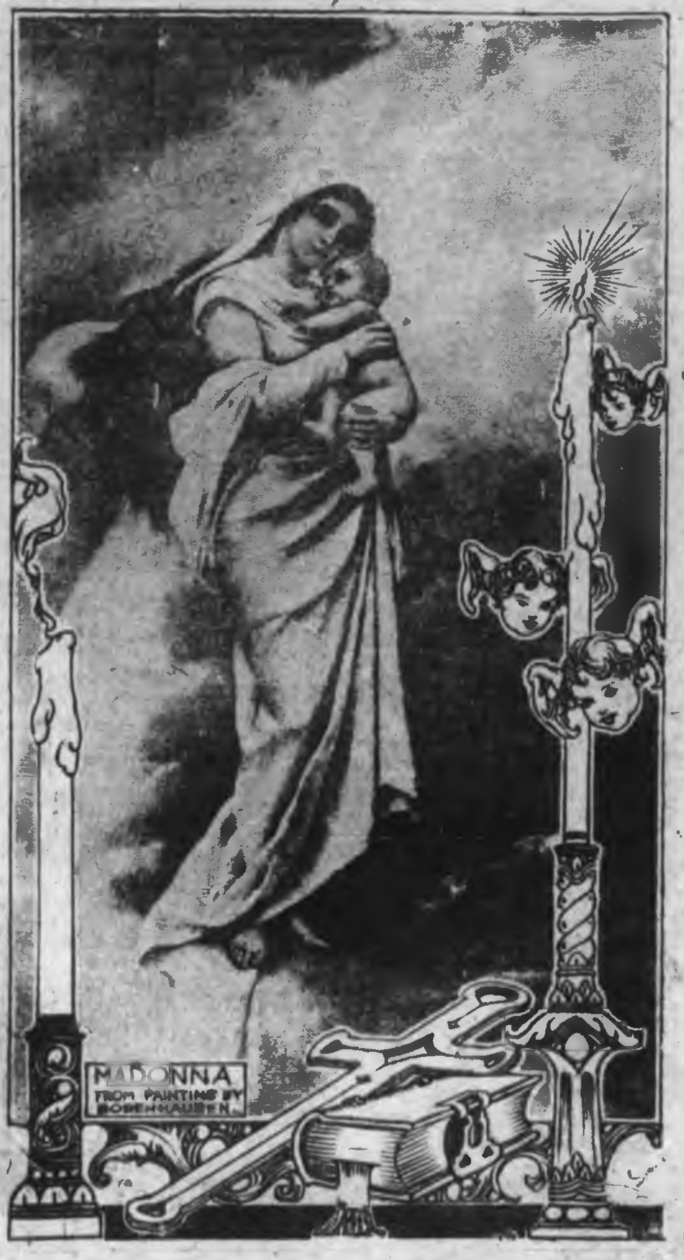
She blew a little whistle, and hundreds of white wild geese came flying from the sky. She told them what was the matter, and the geese, catching the end of a long rope in their beaks, spread their wings and were off with the sleigh and its precious load, bearing it as lightly as a feather, so that it hardly touched the ground.

By morning Santa visited all the towns and left presents everywhere. He hadn't a single thing left in his sleigh and thought that he had done a very good night's work. The children when they awoke in the morning and found the presents wondered where they could have come from. Some of the little bears had cards around their necks, which read "A Merry Christmas." The children were surprised, but joyously began to play with their strange toys. The little baby bears, who kept their claws curved in so that they wouldn't scratch, were the most delightful things. The children were very fond of the gifts.

The gnomes made splendid clown dolls, and some of the fairies were particularly pretty dollies. The birds in the cages sang sweetly, the beetles drilled like armies of real soldiers, and the field mice spun on their heads and skipped over each other's tail to the amusement of their small owners.

In a few days, however, the children began to tire even of these wonderful new toys, and the forest people said it was time to return to their own homes.

When they reached home they started in to help Santa Claus make toys as fast as they could so that no time would be lost for the real Christmas. The dear old man had by this time found he had made a mistake in the date and that the children would be expecting their regular call from him at the usual time.



CHRISTMAS REUNIONS

How many families whose members have been dispersed and scattered far and wide in the restless struggles of life are on this day reunited and meet once again in that happy state of companionship and mutual good will which is a source of such pure and unalloyed delight and one so incompatible with the cares and sorrows of the world, that the religious belief of the most civilized nations and the rude traditions of the roughest savages alike number it among the first joys of a future condition of existence provided for the blest and happy! How many old recollections and how many dormant sympathies does Christmas time awaken! — Charles Dickens.

Christmas Don'ts.

Don't try to pay debts or return obligations in your Christmas giving.

Don't give trashy things. Many an attic could tell strange stories about Christmas presents.

Don't make presents which your friends will not know what to do with and which would merely encumber the home.

Jolly St. Nicholastown, Where Old Santa Claus Lives

"UNCLE BOB," said Nan as she and Ned took their places, one on each arm of the big rocking chair, in which, as usual, during the children's hour, he was seated before the blazing log fire, "you promised you would take us to St. Nicholastown some time."

"That's so!" exclaimed Ned. "And we're all aboard now. Let's start. Toot, toot! Clang-a-lang-a-lang! Next station"—

"Hold on," said their uncle. "I'm the conductor of this excursion myself. The first station is Maybetown. Then we come to Perhaps. Here we follow the banks of Goose creek, which, as you know, wanders everywhere to get to Noplace, and the first thing you know — why, here we are at the gates of the city which is named after good old St. Nick himself.

"WE'RE ALL ABOARD NOW."

"Ah! This is the office of the Wish master. He takes the place of a postmaster with us, and a busy man he is too. This is about how he talks to himself as he records the wishes as they come over the wishophone:

"A sled for Billy, skates for Joe;
A wish that Christmas will bring us snow;
A poor woman wishes it won't be cold;
Dick wants a suit for a soldier bold,
Dolls for a million or more of girls
With go-to-sleep eyes and flaxen curls;
Billions of boxes of candies and such;
Books in French, English, Spanish and Dutch
And every known language under the sun;
Wagons and pistols, watches that run

"But here's old St. Nick himself. Listen to him. But I forgot that while he understands all languages he speaks only Fantasmia, so I'll have to translate. He says:

"'Hello, chicks! So you've come to see your dear old friend, have you? Glad of it! Make yourself at home. Yes, we're busy, very busy, indeed, but never too busy to be polite. We have every kind of factory in the world here, and all rushed with wishes. I tell you it keeps us busy sorting them. Why, if we filled every order just as it came the world would be a funny place. Just think of it! Here's a little pickaninny wishes to be painted white, another boy wishes he was a man, and a man wishes he was a boy, and a girl wishes she was a boy, and so on, but we got a funny wish during the dull season last summer. A little boy whose mamma would not let him go in swimming every day wished he would be turned into a fish so he could go swimming all the time. Ha, ha, ha! That reminds me of the saying in Mother Goose:

"'"If wishes were horses, beggars would ride." And a charming lady Mother Goose is. The dear soul writes me every now and then, and I'm glad to hear from her. I'll read you her last letter. It says:

"'Dear old Santa Claus, I hope you're well.
As for me, I'm feeling wellish,
With only food and drink enough
To give to life a relish.
I'm somewhat bothered, though, at times,
And more than I care to tell,
For Little Boy Blue and Little Bopeep
Don't do their duty well,
And little Johnny Green and big John Stout
Will quarrel about the cat,
While the Three Blind Mice eat up the food,
Helped by Jack's big rat.
The Little Roast Pig is pretty well,
And Jack and Jill are better.
I cannot write about all the folks;
'Twould make too long a letter.
And now I must stop and put on the pot
Of porridge for the Man in the Moon.
Give my love to all good children
Wherever they may be found,
And tell them I always think of them
When Christmas comes around.
With best wishes,
'MOTHER GOOSE.'

"'Good, dear old Mother Goose! She certainly has her hands full, but I was talking about present factories and such things. Look around you. Take that candy factory, for instance. It's built of the finest blocks of candy in the world, surrounded by a grove of chocolate eclair trees. In that hill over yonder is a fine plum pudding mine. That stream is a lemonade river. Its banks and bed are sugar. That cracking sound you hear is from the cracker factory. Ha, ha, ha! We crack crackers and jokes here too!'"

"IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?"

"But," interrupted Nan, "now tell us truly, Uncle Bob, is there a Santa Claus or St. Nicholas, and does he really come down the chimney?"

"Now, when it comes to that," answered the uncle, "there are some things it doesn't do to ask too many questions about. There's one thing I do know, though, and that is that every Christmas either Santa or somebody else sends me a lot of things I'm mighty glad to get and am very thankful to receive."

THE hurrying feet of a hundred millions have been helping the New York Central to decide the kind of pavement to use in the passageways of its superb new passenger terminal, which will be opened about Jan. 31. The suburban station, for the accommodation of the vast army of commuters, was opened last October. The suburban concourse is of the same dimensions as the main concourse—300 by 120 feet—except as to height of ceiling. It is a station complete in all details, the same as the main concourse for through passengers. The public also has aided in determining the easiest slope for the ramps that lead from one level to another instead of stairways. The average eyesight of the innumerable throng has settled the size of the letters and their spacing in the signs at the entrances to the train platforms—the places where there is time for only a hasty glance. In these and in many other ways have the people themselves assisted in the making of the new Grand Central terminal the most marvelous city gate in all the world.

All Move in Straight Lines.

The great currents of traffic, that are at their height at night and at morning, are kept separate. They do not meet or mingle. Each flows smoothly in its proper direction. This is because, like the men running to catch his train, they go in a straight line. There are no corners to turn. The signs begin at the subway and at the exits from the train platforms. They start the crowd in the right direction, and all it has to do is to keep moving straight ahead, which is the most natural thing in the world. The passageway from the inbound station to the subway and the other one from the subway to the trains each is as straight as a ruler's edge.

All this sounds perfectly simple and easy of accomplishment. It might be if you were handling only a thousand people, but when it comes to a probable hundred million the problem becomes complicated. The same principle of the straight line—the shortest distance between two points—is applied to handling baggage as well. The outbound baggage goes straight through the subway at Forty-fifth street and the inbound through the other baggage subway at Forty-third street. It is the same way with the mails from the great branch postoffice. The streams never meet. There is no delay, no lost motion.

The Man in a Hurry.

Enter the new station by practically whatever door you will and your forward progress to your train is continuous. You need take no backward steps. You even shorten the distance by going to the ticket office. There are so many windows at which tickets will be sold that there will be no waiting. The man who is in haste to buy a ticket for a train that is about to start need not come in contact with the one who is standing at the window asking questions and planning his journey. There are plenty of places for each—the hurried and the leisurely.

Ticket in hand, a man rushes across the big concourse. He is going on the Twentieth Century Limited. He has no time to spare. From the two points on either side of the concourse where he may come in he has a complete view of the train gate line. He may sweep it from end to end at a glance. Over each gate is a triangular box that projects out from the wall. It shows the number of the track, the name of the train and the time it departs. The two visible sides of this "box" are placed at a certain angle. It took a long time—months of patient study and testing with thousands of eyes—to get these signs so that each should be always exactly at right angles with the line of vision of the hurried passenger seeking his train.

If the man is going to stop at some city east of Chicago or whatever is the ultimate destination of the train he is anxious to know if the train he has selected will halt there. Probably he has been in too much of a rush to inquire, or, in his haste, has forgotten. Once he has picked out the train from the sign over the gate he hurries toward it. When he is a hundred feet away he can read the list of stops on the station board.

Platforms Level With Car Floors.

The long station platforms are on the same level as the platforms and the floors of the cars. That is one of the most important things from the standpoint of safety and comfort. The necessity of the passenger going up and down the car steps is eliminated. It cuts in half the time of loading and unloading passengers. It has been found by experimenting that the ordinary suburban train takes eighty seconds to unload when the passengers have to descend the car steps. It takes forty seconds when they walk directly onto the station platform. In the old way the passenger had to climb down three and one-half feet, which later he had to ascend to get out into the street. There is an additional saving of seconds and of energy in the new way; also it is much safer. The risk of accident practically disappears. But such a thing, like everything else about a big station like this, no matter if it seems an unimportant detail, adds tremendously to the expense.

Millions For Temporary Work.

Literally millions of dollars have been spent all through this great terminal to make it better than anything ever known before and to eliminate so far as humanly possible every chance of accident. In the millions that have been expended for convenience and comfort should be included the "temporary work" of which no trace now remains. Yet it cost more than $2,000,000. This was the extra expense for carrying on the business without inconveniencing the passengers while the old station was being demolished—such things as temporary train sheds, trestles built in the yards for carrying trains over excavations, and things like that which would not have been necessary in the creation of a terminal on ground not in constant use.

A New and Marvelous Bumper.

The matter of bumpers at the ends of tracks would not seem worthy of much study, yet it is another of the items that has received years of consideration. The ordinary station bumper is simply two heavily braced uprights that will stop a train going at a moderate rate of speed. Such bumpers cost about $100 each to construct. Those which are being put in at the Grand Central terminal cost $5,000 each. There are forty of them. They are to insure a train against going into any of the columns or on to the concourse. They have to be exceptionally strong so as to take care of the extraordinarily heavy trains—ten to fifteen steel cars, each eighty-four feet long.

Never before has there been a bumper devised that will meet American conditions. The biggest ones in the world are in a station in Glasgow, Scotland. They have a capacity of resisting an impact of 500 tons moving at a speed of ten miles an hour. In the English trains the bumpers strike at the two lower corners of the car. In American trains the blow is received in the center of the car. Those being installed in the Grand Central terminal will have a capacity of 1,000 tons moving at ten miles an hour and will produce an absolute stop without accident to the train or to the structures behind the bumper. Such a shock is very rare, but when the emergency arises the bumper becomes very important. It took more than a year to design and build the first one, and that after eight years spent in studying and experimenting. It is only one of the many things designed to prevent problematic accidents which may never occur. They are essential for the maximum safety, but they add enormously to the cost of a big terminal.

Storing Electricity For Emergencies.

At frequent intervals throughout the station "yard"—the great network of tracks that spread fanwise in two levels south of Fiftieth street—there is a "battery house," in which is stored continually enough electricity to handle the business of its particular section at the "peak of the load" for from twenty minutes to half an hour independent of the dynamos and the other machinery in the big power and light plant. That means that if everything else should fail the storage batteries would keep the lights shining and the trains moving long enough to make repairs, and the general public probably would not know that anything was wrong. The business of the great terminal would continue without a hitch. The engineers say there has not been an interruption of the electric service for six years, but that they don't want any if it is humanly possible to prevent it.

Probably nowhere else in the world has so much important experimental research been carried on and so many vital problems solved for the public benefit as in the building of the Grand Central terminal.

Announcing Arrivals and Departures.

When an incoming train is about to arrive there is a great stir among the crowds of people awaiting it. They gather about the bulletin board and watch to see on which track it is coming in. The man at the board gets the news from the signal towers by means of the telautograph and chalks up the information. An improvement on this method has been devised and is being perfected so that it can be put in use later. The announcements of train arrivals will be made on a board that has illuminated or movable letters. These will be controlled from one of the towers in the yard. Instantly, as soon as the switches are set for an incoming train to end its journey on a certain track, the information will flash forth on the bulletin board. This will save a few seconds and there will be no possibility of error.

The announcing of outgoing trains will be done, as it has been for some time past in the temporary station, by magnaphones. At a central point a clear voiced man speaks into the instrument and his voice, magnified in volume, is reproduced simultaneously in every part of the waiting rooms from the trumpet-like horns that are placed inconspicuously against the walls. While the utility of this method depends, of course, on the clearness with which the announcer speaks, it is far ahead of the old way of calling the trains by a man walking about the station and making the announcements. The new way saves a good many minutes.

Paging Passengers.

Incidentally this system of sound waves transmitted from a central point will be used on even a larger scale than ever before for "paging" persons. It happens frequently that a business house suddenly finds it necessary to communicate with one of its representatives who has gone to the Grand Central to take a train for, say, Chicago. It is highly important that he be reached immediately to receive additional information or instructions. Perhaps a telegram has come in that renders his trip unnecessary. If it were not for this device this would be impossible. As it is, however, the firm calls up the information bureau. A moment later the mechanical announcers call out from one end of the station to the other, "Mr. Smith is wanted at the information bureau." "Mr. Smith" hears and heeds and hurries over. He is told to call up his office. He does so and the whole matter is arranged in no time.

In the temporary station many persons are now being paged. In the new station it is expected that the number will be much greater. This is simply one of the conveniences—the little details—whose sum total spells perfection.

"G. C. T."

It has taken several years to decide on the color of the uniforms that shall be worn by the employees in the new Grand Central terminal. The difficulty lay in getting a color of cloth that would look well and yet be conspicuous, yet not so striking as to subject its wearer to ridicule. Many kinds and shades were tried. Finally a bluish gray has been selected. The frock coat has a black collar and black lapels. On the lapels is the chief distinguishing mark, the letters "G. C. T." in gold thread in a medallion bordered in the same way. These initials, it has been found from many tests, meet the eye instantly. In future there can be no mistaking a hotel porter for a station employee if a man is not quite blind. The coats are made long so that in winter those employees who are exposed to the weather can wear a cardigan jacket underneath without spoiling the looks or the neatness of the uniform. The "red cap" porters will continue to wear their familiar headdress, but they will be put in neat uniforms.

Station Men Are Schooled.

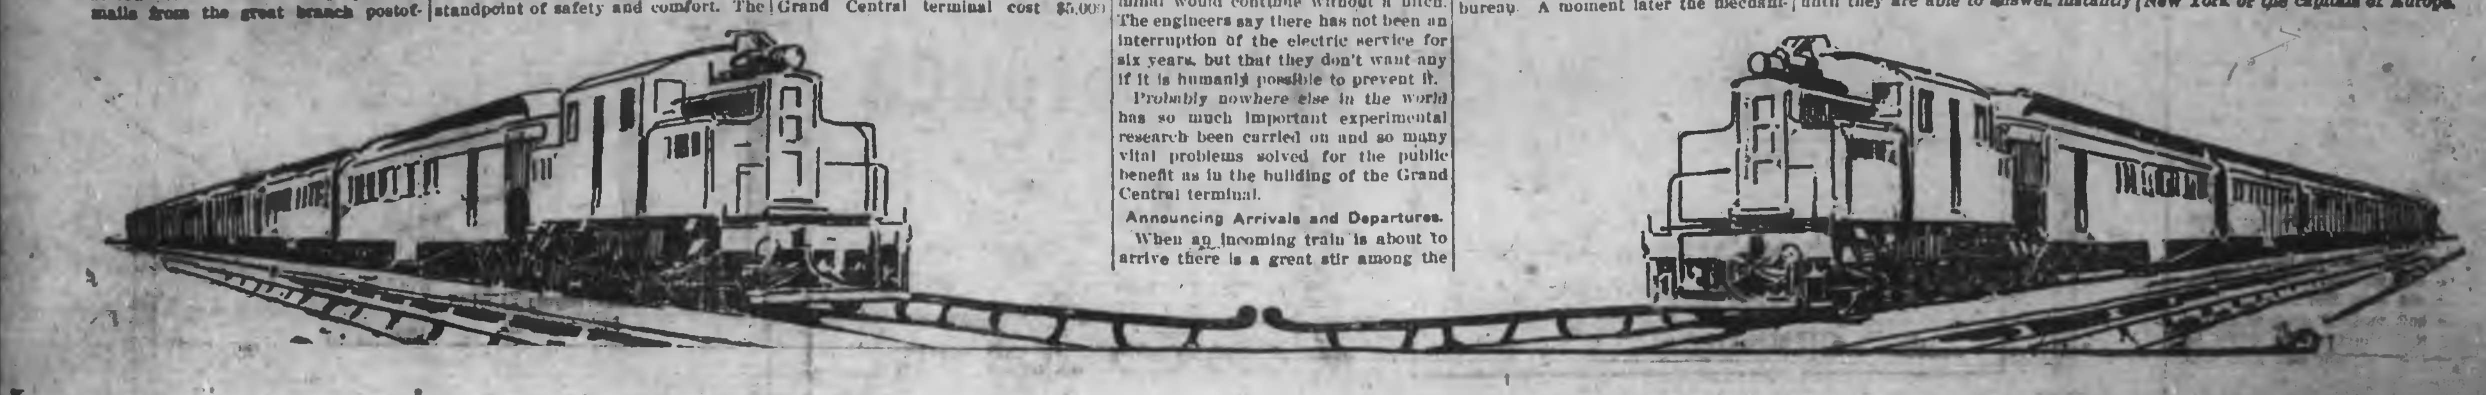
All the station men—the whole organization of the Grand Central terminal that comes in contact with the public—are being schooled and rehearsed in their duties every day, getting ready for the opening of the new station. Even the "red cap" men participate in the drills. New men are given a time table and a station schedule covering the tracks on which certain trains usually arrive. They study these things until they are able to answer instantly any question relating to the arrival and departure of regular trains. They are also instructed in their other duties, keeping the train platforms clear of trucks and making the passengers as comfortable as possible and so on. Incidentally they are required to know the city's streets and transit lines as thoroughly as an experienced policeman, so they can direct strangers quickly and accurately.

Direct Subway Connections.

The new station will have direct connection with the subways, so that the incoming or outgoing passenger need not go into the street at all. To get to the temporary terminal that the railroad has been using in the interval between the demolition of the old one and the finishing of the new they have had to traverse a covered way. In that portion of it leading from Forty-second street to the entrance of the temporary station and waiting rooms a number of different kinds of pavement were installed a little more than a year ago in order to ascertain which would be the best to use in the most traveled passageways of the new terminal. They were in sections the full width of the walk. This stretch of sidewalk is trodden by more persons than any other bit of sidewalk in the world. It is calculated that more than 100,000,000 persons have walked over these sample pavements since they were put in place. The public has tested them and thus has made easy for the experts the work of selection.

Unusual Features.

There are so many new and convenient things in the new terminal that the list of them seems almost endless. From the moment it is opened in January next it will be one of the great show places of New York and one of the things in the city most worth seeing. One of its unique conveniences will be a large number of dressing rooms. If a man comes to the city for a brief stay, he can hire one of these rooms, take a bath, change his clothes, check his bag and go his way. When he is ready to depart he will not need to lose any time in getting to his train. Also there will be the finest restaurant in this terminal that is to be found in any railroad station in the world. It will be moderate in its charges, but in its appointments and details it will equal any of the most famous restaurants in New York or the capitals of Europe.



THE NEW AND THE OLD

By Nancy Byrd Turner

I take the new dolls Christmas day and walk them on the street,
Dressed up in all their fine array, and looking very sweet;
And every one we meet says, "Wait
and let us see,
Such darling babies three!" Or,
"What a pretty sight!"
But I let the old doll sleep with me
on Christmas night.

The strange new dolls on Christmas day have every hook in place,
And hair curled up in dainty way, and petticoats of lace;
But thought the old doll's face is nothing much to see,
And she's lost her finery, and her hair
has faded white
Somehow she always sleeps with me
on Christmas night.

Why is an adjective like a drunk man?—Because it cannot stand alone.

HIDE-AND-SEEK

By Margery Dane

Nicodemus was a fat little black-nosed pug-dov. Dorothy found him on Christmas morning tied to the great green Christmas tree with a big red ribbon.

"O you dear doggy!" exclaimed Dorothy, giving him a hug. "You're the very best present I've ever had!"

All day long Dorothy played with her new pet. Books and toys were all forgotten. Nicodemus could play hide-and-seek better than many little boys and girls, and he did not mind being "it" at every game. He could not blind his eyes very well, so Dorothy shut him up in the library, and when she called "Coo!" mamma let him out; and then how fast he would run, sniffing here and there, until at last he would find her.

Dorothy liked to play this game very much indeed, but she did not like to have a little pug-dog smart enough to find her every time, so one day she thought and thought of a very hard place in which to hide.

"I'll go into my closet and shut the door tight," she said to herself; and up she went to her room.

"Coo!" she called loudly, as she shut the door. "Coo! coo! coo!" she now called again.

Nicodemus heard her as he was eating a chocolate-drop down in the dining-room. He pricked up his ears and sniffed with his nose, and then up over the stairs he went, straight to Dorothy's closet door.

"Why, Nicodemus," said Dorothy, in surprise, "you've found this place just as quick as ever!"

She turned the door-knob quickly, for she was eager to get out of her dark hiding-place, but the door stuck fast. Then she pushed and pulled with all her little might, but the door would not open.

"Oh," screamed Dorothy. "I can't get out! O mamma!" she shouted. The closet was so black and still.

Nicodemus barked as loud as ever he could when he found that his little mistress was in trouble, and finally mother came running to see what was the matter.

"O dear!" moaned Dorothy, as she wiped her eyes. "I was so frightened! I'll never hide in a hard place again, never!"

Nicodemus wagged his tail and shook his head wisely.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

TURKEY is the chief dish at the Christmas dinner. In selecting turkeys remember that those having black feathers are considered the best. Young turkeys have smooth black legs, but when the bird is old they are rough and reddish. If the bird has been long killed its eyes will be sunken and its feet dry.

For roasting buy a hen turkey, with a whitish skin that is clean and soft, the breast broad, the legs black and the neck short. The flesh of an old hen is usually covered with long hairs, and the housewife will be wise to reject any such birds if she wants a satisfactory dinner. The spurs of a young cock turkey should be short and its legs black.

With Oyster Sauce.

One of the most popular ways of serving roast turkey is with oyster sauce. Put the turkey on to parboil in water enough to make gravy and dressing. When tender lift out and lay in the roaster. Have bread broken up ready to make dressing, one-fourth of which is cold corn bread. Add six hard boiled eggs chopped, two raw eggs well beaten, one onion cut fine, a little sage, pepper and salt.

Then add one pint of fresh oysters and stir all together. Pour enough liquor over to make moist and mix well.

Then stuff the turkey and put in the oven to bake. Take liquor for the gravy, with one-third milk. Mince the heart, liver and gizzard. Add these to the liquor. Mix enough flour with milk to make a smooth paste, pour in and let boil until thick.

Chestnut Sauce.

One of the most delicious ways of serving turkey is with a dressing of chestnuts. This dressing is made by combining dry bread, butter, salt and pepper, one very small onion, an equal quantity of celery, a little parsley, a pinch of sage and one pound of chestnuts. The chestnuts must be shelled and scalded to remove the inner skin. Add to the whole one well beaten egg and enough water to make it moist.

After the turkey is stuffed stick an apple in the crop. The juice will keep the turkey moist.

If you do not use the turkey giblets in the stuffing cut them rather fine after they are roasted and introduce them into the gravy, without which no turkey dinner is complete.

Be careful not to leave much fat in the pan when the gravy is made or it will be strong and unpalatable. Serve it hot in a gravy boat.

Served With Sausage Meat.

Some persons are fond of turkey with a dressing of sausage meat. For this take six ounces each of lean and fat pork, both to be weighed after chopping; two ounces of breadcrumbs, two leaves of finely minced sage, a small blade of pounded mace, salt and pepper to taste. Bind with an egg. Equal quantities of this forcemeat and veal stuffing are nice, as the herbs and lemon peel in the veal stuffing give a delicious flavor to the sausage meat.

Larded Turkey.

If you wish to serve larded turkey get a nice fresh young fowl. Remove all pinfeathers and wash thoroughly inside and out. If the skin of the bird seems soiled put a pinch of bicarbonate in the water, rinsing this off.

Stuff as usual with the inside of a loaf of stale white bread, mixed with a lump of butter the size of an egg and seasoned with salt, pepper and summer savory. Do not wet the bread or the stuffing will be soggy and the turkey taste spoiled.

Truss in the usual manner and then lay four thin slices of salt pork over the breast of the bird. During the cooking baste often so that the pork fat will permeate all the bird.

This is an excellent way to prepare a turkey of the second class sort. The pork supplies the lacking flavor. A half dozen fresh country sausages may also be added to the bread filling if further richness is desired.

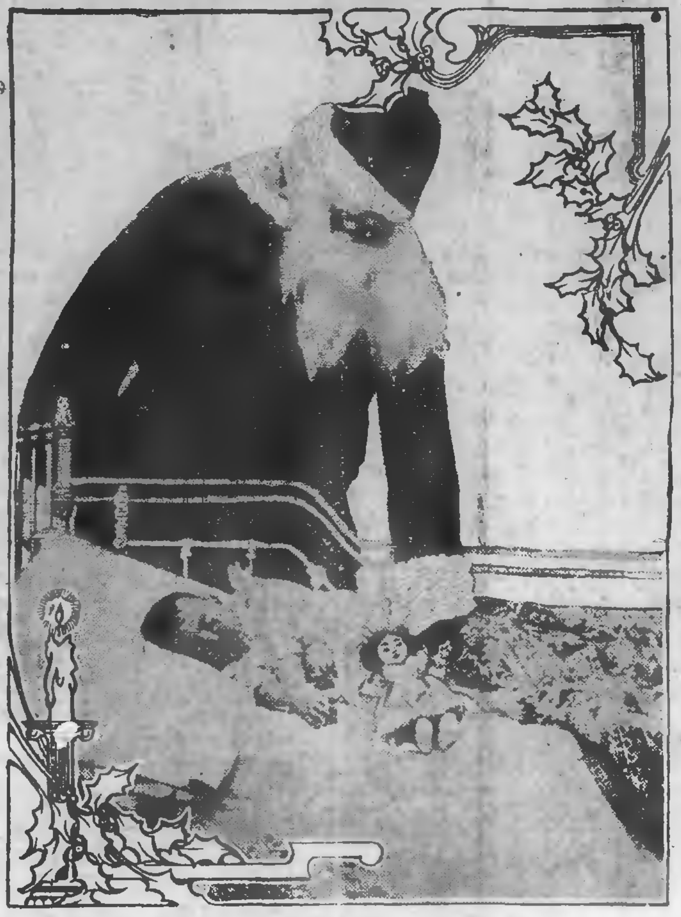
Christmas Eve.

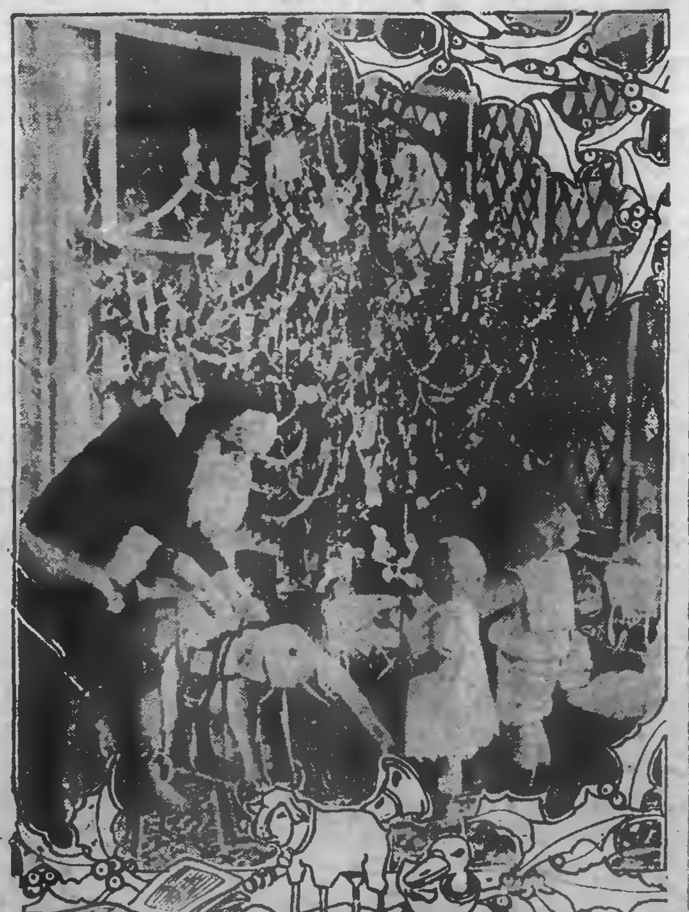
Dream, little child! The shadows fall.
Over the land the mystic veil
That hides the morrow from our eyes
Is swaying in the starlight pale.
Dream, little child! 'Tis Christmas eve.
Dream while the magic hours glide by.
Each wind that blows the snowflakes wild
Is laden with sweet mystery.



Dream, little child! The glowing coals
Are painting pictures on the wall.
Out from the quivering shadows there
You almost hear the thrilling call
Of "Merry Christmas, little maid!
I hope I've brought your heart's desire."
And Santa's shadow just above
Grows lifelike by the leaping fire.

Dream, little child! The Christmas air
Is glowing with your visions bright,
And all the joys tomorrow holds
Are shining on the page of night.
Dream, little child! And may the years
To you their richest treasures leave,
And may all happy dreams prove real
That come to you this Christmas eve!

Christmas Morning



THE CHRISTMAS GOOSE

Last Christmas a certain vicar was invited to a big dinner at the house of one of the leading men in the town. At the dinner table he was placed opposite a goose.

The lady of the house was placed on the vicar's left. Seeing the bird in front of him, he remarked: "I'm pretty near the goose this time." Then added hastily—"Excuse me; I meant the roast one."

Why is an acquitted prisoner like a gun?—Because he is charged, taken up, and then let off.

CASSEROLE DISHES.

Christmas Foods May Be Attractively Served In These.

Chicken cooked in the casserole may be one course at the Christmas dinner. The casserole dishes may be handsome nickel mounted affairs, like the ones shown in the picture, or merely simple earthenware vessels. The food will taste just as nice out of the plain as out of the expensive dishes.

The casserole dish may be brought to the table festooned with tiny garlands of holly berries.

When chicken is served a nice way of preparing it is in the casserole. Cut the fowl into neat joints and pieces. Remove the skin and as many of the small bones as possible. Put about two and a half tablespoonfuls of olive oil into a saucepan. Watch it carefully and as soon as it begins to smoke put in a few pieces of the fowl and fry, turning them frequently until they are quite white. Drain the fowl thoroughly on blotting paper and put aside until it is required.

Make some broth with the trimmings and bones of the bird by boiling them in a pint and a half of water, with a small onion, two cloves, a little piece of mace, a stick of celery cut up, a few sprays of parsley and a thin slice of bacon.

Cook an ounce and a half of flour with one ounce of butter without letting it brown, then add by degrees the chicken broth and, when the sauce is smooth and thick, the liquor from a small jar or can of mushrooms. Season the sauce with salt and pepper; stir in a tablespoonful of tomato ketchup, two teaspoonfuls of tarragon vinegar and sufficient browning to color the sauce and a few drops of carmine, but not enough to make it red.

Put the pieces of chicken into a casserole and strain the sauce over.

Cover with buttered paper, put on the lid of the casserole and place it in a moderately hot oven for two and a half hours. Half an hour before the chicken is to be served add the mushrooms and the last thing before sending it to table a squeeze of lemon juice if the sauce seems to need it.

GREEKS RECOMMENDED BY TURKS TO TAKE BETTER AIM

Constantinople, Dec. 20.—During an engagement between Turkish and Greek fleets off Dardenelles Straits recently the rival commanders exchanged pleasantries by wireless. The Greek commander telegraphed: "We have occupied the Islands of Tenedos and await your orders." To this the Turkish Admiral replied, "Your shells are falling wide. We would recommend you to take better aim." Little damage was done in the engagement.

London, Dec. 20.—The peace conference held a brief session yesterday. The Turkish delegates announced that fresh instructions had been despatched from Constantinople by special courier, therefore adjournment until Saturday was taken, by which time instructions should reach London.

News comes from the Ottoman capital that the Government is empowering the delegates to proceed with the negotiations with the Greek as well as the Balkan plenipotentiaries. This decision tends towards peace, as there has been a suspicion that the Turks were manoeuvering for time so that they might strengthen their army.

The conference is now in exactly the same position as the Portsmouth conference after the first week's work. The different parties are daily feeling the ground before striking a decisive blow.

After the sitting yesterday some of the Balkan delegates expressed disgust at the way affairs were dragging, while five armies and three besieged towns were enduring all the sufferings of war and the respective countries were the prey of desolation, misery and death.

A Bulgarian delegate observed that the Turks were much mistaken if they delayed the conference, hoping to strengthen their army with troops from Asia. These reinforcements were chiefly composed of undisciplined Bashi-Bazouks, who would prove a serious danger not to the enemy but to the Turks themselves.

In the meantime the allies are concentrating greater forces along the Tchatalja front to enable them, if war is resumed, to arrive at Constantinople within a few days

The prevailing opinion is that the various postponements are aiming at intervention by the powers. Turkey hopes to obtain better terms through the powers, some of whom have predominant interests in the Ottoman Empire. Besides, Turkey would consider it less humiliating to cede territory on pressure from the powers than at the command of those Balkan States, which were depicted to the Mussulman world until recently as negigible quantities.

The Greek proposals will be more complicated than those of the other allies, because they include the question of capitulations, which Greece alone among the Balkan States, enjoys in Turkey with the great powers. The capitulations, originally imposed on Turkey by the Republic of Genoa in 1553, include exemption from taxation for foreign subjects, special courts and other privileges. Greece is ready to accept a clause in the treaty with promising to renounce the right of capitulations when the other powers do the same.

Another delegate arrived yesterday. He brought important papers to Premier Venizelos. He is Rizo Rangabe, whose father, writer, poet, and archaeologist, was called "The Victor Hugo of Greece."

FOUR-YEAR-OLD PLAYMATES DROWNED WHEN ICE BROKE

While Standing on Thin Ice Two Tots at Swansea Break Through—Position of the Bodies Seems to Show That the Girl Attempted to Save Her Companion and Was Drowned Too.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—One tiny hand protruding from a hole in the ice led to the discovery of the lifeless bodies of Albert Samuel Prosser, aged four, and Bessie Morton, also four years, in a pond at Swansea at 4.45 yesterday afternoon.

When taken from the water the bodies were quite cold, showing that life had been extinct for at least 30 minutes. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, M.P.P., of Mimico, worked until late in the evening in an attempt to restore the two children to life, but his efforts were of no avail.

The position of the bodies when they were located would indicate that the little girl lost her life attempting to save the boy. It was only her arm that could be seen above the water, and her other hand was resting on Albert's. He was lying about two feet under water.

It is thought that the two children had gone on to the pond to slide. The boy ran ahead, stamping with his foot to test the ice. The ice gave way and he went through. To all appearance Bessie ran forward and held out her hand to him. But he was too heavy for her. The ice broke again and they were drowned. The pond itself is in a deep gully. The western side is the only way the gully can be entered with safety. Here Southport street borders the pond, separating it from the main marsh to the west, known as Sewer Pipe Pond.

The boy and girl reached the pond by Southport street. There is a thicket growing around it, and only one clear entrance to the ice is afforded. This is directly behind the house of D. Walker, whose yard extends to the water.

Although there are fully a dozen houses within a stone's throw of where the drowning occurred, no one heard any cries or saw the accident. There was a concert being given in the village school to close it, preparatory to the Christmas holidays. Nearly every house in the vicinity was locked up while the parents attended the concert to hear their children recite or sing.

Bessie and Albert were to young to attend school, so they had been sent out to play. They were seen at Sylvester's grocer store on Windermere avenue about four o'clock. They then disappeared.

FREE MAN ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Captain of the General Slocum Will be Liberated.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The President yesterday granted a pardon to Capt. Wm. H. Vanschaick, who commanded the steamboat General Slocum, which burned in 1904 in East River, off New York City, resulting in the loss of 1,030 lives, mostly women and children. The pardon becomes effective Christmas Day.

Vanschaick has been out of prison on parole for some time. In 1906 he was convicted and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for criminal negligence in failure to have sufficient life-saving and fire equipment aboard his vessel. He had served five years when paroled last February.

Arm Shattered by Shot.

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 20.—While returning from school yesterday afternoon, Gordon Mets, a resident of Blandford Station, thirteen miles north of this city, had one of his arms shattered by a gun shot, and in all probability he will lose the member. The gun was in the hands of a friend and accidentally exploded. The injured boy is now doing nicely in Woodstock Hospital.

KNIGHTHOOD FOR DR. RODD CK

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—The New Year's honor list is expected to include a knighthood for Dr. T. G. Roddick, of Montreal, in recognition of his efforts in promoting and bringing to a successful issue a uniform medical registration in Canada through the Dominion Medical Council.

Dr. Roddick was born at Harbor Grace in 1846 and was educated at Truro, N.S., Normal School and at McGill, with the medical faculty of which he was connected from 1873 to 1908, since when he has been a governor. He has been connected prominently with various medical associations and the militia, having organised the hospital and ambulance service in the Northwest Rebellion of 1885. He was elected M.P. for St. Antoine division, Montreal, in 1896 and 1900.

To Check Fires.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—With the object of stopping the fire waste, which amounts to nearly $25,000,000 every year in Canada a meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Boards of Trade, the Canadian Credit Men's Association and other bodies will shortly be held to form a National Fire Prevention Association.

This is the report received from a Greek captain, who has just arrived from the Dardanelles, and made public through a semi-official agency.

The bill met with much opposition, but all the minority amendments were rejected.

PREMIER GOES FOR HOLIDAY

Will Spend Vacation in the Southern States,

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—There was a migration of members from the capital on every outgoing train yesterday, and Parliament Hill is deserted today.

Unknown to everyone but his colleagues and intimate friends, Premier Borden, accompanied by Mrs. Borden, left yesterday morning for a short vacation in the Southern States. He will be away until a few days before the House meets again on Jan. 14. In his absence Hon. George E. Foster is acting Premier.

The Cabinet held two lengthy sessions yesterday and disposed of a number of routine matters.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will, it is understood, meet a conference of Liberal leaders in Montreal some time during the Christmas recess, presumably to discuss the naval situation. He will spend Christmas at his home here.

Memphis, Dec. 20.—Adam J. Boehler, who killed his wife Wednesday, held a squad of fifty policemen and detectives at bay for eight hours yesterday before he was shot and killed by officers. They forced their way into Boehler's stronghold in a downtown rooming house after the man had been partially overcome by fumes of formaldehyde forced into the room through holes cut in the wall and flooring. Several of the police officers were seriously wounded by Boehler.

Auto Tragedy a Hoax.

St. Thomas, Dec. 20.—The story of an auto accident at Ridgetown on Tuesday in which two deaths were alleged to have resulted, and by which a number of other persons were injured, is now declared to have been sent out from that town by a joker with an abnormal idea of humor.

Advices from Ridgetown yesterday say that nothing of the kind occurred, and that there are not even people of the names mentioned living in that locality.

DORCHESTER HOUSE

The late United States Ambassador to Great Britain, Mr. Whitelaw Reid, who died at his Great Dorchester home, in London, is survived by Mrs. Reid and their two children, Mr. Ogden Mills Reid, and a daughter, the Hon. Mrs. John Ward, who was Miss Jean Reid.

There are few houses in London where entertainments have been given on such a lavish scale as at Dorchester House. This residence Mr. Reid rented from Major Francis Holford, the King's equerry. The annual rental, $35,000, was twice that of the amount of Mr. Reid's salary as Ambassador. The King and the royal family were often guests there.

"Pen" Warden Not Yet Named.

Kingston, Dec. 20.—Although the position of warden of the penitentiary has been vacant several months through the resignation of Dr. J. M. Platt, it is not yet filled, and citizens are wondering about the delay. Two names mentioned prominently for the position are W. St. Pierre Hughes, accountant at the penitentiary, and Dr. W. G. Anglin.

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—The will of Sir Richard Cartwright was entered for probation at the court house here yesterday.

The total estate is valued at $238,292.90, but out of this debts, amounting to $155,000, will be taken. This leaves his widow, three daughters and six sons with less than $80,000 to share among them.

To his widow he leaves all the household furniture, plate, linen, china, provisions and other household effects, in addition to a legacy, to be paid to her by the executors.

All the rest of his estate and effects, both real and personal, were left to the disposal of his two sons, Dr. Richard C. Cartwright and Alexander D. Cartwright of Ottawa, who are to sell the real estate together or in parcels by public auction or private contract, with power to make any stipulations as to the title or evidence of the title or otherwise.

The surviving sons will also call in and convert into money the residuary personal estate, and therefrom pay all debts and funeral expenses.

The annual income, rents, issues and profits of this residuary are to be paid in quarterly payments to his wife during the whole period of her life.

To his three daughters — Harriet, Eliza, Frances Madeline and Mary Josephine, he leaves $20,000 each, to be paid after the death of his wife. In the event of anyone of them dying, leaving an heir or heirs, the money is to be bequeathed to them when they are twenty-one years of age.

The late Sir Richard Cartwright owned real property valued at $28,000, bank and other stocks valued at $63,790.27, furniture valued at $3,000 and several other effects, bringing the total up to $236,392.90.

No mention is made in the will of the proceeds of Sir Richard's book, which is reported as having a tremendous sale.

WHITNEY PULS QUIETUS ON TAX REFORM MEASURES

Assessment Committee, Declares its Faith in the Merits of the Present Act if Properly Interpreted—Premier Sharply Criticizes "New-Fangled" Methods.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—Tax reform received a severe blow yesterday. The two bills introduced by N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, and J. A. Ellis, Conservative M.P.P. for Ottawa, were rejected by the special tax committee. These bills aimed at a radical revision of the present Assessment Act. The committee, by a vote of 20 to 7, decided that the proposed legislation was unsuitable, or, in other words, the present act was entirely satisfactory—if properly administered.

After the bills had been put out of commission the Government side of the committee introduced a motion, which nobly defended the present Assessment Act, and carried it by a similar vote to that which defeated the Rowell-Ellis bills.

Mr. Rowell made an amendment to the Government motion to the effect that there should be a lower tax on improvements than on lands, including buildings, businesses and incomes, but this also met the fate of the Liberal leader's bills.

Sir James Whitney, who was in England during the previous sitting of the committee, gave his views during a general discussion on taxation. In vigorous terms he classed the Rowell-Ellis amendments as entirely unnecessary. He was positively opposed to the principles of the bills. They suggested a harum-scarum remedy for a disease which did not exist in the province. "Until we need a change let us stay as we are," said he. "There is no necessity for such single tax legislation."

The majority of the committee evidently looked at matters in the same light as the Premier.

Sir James spoke for about a half-hour against a revision of the Assessment Act, as proposed. "In my humble opinion, admitting everything that is contained in the two bills, you still have to prove the necessity for a change of the Assessment Act as it now stands. If municipalities get proper assessors no amendment to the act whatever is necessary. I would suggest that elaborate explanations of the act should be sent to every assessor in the province, and after a time if the act does not work out satisfactorily, it would be up to the Government of Ontario to [illegible] it. There is one statute on the statute books with which no fault can be found, and that is the Assessment Act."

The Premier wanted to know where the single tax policy had worked out satisfactorily. "What is there in this new system that we should have it?" he asked. "Why not wait to see how it works in other places? Is it not better to use our own wit than to follow every doctrine proposed by any Tom, Dick or Harry on the continent?" He said that the single tax system was not poison, but the class of papers that took it up did not express the sentiment of the people. Because new communities had accepted it there was no reason why Ontario should gallop over the proposition and accept it bolus-bolus. Sir James was very much amused at the predictions of certain newspapers, while he was away, that tax reform had scored a great victory already, the whole matter of the new "progressive" legislation being settled.

If the Assessment Act was not working out satisfactorily to all classes it was not the fault of the act, but it was due to inefficient officials. All that was necessary was the appointment of capable assessors by councils.

Additional information was heard by the committee during the morning session. Ernest Drury of the Dominion Grange said that the present system was a hardship to progressive farmers. He believed that the general public was opposed to the taxation of improvements. Fifty-five out of 165 township clerks in Ontario, in reply to a circular sent out by the Grange, said that land values were assessed higher than improvements. This fact showed a general evasion of the act and a large amount of local option existed. Mr. Drury urged the local option policy, it being his belief that the matter should be largely left to the discretion of local judges. The farming community would welcome local option in matters relating to taxation. There was no reason why a farmer should be penalized for improving his own property.

James McEwing said that the Dominion Grange did not want single tax. Local option was what was desired, so that any township might be free to tax or not to tax improvements.

THE MAGIC CARPET

A Thanksgiving Story.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

The committee on repairs walked down the aisle and wagged disapproval at each pew.

"It never struck me before how untasteful it was to have every pew carpeted different," wheezed Miss Lee importantly. "They look just like folks' houses. Jeremiah Little's is got a piece of his parlor carpet spread on it, and all it needs is a basket of wax flowers to make you think you're sitting in his front room at a funeral."

The other members of the committee cast surreptitious glances at their several pews, each with its gayly covered floor and fat, carpeted hassocks. Then they looked at Sarah Lee's own pew, with its neat red floor covering that exactly matched the carpet in the aisle.

"We ain't all agents for a carpet store," remarked Hannah Smith dryly.

Miss Lee reddened. "That's neither here nor there," she said hurriedly. "The facts are these: Daniel Merton has sent us $1,000 for the church repairs. Dr. Long says $500 will be needed for repairs to the building and belfry. The other $500 is to be used by the ladies of the committee to redecorate the inside and for a new carpet to cover all the pews."

She looked narrowly at Serena Webb in the background.

"My pew will remain as it is," said Serena calmly.

The committee drew a unanimous breath of dismay.

"That's the old Merton pew," protested Miss Lee.

"I know it," replied Serena.

"I should think that when a man cares enough for the old church he was baptized in to send $1,000 for repairs it would be a delicate attention on the part of the committee to refurnish his old family pew," said Dr. Long's wife bitterly.

"Perhaps Mr. Merton would prefer to see the old church restored rather than redecorated. He must have tender recollections of the old pew with his mother's carpet on the floor and the same old hassocks he knelt on when a boy. I am sure he would rather see the chancel restored to its oldtime beauty rather than done over in the latest fashion," said Serena Webb eagerly.

"Rubbish!" sneered Sarah Lee. "A man as smart as Dan Merton—a man who left Redbush a poor young man and is today a millionaire—must be up to date. He ain't no back number," she ended, with a triumphant relapse into slang. "He'd admire to see his money's been put to some good purpose."

The other ladies nodded approval of this statement, all save Serena Webb, who was gazing wistfully at the dim and faded frescoes in the chancel.

"So, you see, Miss Webb, Dan Merton would be pleased enough to have his old family pew done over new. We're planning to have it all done by Thanksgiving and then invite him down and have a regular thanksgiving over the hull thing," said Miss Lee persuasively.

"My pew will remain as it is," said Serena firmly as she turned toward the door. "I have paid for it."

"Very well," returned the other bitingly. "I shall take care to let Dan Merton know that a stranger has come to Redbush who ain't grateful enough for his generosity to try to please him. I shall let him know."

Serena Webb merely bowed politely and passed through the door.

Once within the gate of her quiet, old fashioned garden her straight, slim figure relaxed into a rustic seat. She clasped her white hands behind her sunny brown head and surveyed the low, ivy covered house with contemplative eyes.

"The Merton homestead and the Merton pew are the possessions of an eccentric spinster," she mused whimsically. "First, Daniel Merton, president of the cordage trust, writes and commands that I sell him his old home for an absurdly high price, which I refused because the house just suits me, and I am tired of wandering. Again, he sends a gift to his church, and they demand that I tear out the charming, old fashioned furniture of the Merton pew—and transform it for him! I am selfish enough to like it as it is—and to believe he will like it best too! But I am afraid of that Daniel Merton, a man who has risen to such eminence, as he must possess a strength of purpose that will at last prevail upon me to part with this charming place!"

With a little sighing laugh she went into the house—the quiet house which she occupied with her servants and her [illegible] were awaiting her in another distant country. Serena was young yet. She was thirty-five, and she was lonely.

* * * * * * *

For weeks after that September day the Redbush church was closed for repairs. Heavy canvas covered the old Merton pew and protected it from showers of lime and plaster and later from the dripping brushes of painters and decorators.

Little by little the old church took on a new appearance. Shaky timbers were strengthened, the great belfry was repaired and the bell rehung. Gray paint restored the building to Quakerlike respectability. The furnace was mended, and the organ was repaired.

Indoors the warm glow of the old red carpet was replaced by sober brown pile, and the newly varnished pews were carpeted with the same material. Wooden foot rests took the place of the discarded hassocks, and polished seats were supplied instead of the comfortable cushions.

The faint pinks and reds of the old decoration gave way to sea green walls and chancel. It was all very new and very hideous and extremely uncomfortable.

The minister was joyful and the congregation was gratified at the splendor of the shabby old church. The committee on repairs proudly sent in their report on the Sunday before Thanksgiving day. At the same time the minister read a letter from Daniel Merton saying that he would gladly accept their invitation to attend the special services on Thanksgiving day.

Cold and crisp the day dawned, and the usual festivities of the day were pushed forward that none might miss the services at the church.

There was a rustle of expectation as the people gathered in the redecorated edifice. Up in the front pew, on the right of the aisle, in the old Merton pew, with its still gorgeous turkey carpet and hassocks, sat Serena Webb, conscious that her seat was a blot on the fair scene.

In the front left hand pew sat Dr. Long and his wife, nervously awaiting the arrival of Daniel Merton, for it was understood that the great man was to be ushered into the good doctor's sober brown pew.

The last bell was ringing, the choir was rustling the pages of their books and the organ was growling a low voluntary when there was the insistent blast of a horn and then the soft chug-chug of a motorcar. It stopped at the church, the door opened, and then Redbush drew a long breath as Daniel Merton walked up the aisle and was ushered into Dr. Long's seat.

For several moments he knelt in prayer, and then he arose and looked about him as the service began.

He saw a strange church and strange people. He had borne in his mind's eye for years past a quaint old church with warm red carpet and many pews, each furnished according to its owner's fancy. There was nothing here to remind him of the past and his boyhood save the seat across the aisle.

There in the old Merton pew, with its ancient turkey carpeted floor and fat hassocks, sat a slender woman with sweet, serious face bent above her book. That was what Daniel Merton saw in the old pew where he had knelt when a boy.

The people of Redbush saw a tall, thin man with a handsome face lined with care, a man plainly dressed as one of themselves, and those who had known him when a boy traced in his countenance a vague likeness to the ambitious lad of twenty-five years before.

Then they saw him look about the church with impassive face, which did not change until it reached the old Merton pew. They saw his keen eyes rest on Serena Webb's face and on the old time furnishings before they turned to cast a sweeping glance up and down the aisle at the brown carpet.

Then they saw him leave his seat and deliberately cross the aisle and sit down beside Serena Webb. Serena blushed and shared her hymn book with him.

The service was long, for the good people of Redbush were very grateful to their beneficent townsman, and the minister must express their gratitude in sonorous sentences that a millionaire might appreciate.

A year afterward Sarah Lee surveyed the church in high disdain. Workmen had completed its restoration to its original decorative scheme, and the florist's men were banking palms about the chancel.

"To think Serena Webb should marry Dan Merton after all—never saw him in her life till that Thanksgiving day," murmured Mrs. Long in Sarah's ear.

"That there old turkey carpet did it," sniffed Sarah Lee. "Just to think of him insisting that everybody must carpet their own pew to suit themselves! Even old Hulda Jones has made her a braided mat for hers. Redbush is behind the times."

In the meantime Daniel Merton was whispering to Serena in the garden of his old home. "It was the combination of you and the old pew set in the midst of that hideously decorated church—it was you, sweetheart, that broke through this crust of money getting and made me again in heart like the boy I used to be."

"I am so glad," murmured Serena happily. "Let us always keep the old turkey carpet, Dan. It carried you back to your boyhood, it brought you across the aisle to me, and it has carried us both to happiness. It is a magic carpet, indeed."

Force of a Stream of Water.

The effect of the hydraulic motor, which is used for the purpose of removing masses of earth, well nigh passes belief. A stream of water issuing from a pipe six inches in diameter, with a fall behind it of 375 feet, will carry away a solid rock weighing a ton or more to a distance of fifty or a hundred feet. The velocity of the stream is terrific, an the column of water projected is so solid that if a crowbar or other heavy object be thrust against it the impinging object will be buried a considerable distancee. By this stream of water a man would be instantly killed if he came in contact with it even at a distance of a couple of hundred feet. At 200 feet from the nozzle a six inch stream, with a 375 foot fall, projected momentarily against the trunk of a tree will in a second denude it of the heaviest bark as clearly as if it had been cut with an ax. Whenever such a stream is turned against a bank it cuts and burrows it in every direction, hollowing out great caves and causing tons of earth to melt and fall and be washed away in the sluices.

The average woman knows more about some other woman than she knows about herself.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

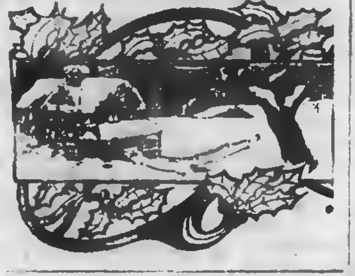
Where the Old Country Gets Its Great Supply of Christmas Trees Every Year.

To tell the truth, we do not trouble very much about the matter. Father bought it somewhere, and while we were asleep—or pretending to be—loving hands covered it with candles, and bags of sweets and toys and dolls and little flags, and made it shine and sparkle like the King's crown. But when we stand before it and clap our hands and cry "O-o-o-oh!" we do not, as a rule, stop to bother as to how it is there comes to be such a thing as a Christmas tree at all.

As a matter of fact, a good many older people have tried to find out where the Christmas tree came from, but nobody seems to be quite certain yet as to how many years ago the good old custom was started.

Some learned men have told us that it came from ancient Egypt. They say that at certain winter festivities the Egyptians used a slip of a palm tree with twelve shoots on it, this, of course, representing the year with its twelve months. I do not think, however, that our Christmas tree has anything to do with that twelve-shooted slip of palm. It is more probable that it is to be traced back through the old customs of the country which gave it to us—Germany.

Far away back in the ages—"once upon a time," as the fairy tales say—the people called Teutons believed all kinds of things about a mystic ash tree with the curious name Yggdrasil. This, with its roots and branches, they thought, united the world of the living and the world of the dead. The branches of this tree, they supposed, bore gifts for men to take. There you have the idea which most probably led to the custom of having once a year a tree laden with presents.



When the custom really started just as we see it in our homes to-day is doubtful, but the people in the ancient city of Strasburg are proud of the fact that more than three hundred years ago they introduced it. The Christmas tree does not seem to have been mentioned in any book until the year 1605, when an unknown writer called attention to the new custom at Strasburg. In those days, however, the Church did not approve of the Christmas tree—I expect because it was of heathen origin—and we are told that a preacher named Professor Iannhauer, of Strasburg Cathedral, spoke very strongly against it.

Well, the Christmas tree became very popular indeed in Germany, but you may be surprised to know that it is only about seventy years since it was taken to England. When Victoria the Good married Prince Albert in 1840, many new German customs were introduced into the old country, and the Christmas tree was one of them. At Windsor Castle in 1846 there was a huge tree forty feet high, which was laden with presents said to be worth no less than $45,000! That was something like a tree wasn't it?—but I do not suppose it gave a bit more pleasure than the little tree you see in a poor man's cottage window.

Since then the Christmas tree has been a prominent feature of the Christmas festivities of the Royal Family. Queen Victoria encouraged the custom.

In Germany at Christmas time every house has its tree, and the trade in fir trees in every German town is enormous. In London something like 70,000 trees of various sizes are sold at Covent Garden.

CHRISTMAS RECIPES

Celery Soup

Ingredients—One quart of broth, 1 pint milk, 2 heads of celery, 1 large Spanish onion, 2 ozs. butter, pepper and salt, 1 tablespoonful of cream cornflour.

Method—The broth must be white, made from veal bones or from boiling a fowl. Take the white part of the celery, see that it is quite free from grit, cut it into small pieces, and slice the onion.

Put the butter into a stewpan, add the celery and sliced onion, let them cook for a few minutes, but be careful that they do not brown at all. Now add the broth, and a good seasoning of pepper and salt, and simmer all together until the vegetables are quite soft. Rub through a sieve and return it to the stewpan with the milk, to which has been added a dessertspoonful of cornflour, stir until it has boiled for a few minutes, and just before serving add the cream. Serve very hot, but do not let it boil after the cream has been added, or the appearance of the soup will be spoiled.

Minced Turkey

The trimmings of a large carcase will make a delicious mince. To each pound of minced turkey allow 1 oz. of finely chopped ham and the same quantity of onion. Fry in a little clarified dripping with ½ oz. of flour sprinkled over. To this add ½ pint of stock made from the bones; season with salt and pepper and, if liked, a dash of lemon juice. The mince may be served simply garnished with croutons (little pieces of fried bread), with or without poached eggs. It may also be used as a filling for patty cases or allowed to get cold; it can be shaped into cutlets, rolled in egg and breadcrumbs, and fried, or is a delicious stuffing for grilled rolls of bacon.

Sausage and Chestnut Dressing

Boil forty chestnuts, and when cooked remove the outer and inner skins. Put them in a mortar and pound. Add 1 lb. of sausage (free from skin), and, if liked, the turkey liver chopped. Mix all together thoroughly and season with pepper and salt.

Galt Leans To Single Tax.

Galt, Dec. 20.—Galt assessors made a large increase in land values in their ratings, which exceeded last year's assessment by over a million and a half. How Doggie Puck Played Santa Claus

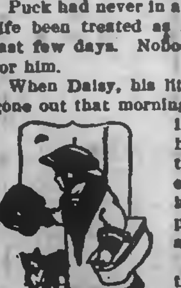
IT WAS the day before Christmas, and the sweetest smells were issuing from the kitchen, and packages were being left at the door every few minutes with loud ringings of the doorbell.

Puck had never in all his little doggie life been treated as he had been the last few days. Nobody had any time for him.

When Daisy, his little mistress, had gone out that morning, instead of taking her dog she had said: "I can't take you today, old fellow. I'll have too many packages to manage you."



"I CAN'T TAKE YOU TODAY, OLD FELLOW."

Puck went to the kitchen, led there, no doubt, by the delightful odors.

"Get out of here!" said Bridget, and she flourished a broom at him. The insult! It nearly broke Puck's heart.

Puck walked out of the kitchen up into the play room on the top floor.

He crawled under the curtain which adorned the bed of Frances, the last doll to arrive from Paris.

Puck grew drowsy, and the last thing his eyes rested upon before sinking into sleep was a large book cut in the shape of Santa Claus and colored to look like him as well. The book contained the story beginning "'Twas the night before Christmas," and Puck had heard Daisy read that story only the night before. What was his surprise to see that book straighten itself until it looked like a soldier on parade, but of course it was not a soldier, only Santa Claus, the very being from whom he was trying to escape. Santa Claus began talking to him.

"Puck, I do not like to see you show such an ugly spirit this day before Christmas. Christmas is my day, you know, and I like every living thing to be happy when it comes around.

"If you want to get fun out of Christmas quit expecting a merry Christmas for yourself. Try to give it to some one else," went on Santa Claus.

"Mr. Santa Claus," said Puck, looking offended, "nobody will allow me to help in any way. All I can do is to keep out of the way until your day is over."

"Nonsense," replied Santa. "You are all wrong. The festival is in my honor, true enough, but that does not shut out other people from helping."

Puck was wide awake and polite enough to crawl out from beneath the bed and listen to his visitor.

"You know Daisy is to have a party tonight," said Santa. "There is to be a splendid tree with presents on it, and I have made that tree the handsomest I ever trimmed. I had planned to make my appearance myself to wish the boys and girls a merry Christmas, but I simply cannot take the time. If you would like you can take my place. I'll dress you for the party. If you will allow me I shall look around and see what I can find in Miss Daisy's play room. Good, the very thing. We'll make a hit!" And Puck looked toward the wastebasket, where he saw a false face of Santa Claus with its long white beard and the remains of a glue pot warranted to mend or stick anything.

Santa Claus bent to the ears of Puck and whispered his plan as a secret. The secret seemed to meet with Puck's approval, for he wagged his tail and wriggled his body just as he did when Daisy fed him a bit of his favorite candy.

It grew dark very early, for a snowstorm was on the way. Sounds of arriving visitors came to Puck's ears as the bell pealed again and again. His absence was not noticed as beautifully dressed girls came into the next room to remove their wraps, while shouts of laughter and merry Christmases floated to Puck in his retreat beneath the doll's bed.

HE RAN DOWNSTAIRS.

The voice of Daisy's father at last sounded, and as this was the cue Santa had given him to appear Puck crawled out, approached the wastebasket, knocked it over, rubbed his face in the slowly trickling glue and then stuck it into the Santa Claus false face lying conveniently near.

In a minute the queer Puck-Santa Claus ran down the stairs and into the room, arousing shrieks of laughter as one boy screamed, "Why, it's Santa Claus!"

"No, it is not!" shouted another. "Did you ever see a Santa Claus with four legs? It's a dog, that is what it is."

"It's my Puck," said Daisy, taking the queer specimen in her arms, "but how in the world did he ever get himself up in this clever fashion?"

Puck was not telling, but the fun this odd looking Santa started made the party a success.

CHRISTMAS DAY IN BETHLEHEM.

AT this season of the year probably no city of the ancient world presents a more picturesque or attractive aspect than Bethlehem, whose population is many times multiplied by the presence of a vast army of pilgrims from every part of the globe. Mecca, in the height of the great annual Moslem influx, or Hurdwar, in upper India, at the season of the sacred festival, may have much greater but they cannot be said to have more devout or more cosmopolitan crowds than those that flock to the city of David in the Christmas week. Shaped wonderfully like a crescent, yet the only thoroughly Christian town in all Syria, Bethlehem puts on its gayest garb as Christmas approaches. At all times a pretty and attractive place, it is then a thousand fold more so. The thrifty townspeople, their handsome wives and dark eyed daughters, prepare for the festivities weeks in advance and are ready to welcome the first arrivals.

No words can adequately describe the grandeur of the Christmas services at the Church of the Nativity, which is the center of interest for the pilgrims. These services are kept up the entire week. On the way to church the visitors are beset by peddlers, who insist on pushing under their very noses little ornaments of olivewood and mother-of-pearl. The Church of the Nativity is one of the oldest structures in existence, and, although it has been repeatedly repaired, it still retains much of its original form and character. In the side aisles at different altars priests chant the service in tones that swell and die amid the tall columns that support the roof.

At the shrines groups of pilgrims kneel in reverent adoration, while still other groups are guided around the church by monks, who point out the rich relics and sacred places, the most venerated of all being the shrine of the manger, beneath the church, which, it is claimed, incloses the actual birthplace of the Saviour. During the Christmas festivities this manger shrine is resorted to by great multitudes, who crowd each other in their pious eagerness to kiss the marble slab on the floor with a silver star in the center.

So fervid and enthusiastic are these worshipers that the marble slab has been repeatedly kissed away in places, rendering a new slab necessary. The same experience has occurred with the stone covering of the crypt in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem, which has had to be renewed several times in consequence of its outer surface being literally kissed away by pious devotees. The tradition is that Christ was once laid in this manger. A few feet distant is the chapel of the Magi, where the wise men of old, Melchior, Caspar and Balthazar, came worshiping with rare gifts.

MARKET PLACE IN BETHLEHEM ON CHRISTMAS MORNING.

A subdued, rich light is diffused throughout the grotto by the softly glowing lamps over the star, and the swinging censers lend an agreeable odor to an otherwise close and musty atmosphere. All worldly thoughts are banished as the kneeling pilgrims listen spellbound to the melodious chant of the sacred office or the full, sturdy, noble singing of the grand looking, bearded priests. The low roof, the "living rock," the censers, the music, the lights, all seem to dissolve, and in their stead there appear to the moist eyes of the adoring pilgrims the manger cradle with the babe, the Virgin mother and Joseph, the mean surroundings, the oxen and their litter of straw and the gentle, wondering sheep.

The Christmas festivities, however, are not confined to the Church of the Nativity. The week is a general festival in the town and a season of financial harvest for its citizens. Like all orientals, they are thrifty to avariciousness, and the sight of the splendid gifts that are brought year after year to the church and especially the Grotto chapel, by strangers from afar widely excite their cupidity. Among those thousands that are living temporarily in tents, or, it may be, quartered in the more comfortable convent, there are many rich who can be easily persuaded into generosity when under the supernatural influence that seems to pervade everything at Bethlehem.—Philadelphia Record.

THE BANK OF OTTAWA

THIRTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING

The thirty-eighth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Ottawa was held on Wednesday, the 18th day of December 1912, the President, Mr. David Maclaren in the chair.

Report of the Directors

The Directors have pleasure in submitting the Thirty-eighth Annual Report and balance sheet to 30th November last.

Balance at credit of Profit and Loss Account on 30th November, 1911, was	$118,167.44
Net profits for the year ended 30th November, 1912, after deducting expenses of management, and making necessary provision for interest due to depositors, unearned interest on current loans and for all bad and doubtful debts and contingencies	640,220.43	$758,387.87
Appropriated as follows:
Dividend No. 82, Two and three-quarters per cent., paid 1st March, 1912	$ 96,250.00
Dividend No. 83, Three per cent., paid 1st June, 1912	105,000.00
Dividend No. 84, Three per cent., paid 3rd Sept., 1912	105,000.00

		$488,828.23
Balance carried forward at credit of Profit and Loss Account		$269,559.64
The Rest Account on 30th November, 1911, was		$4,000,000.00
To which has been added premium on new stock issued.		325,480.00
		$4,325,480.00

The Directors have to record with great regret, the death during the year of Mr. H. F. McLachlin, who became a member of the Board in 1910. Mr. Russell Blackburn of Ottawa, was elected to fill the vacancy on the Board.

Since the last Annual Meeting, branches of the Bank have been established at:

Danforth Ave., Toronto;	Robson St., Vancouver;
Englehart, Ont.;	Scarth St., Regina;
Hintonburg, Ottawa;	St. Isidore, Ont.;
Riceville, Ont.;	Westboro, Ont.

The branches at Ossington Ave., Toronto, and at Timmins, Ont., have been closed.

Commencing with the quarterly dividend payable at the beginning of June last, your Directors deemed it advisable to increase the rate of distribution to twelve per cent per annum, and they trust that the Bank's business may continue to justify the payment of a dividend at this rate.

Under the authority given by by-law on 11th December, 1907, the Directors decided to issue on 3rd September last five thousand shares of new stock at a premium of One hundred per cent. Of this issue 3,578 shares have been subscribed for.

Permanent premises have been secured during the year for the occupation of the branches at Sudbury, Tisdale, Danforth Ave. and Ashdale Ave., Toronto, and the increased business at Winnipeg has rendered necessary the purchase of a piece of land at the rear of the premises owned by the Bank in that City, and occupied by the branch there since 1893, on which is being erected an extensive addition to the office.

The completion of buildings in progress at the time of the last Annual Meeting accounts largely for the balance of the increase in Bank Premises.

The Head Office and branches have been inspected as usual, and the independent audit alluded to last year has been continued, as will be seen from the certificate furnished by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company at the end of the Balance Sheet.

The officers of the Bank continue to perform their duties to the satisfaction of the Directors.

DAVID MACLAREN, PRESIDENT.

Kept three trumps in her lap.

FRANK OLIVER'S EXCUSE

Hon. Frank Oliver says that the reason he did not get up to sing the National Anthem, when Mr. Borden had concluded his naval speech, was that it was a piece of political stage effect, and he had no mind to join in the prostitution of National Anthem.

But the same Frank Oliver stood up when the National Anthem was started after Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech, It was all right then. The trouble with Frank Oliver is, and it is the same with nearly every other Grit member of the House of Commons, who comes from the West, that his political partisanship blinds him to the ordinary decencies of the occasion. If Frank Oliver declined to put such an indignity upon the National Anthem as he pretends, why did he not stand up when the Liberals took the same action? This is a bit of ridiculous hypocrisy that will not go well with the country. When Liberals and Conservatives join in expressing their loyalty by singing the National Anthem, it is a poor piece of business for one of them to say that he did not want to join in the prostitution.

MONEY TRUSTS

The money trust investigation in the United States is unearthing much valuable material. It is now shown that eighteen leading financial firms control $25,325,000,000 of the United States wealth. Five firms, the J. P. Morgan Company, the Guarantee and Bankers Trust companies, the First and National City banks, have 341 directors in 112 corporations with resources totalling $22,000,000,000. That the United States money trust is no figment of the imagination is shown by these facts.

Now these facts being admitted, what is the remedy? Asking what the remedy is, in a popular habit for a good many public ills. This is one of the gravest of them. How can the system of interlocking directorships be knocked on the head effectively? That is the principal knot to be untied at the present. It might be possible to have a rigid statute preventing any one man from occupying a directorship on more than a limited number of companies, but that of course would merely increase the number of men connected with these concerns who would serve as directors, or rather as agents of the big houses. It might mean an additional expense of a million or half a million dollars all told, a mere bagatelle. It is hard to prove the illegality of their fractures of the law, in prosecutions against the money kings, because they are forfeited with the advice of legal talent, much more eminent than the public can afford to employ in every important action they take. Yet something must be done. The financial autocracy is to real that the financial democracy of the United States is something to be taken as a joke. To kill the money powers will be to destroy the root and branches of the present corporation industrial system, and before that can be done, there will probably have to come a terrible industrial revolution that will establish Socialism. Socialism is the only alternative to the condition of affairs revealed by the Pujo committee.

As conditions commercially are in the United States, so are they likely to become in Canada. In fact, the smaller inhabitable space in this country makes it apparent that the concentration of money power, when the wealth of the country is so vast, will be accomplished more easily than across the border. Canada is already approaching the stage when the financial cliques of Toronto and Montreal dominate Canadian business, through their banking connections, the trust and loan companies. The big financial business of Canada is already in their hands. Canadian politicians do not adopt muck-raking methods because there has yet been no particular abuse of the power, and because they are too much dependent upon these same financial powers. Yet if the present state of things progresses to its logical conclusion, we will have a money trust investigation on our own hands.

BONNAR LAW'S MISTAKE

It is now charged that the Canadian Tories are part and parcel of the British Tories, and that both are conspiring to stunt the growth of democratic rule, in favor of an oligarchy, or the domination of an aristocratic or governing class. If Canadian and British politics had not such a close relation to each other, there would be no groundwork upon which any such theory could be held. But nonsensical as the idea is in its relation to Canadian Conservatism, nevertheless there is a growing tendency as the Empire grows closer together, to have the political tenets and ideals of the Conservatives and Liberals more closely associated. Canadian Conservatism is no more or less democratic than Canadian Liberalism, since the leaders in both parties are Canadians, steeped in Canadian ideas of equality and the doctrine of the greatest good for the great number. But imperial politics are distinctly in the public eye now, and will be for many years, for Mr. Borden's naval policy marks the advent of Canada from its swaddling clothes as a British dominion, protected by the British navy, into a participator in the imperial problem of defence, and with a voice in imperial matters of other import.

The declaration of Mr. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader in the House of Commons, that before there is any attempt by the Unionists to put into effect food duties to give the overseas Dominions a preference, there must be an imperial conference upon the question of imperial preference, is distinctly disappointing. As the London Times says, Mr. Bonar Law does not know where he is leading the party. It says that no statesman in the United Kingdom must even dream of making such a proposal. If this rebuke from the leading organ of British Unionism to the leader of the party could have been more forcibly uttered, what is the language that could have been used? The London Times is quite right. In the first place, Canada is rich, free and prosperous. It can find a market for its wheat in many parts of the world. It is able to compete with the other countries. If the people of the United Kingdom choose to put duties on wheat from foreign countries, to give the Dominions a preference, that is their affair. The Dominions would be glad to see that done. But to make it a basis for bargaining with the Dominions as to what fiscal concessions they will grant the Mother Country, in effect to ask the Dominions to come forward with the request that the Mother Country put on the duty, is absurd for the Dominions will not do it. The imposition of a wheat duty must be a domestic matter with the people of Britain. Therefore Mr. Bonar Law has made a disastrous mistake, and the Conservative newspapers which intimate that it marks the end of his leadership are not far astray. He has not made good from the very first.

Canadian Conservatism has not been identified with the food duties proposal of the Unionists. That was Chamberlain's old idea, along with the idea that there should be free trade within the Empire, or an Imperial Zollverein. None of these proposals is possible, since the Dominions are wedded both to the protective system, and to the policy of building up their own manufacturing. Britain can have a preference in the Canadian market, but Canadians cannot in justice to themselves carry their attachment to the Crown to such an extent that they deprive themselves of the opportunity to build up a well rounded nation. That is not the interests of Britain or the Empire as a whole.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A score of pure white doves, emblems of peace, cooed so loudly at a dinner given by New York ladies to Baroness Von Suttner, representative of the Peace League of Austria, that the speakers could not be heard. Doves do not roar like guns, but it seems their noise may be just as embarrassing under certain circumstances.

A woman has been appointed to the position of county treasurer of the County of Wellington, and some people are expressing great wonder about it. The real wonder is that more such appointments are not made. Women are regarded as quite capable of doing the actual work of many of the municipal offices, and even of the government offices.

The London Times of Dec. 6, to hand, contains a full report of Mr. Borden's speech on the naval question. The occasion was probably the first on which a Canadian Prime Minister's address, made in Canada, was fully reported in a London newspaper.

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF HOTELS

Total Number of Bedrooms in Twelve Hotels is 375

Fire Chief Howard has sent the following report to the License Commissioners:

I beg leave to advise your honorable body of my annual inspection of licensed hotels made on the 26th day of November in accordance with city by-law No. 1[illegible]20. On the occasion of my visit and inspection I was accompanied by Mr. Jos. Stewart, license inspector for this district. We went through all the buildings and premises in connection with the twelve hotels. Commencing at the basement, inspecting the heating apparatus, and on through each floor into every room. And also testing the efficiency and strength of the permanent fire escapes. We only found one defective fire escape in the city, and that was at the Windsor Hotel. One of the castings or braces on this structure we found to be broken. We drew the attention of the proprietor of the hotel to this defect, and Mr. Stewart ordered the gentleman to make the necessary repairs immediately. The order for this work was placed with the firm of Adamson & Dobbin, this city, but owing to pressure of business, this work will have to take its turn with other orders.

While this is a very trifling matter I wish to say that I will see to it that the necessary repairs are made as soon as possible.

We found that the bed rooms of all the hotels, both those provided for guests and servants were provided with the regulation rope fire escapes. In the Oriental Hotel the ropes had been removed from rooms No. 55 and 60, ropes also were removed in the National Hotel from rooms Nos. 19, 35 and 55, but in each case the ropes were replaced before we left the building.

The number of bed rooms in all the hotels including those occupied by proprietors' families and the hired help, numbered 375.

I have much pleasure in reporting to your Board that on the occasion of my visit nothing of an offensive nature was found to exist. The premises were clean and no combustable rubbish was found in any of the hotels.

I may further add that no person was advised ahead of time of our visit. The hotel keepers seemed to take kindly to this inspection and assisted us in every way possible.

ANNUAL FESTIVITIES FOR THE FIRE FIGHTERS

Dinner and Christmas Tree at the Hall Proved a Big Success

The Annual Firemen's Dinner and Christmas Tree was held in the fire hall last night and was, as it always is, an enjoyable affair. There were present, Mayor and Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Dr. and Mrs. Rogers, Rev. and Mrs. Liddiford, Ald. and Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. George Grange, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kingan, Police Chief and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. Jos. Batton, Ald. and Mrs. Duffus, Col. Miller, Miss Thompson, Mr. Skitch and Mr. W. Dundas; besides the firemen's wives and children and three lately resigned firemen.

Chief Howard in a few remarks of welcome, opened the evening and everybody fell to the flowing board which was prepared entirely by the firemen and certainly did them credit.

Ald. Gillespie when called upon for a speech, complimented the firemen on their untiring efforts. It was a pleasure, he said, to go through the hall and find it so clean and orderly. The firemen have a very responsible position and if he was head of the F. W. and L. Committee next year he would endeavor to see that they would receive higher pay.

Mayor Bradburn endorsed Ald. Gillespie's remarks and said it was very likely that there would be an increase in the strength of the force as well as the pay and he would make efforts on that question if he was elected again next year.

An excellent program was given in the following order:

Instrumental—Miss Sophie Elliot.
Recitation—Col Miller.
Sleigh Bells and Slight of Hand—Mr. Dundas.
Song—Mr. Skitch.
Duet—Misses Ward and Long.
Reading—Mr. Soden.
Intrumental—Miss T. Elliot.
Reading—Mrs. Thomas.
Song—Mr. Skitch.
Recitation—Col. Miller.

Chief Howard, assisted by Ald. Duffus, gave out the presents on the Christmas tree. Some comical presents were given besides useful ones, among which was a bear for Mayor Bradburn; a tin De Laval Separator for Ald. Gillespie. Fireman Jamieson received many ludicrous presents, one of which caused much laughter and he refused to exhibit. The successful evening closed with "God Save the King," three rousing cheers for the Chief and the Brigade.

MADE LARGE PROGRESS

Like most of the bank reports published this year, the Bank of Ottawa shows an increase in net profits over the figures for 1911. For the year ended November 30th, 1912, the Bank of Ottawa shows net profits of 640,229 as compared with $596,228 of the previous year. With a balance brought forward of $118,000 from 1911, the bank has $7[illegible]8,000 available for distribution, which has been apportioned as follows, dividend requirements, pension fund and Bank premises account absorbed $488,000, leaving a balance carried forward of $269,000. During the year the bank increased its paid up capital, which now amounts to $4,825,000, and its reserve fund, which now stands at $4,325,000, a sum considerably in excess of the paid up capital.

The bank has made progress in every department of its activities. The note circulation gained by $216,000, the deposits by $3,293,000, the current loans also netted a large increase, amounting to $34,851,000, as compared with $31,582,000 the previous year, the total assets now stand at $[illegible]0,909,000, as compared with $46,158,000 at the end of 1911.

PRESENTATION TO PROF. TRUMPOUR

Work of Former Pastor of All Saints' is Appreciated

The Point Grey (B.C.) Gazette has the following in connection with the work of Rev. Prof. Trumpour, formerly rector of All Saints church—

The closing services of the Church of England Mission at West Point Grey were held last Sunday morning, November 24. The Mission was begun two months ago and has been extremely successful, and after closing for the winter months, will be resumed in the early spring.

At the close of the service, the congregation presented the Rev. Prof. Trumpour of Latimer Hall with a number of gifts including a handsome large print prayer and hymn book, fountain pen, a substantial cheque and an address expressing the wish that arrangements could be made whereby he continue the work in the spring, as he was the one who organized the congregation in the first place.

Altogether there is the prospect of an exceedingly strong church at West Point Grey.

You can laugh at some people as much as you please without danger of hurting their feelings, because they simply cannot imagine anyone regarding them with levity.

PRESENTATION TO DR. McNULTY

Umbrella and Cane From Knights of Columbus

The members of the local Knights of Columbus Council held a most enjoyable smoker and euchre party in their Club rooms on Simcoe St. last night, in honor of Past Grand Knight, Doctor F. [illegible] McNulty, through whose untiring efforts the present Club House was secured and the repairing and redecorating of the building was carried out.

The first part of the evening was spent at cards, resulting in a tie score between Messrs. Hickey, Sheehy and Sullivan. In this three-cornered contest Mr. Sheehy proved himself an easy winner.

Mr. C. H. Pennefather and F. A. Shannon had been asked by the other members to select some token for Dr. McNulty and with their usual good taste, they purchased a very handsome umbrella and cane, that Mr. Pennefather in a few well chosen words, presented to the doctor, who, although taken completely by surprise, accepted the token in the spirit it was made, in a most flowery little speech.

After the presentation a few vocal selections were rendered by Messrs. Primeau and Hanrahan.

ESCAPED INJURY

Mr. W. A. Mowry, 457 Cedar street received a telegram this morning from his brother, Mr. C. C. Mowry, who was a brakeman on the train that was wrecked at Ivanhoe, stating that he was not hurt in the accident. It was Mr. Mowry's first wreck on that run.

Special Correspondence.

Fowlers Corners, Dec. 18.—It is reported around our corner that the petition got up to unite the Presbyterian church here with Springville, has been set aside by the Presbytery of Peterborough. Lakevale church will continue, as far as we know at present, in connection with Omemee, and Mount Pleasant in connection with Springville.

Rev. D. H. Currie conducted Divine service here last Sunday and gave a practical discourse on the subject of "Forgiveness." He announced that next Sunday, Dec. 22nd, service would be held in the church here at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., conducted by Rev. F. A. Robinson, B. A., of Toronto, secretary of the Social Service and Evangelism of the Presbyterian Church.

NORWOOD

Special Correspondence.

Municipal politics in the village are taking on some color these last few days. By all appearances there will be quite a number of aspirants for municipal honors. Mr. Thos. Morrison is out making a vigorous canvass. He claims the east end of the village should have a representative on the Council Board. The name of W. E. Pakenham is mentioned, and should he decided to be in the field he will poll a good vote, as he is a young man and making his debut before the public. Other names mentioned are A. B. Greenbank, J. R. McKelvie, Wm. Portway, John Christie, as well as the members of the present Council. Mr. C. J. Searight, a member of the Council for the present year and 1911 has decided to step out, as he has not time to devote to the work. Mr. Searight has proved himself an efficient Councillor.

Judging from the names mentioned, the village is assured, at any rate of a good Council for the year 1913.

Mr. Wilfrid Fry visited friends in Havelock on Sunday last.

Mr. Harold Stevens, of Campbellford, was in town over Sunday.

Mr. Percy Oakley was visiting his friends in town the latter part of the week.

The cold weather has come, and along with it good skating. The young people have been enjoying the skating on the ponds for over two weeks, but expect to have better skating on the rink in sight of a week.

Miss Pauline Weir has returned from attending the Normal School at Madoc.

The High and Public Schools will close on Friday, the 20th inst.

Mr. J. L. Johnston and party, after a long and tiresome hunt, succeeded in capturing a fine red fox.

Though flame color and "post-box" red are two of the fashionable shades of the winter, they must be used with discretion, as they are very brilliant, and if the wearer is tired or haggard, will not be beautifying.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

THE CHURCH MOUSE

THEY stood in the deserted vestry of the church, facing each other angrily for the first time in their lives. Then suddenly Janet swept the diamond from the third finger of her left hand and held it forth. "You will oblige me by taking this back" she said bitingly.

He stood looking into her eyes, growing grayer of face as he saw the stubborn anger that reposed within them. "Which means that our engagement is broken, and that I may not hope for its renewal." he replied very low.

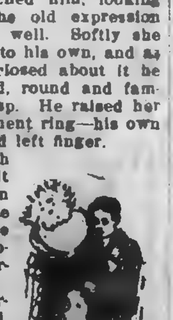
For an instant their gaze met as the glittering thing, lightly held, was passing from hand to hand; then as she released it and before his grip had become secure there was the slip of a nervous finger and with a tinkle the ring fell upon the iron grating on the floor register. Faintly they heard it go bounding far down the metal pipe which led to the furnace below, each supposing it lost forever in the flames and not knowing that in its fall by some strange fate it had bounded through a small hole in the pipe and now lay amidst the rubbish of the church's basement. For an instant the girl's eyes softened, then hardened again and she turned them aside. Upon the floor in a corner of the room the little church mouse was sitting upon its haunches, and she nodded towards him. "To be renewed when the little church mouse brings it back to me," she returned coldly.

They turned their backs upon each other and walked away.

A week passed, and the little church mouse prowling about in the darkness of the basement, saw something through the gloom that glittered even more brightly than did his own eyes. Cautiously, hungrily, he approached it, smelt of it, felt of it with his gray whiskers, then stood it up before him. Its glitter fascinated him. Surely this glistening thing about the size of a kernel of corn must be good to eat, and he tried his sharp teeth upon it. Yet gnaw as he would, he could not even scratch it, and at last he decided that it was only good to play with. He was a little thing, and half starved as are all church mice, so it came to pass that it was not long before he had worked his head and forelegs through it and was running about with it encircling his middle, a very small creature wearing a diamond saddle with a gold girth. It was fun for a time, but he soon became tired of it and tried to crawl out. He could not. Becoming panic stricken, he fled frantically up the stairs.

Janet, alone and very unhappy, sat in her pew at the Christmas morning service. It was rather chilly in the church and she slippen one hand into her muff. Then she gave a start, for within it she felt a small, struggling thing with something round and hard about it. Involuntarily she closed her hand, and as she did so the little church mouse popped out of the muff and scampered away, leaving the round object in her fingers. She drew it forth. It was her engagement ring.

The last of all to leave her pew, Janet stepped into the vestry upon her way out. Dick was standing before a window with head bowed, looking older, grayer of face than he had a few weeks ago, and she saw the deep unhappiness that lay in his eyes. She approached him, looking up at him with the old expression which he knew so well. Softly she slipped one hand into his own, and as his fingers gently closed about it he felt something hard, round and familiar within his grasp. He raised her hand. The engagement ring—his own—encircled her third left finger.



"The little church mouse brought it back to me. Listen while I tell you," she said, drawing a trifle closer. For a moment her voice murmured.

"Is it not wonderful!" she exclaimed, half awed, as she finished. His eyes lightened.

"Wonderful, dear! It is far more than that. It is a miracle of His Spirit wrought upon His day—His token of love everlasting and that even we are not forgotten."

Tightly his arms closed about her.

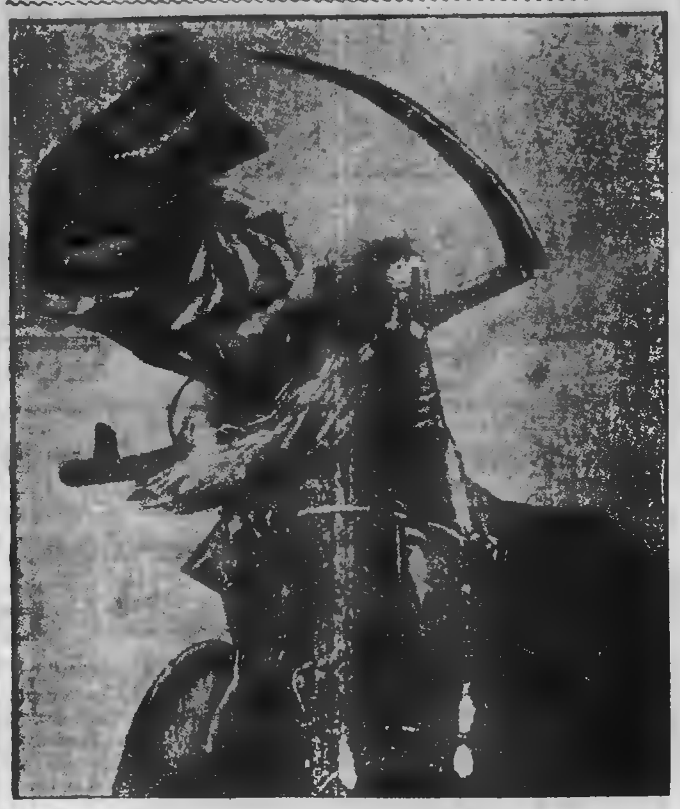
Christmas Plum Pudding

The Christmas plum pudding is descended from the plum porridge and is a time-honored dish at every Christmas feast. To be properly made, each person in all the household must stir it before it is boiled and the mistress of the house must add the spices "with her own fair hand," and so she favors fortune for a year. If she is an American and mixes her pudding in an ancient china bowl, stirring it with as ancient a spoon, whose handle is adorned with an old English crest, so much the better, for in the new land she is helping to keep alive the customs that made old England merrie.

The pudding should be boiled in a well-floured cloth "six hours upon the day of mixing, six hours upon the day of eating, and the steam should not cease to arise from the pot while the pudding is within it."

Many a man calls it last winter's overcoat, when as a matter of fact it is a 1909 model.

A despatch from the headquarters of Santa Claus states that this has been an unusually prosperous year in Santa Land, and that when Santa Claus leaves for Canada his reindeer will draw a record load of good things for Canadian girls and boys. He will call at every home, and if no gift is left it will be because no stocking has been hung near the chimney.



FATHER TIME AWHEEL.

"Whither so fast, old man?" asked the Snowy Owl of the aged wheelman who sped down the road at a never-changing pace.

"Just going, going, going,—but I seem no nearer my destination now than when I raced the stars in their courses on the back of a fleet camel, or bumped over the rutted paving stones in a Roman chariot," the white-bearded, thinly garbed sage complained.

"Then, why hurry? It's pleasant here at the edge of the swamp, where I can dig up a mouse from his burrow beneath the snow when I am hungry, and drowse and dream in the big pines when I am sleepy," persisted the owl, as he fluttered alongside the fleeting figure.

"Gladly would I stop with you," answered the patriarch, "but I am due in yonder city at midnight. I must greet a stranger called The New Year as the clock strikes twelve, and open the door called The Past for the care-worn Old Year. That has been my fate, my destiny, since this old world started on its rolling way; that will be my mission till the end of my days."

"And when will that be?" queried the ghostly night-bird.

"When Eternity dawns," came back the tired answer over the rider's shoulder, as the bird, tiring of the remorseless pace, fluttered heavily to a leafless bough.

"Strange old wayfarer, strange, strange," muttered the owl, "tired, but can't stop; he waits for no one—strange, strange."

HEAT WAVE IN AUSTRALIA

Sydney, N.S.W., Dec. 20.—One hundred and twenty-two in the shade is the record put up by the first heat wave experienced in Australia this summer. This was recorded at Eucla, a station on the South Australian border.

At Poma, in Queensland, the mercury stood at 110, while Newcastle, the coal city of New South Wales, has had the hottest spell for sixteen years, accompanied by dust and windstorms. Other parts of New South Wales were affected, but in Sydney the heat was less severe, the thermometer going only 93. No deaths are reported.

To Further Aviation.

Berlin, Dec. 20.—Prince Henry of Prussia, as protector of the Committee of the National Aviation Fund, announced that the fund had reached more than $1,750,000. An appeal was issued last April asking private persons and municipalities to subscribe toward a fleet of aeroplanes, which it was intended to present to the emperor.

Prince Henry, in a statement issued to-day, thanks in the warmest terms all the contributors, and says that the success of the movement renders it possible to "further aviation effectively for the upbuilding of the industry and well-being of the fatherland."

THE SPORTING WORLD

SPORTS FOR THE REGIMENT TO BE HELD ON NEW YEAR'S

A meeting of the non-commissioned officers and men of the 57th Regiment will be held in the Recreation room of the Armories on Monday night at eight o'clock, when it is hoped the attendance will be large.

It is proposed to hold a program of sports in the Armories on New year's afternoon, including wrestling and boxing bouts, and tug-of-war, but the meeting on Monday night will decide, and this is one reason why all the men should be present. There is every reason to believe that a very attractive program can be arranged, and if the members of the regiment will lend a band the proposition will be a big success.

FORMER WHITE CAP WILL MANAGE BRADFORD CLUB

Walter Jayes, who played for a short time in the White Caps' outfield last season, is now manager of the Bradford, Pa., club, in the New York and Pennsylvania League. He is looking for promising young players.

Since the Canadian League has come into existence, Ontario is fast gaining notoriety as a place where good ball players come from. Players like Matt Hynes, Dick Tasker, Ernie Dinsmore, Andy Kyle, Harry Fursseman, and others, are all Canadians raised in this province, and given their initial baseball training on Ontario soil. The big league scouts have put the Canadian League on their calling list, and as a result, Ontario home-grown players are being eagerly sought after.

President Nelson, of the Brantford Canadian League club, has received several letters from Canadian League magnates for Manager Ambrose Kane, but has declined them all. The London club was particularly anxious to secure Kane.

Frank Shaughnessy, manager of the Ottawa baseball club, has written to President Navin, of Detroit, for the release of Ed. Renfer, around whom he will build his pitching staff. Renfer is anxious to return.

The London club is after Ruse Deneau to manage the Canadian Leaguers next season. Louie Cook will go to Guelph.

INTENDED TO COME HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

Further Particulars as to the Death of William King

The body of the late William King, who was electrocuted while engaged as Assistant Superintendent of the Algoma Power Company at Michipocoten Falls last Sunday evening, arrived in the city last night in charge of Mr. Walter Belleghem and was removed to the residence of his mother, at 300 Rubidge street.

Mr. King, while working on Sunday evening, believed that the exciting current had been turned off and desired to stop the 10,000 volt generator by short circuiting the leads of the machine. In so doing he received 2500 or 3000 volts which in all probability caused instantaneous death. His fellow employes gave aid by artificial respiration but their efforts were fruitless. Four hours later a doctor arrived, but nothing whatever could be done, Michipocoten Falls being 150 miles north of the Soo and trains running only 4 times a week. The body did not arrive at the Soo until Tuesday night, where it was met by his brother and Mr. W. T. Belleghem.

Up to the time of the body arriving at the Soo, nothing had been done regarding an inquest, as the doctor had declared one unnecessary. However, this did not satisfy Mr. King and Mr. Belleghem, who ordered an inquest to be opened.

The late Mr. King was born in Peterborough 30 years ago and was widely known and highly respected by a large circle of friends. Each summer he came home to spend a month with his family, but last summer was the first time he was absent, and he was to have spent this Christmas at home instead. Later he was to enter Toronto University to finish his studies. He has been in the employ of the Algoma Power Company for the past four years. He was a member of the L.O.L. and the I.O.F., and attended St. Paul's Church, when at home.

Letters of condolence were received by Mrs. King, his mother, from Superintendent Beattie and Mrs Beattie, and the secretary at the office of the company.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

REGARDING CHANGES FOR CHURCH ADS

To ensure change in church advertisements in the Review, copy should be at the Review office before 9 o'clock on Saturday morning Local news.

NEW ORANGE HALL WAS OPENED AT CAMPBELLFORD

Campbellford, Dec. 20.—There was a large gathering at the new Orange Hall at Campbellford last night, when Col. Scott, Grand Master; Mr. Burnham, of Peterborough; Mayor Owens and Grand Lodge officers were present. After a sumptuous banquet in the hall of the Methodist church, adjournment was made to the new hall, where Bro. McCartney, of Bethany, presided. Music was supplied by the band.

Mayor Owen, ex-M.P., spoke of the growth of the Order and of the principles for which Orangemen stood.

THE NEW ALLIANCE.

Mr. Burnham dealt with the new alliance between the Orangemen and the Roman Catholics in which Bishop Fallon led the one side and it was supposed the Grand Lodge officers led the other, now they were united to smash the French.

BISHOP FALLON GAVE ORDER.

It was true that Orangemen had originally objected to the bi-lingual schools but nothing was done until Bishop Fallon gave the order, when both the Government and Orangemen sprang forward to do their duty.

Mr. Burnham said, however, that he believed in allowing the French and English to settle their own difficulties and that he was not going to join any deputation which Bishop Fallon might organize to wait on the Government.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION

He also explained the marriage question and showed how the Seat of Authority in the marriage matter as limited by the B. N. A. Act, was in the Federal Government after all.

COL. SCOTT SPEAKS.

Col. Scott gave a splendid address and spoke of the desire of Orangemen to be on good terms with their Roman Catholic fellow-citizens. He said, in these days, the Orangemen had taken the place of a great many other institutions which had grown stale, but were neither political nor corruptible, and they had thrown down the side just as often as the other and would do the same again when the occasion required it.

WHAT HAVE CLERGYMEN TO SAY OF ENGLISH GIRLS?

Correspondent to Review is Indignant at Statements Made in Dr. Sparron's Report.

A correspondent, who gives his name and address, writes to the Review, expressing indignation on behalf of himself and other Englishmen of the city, at the statements contained in a report by Dr. Sparrow to the Junior Imperial Migration Association, of London, Eng., in which English girls in Canada, are referred to as lacking in morals.

The writer uses very bitter language in speaking of Dr. Sparrow, and the local newspaper which published the report. The Review, however, thinks it proper to publish only the following extract—

"We are mostly working men in Peterborough, and we would be glad to hear some ministers, or prominent gentlemen give their opinions of English girls, many of them being members of the different churches here. They are in touch with English girls."

If this suggestion is carried out, the Review will be pleased to publish such opinions.

REFUSED TO TAKE INTEREST

Washington, Dec. 20.—In his testimony before the Pujo committee yesterday, Mr. J. P. Morgan said that the reason for financial patronalism of the men who reorganized corporations was because stockholders refused to take the proper amount of interest. He saw no danger in duplication of directors of banks as is done in New York.

"Don't you think there should be some competition between banks?" Mr. Untermeyer asked.

"I believe co-operation would be better."

"Don't you want any competition?"

"Oh, I wouldn't mind a little."

At this point Morgan asked permission to make a statement. His request granted, he said: "It is impossible to have complete concentration of money. That is one thing in which you can't have a trust. If you had all the money in Christendom you would not have control. No man can control all the money, all the banks, or all the credits."

Doomed Man Breaks Down.

Montreal, Dec. 20.—Hangman Arthur Ellis, who arrived in Montreal yesterday to hang Carlo di Battista to-day, stated, after visiting the prisoner in his cell, that he expected more trouble than he ever had with a condemned man.

Yesterday morning Battista, who has hitherto announced himself as an atheist, broke down completely, and agreed to see Rev. Father Cammello, who entered the death cell with two nuns and prayed with the frantic man for over an hour.

Marketing of Fruit.

St. Catharines, Dec. 20.—The Niagara Peninsula United Fruit Growers' Association yesterday afternoon appointed a committee of representative men from various sections of the district to look into the question of better and more efficient marketing of the increasing quantities of fruit which is being produced; to secure data of what is being done elsewhere, and to report to a subsequent meeting to be held at the earliest possible date.

Editorial Writer Sues.

Quebec, Dec. 20.—H. D. Hellencourt, editor-in-chief of the Soleil yesterday afternoon entered action for $900 damages against The Morning Chronicle.

The action is the result of an editorial which appeared in The Chronicle yesterday morning in which the plaintiff was charged with being paid to write articles in criticism of Sir Rodolphe Forget.

Female Dick Turpin.

Montreal, Dec. 20.—Acquitted on a charge of murder in July last, Mary Hubbard, alias Alice Burns, was arrested here yesterday on a charge of highway robbery, alleged to have been commited in Quebec.

On March 1, 1912, Chief Detective McCaskill of the provincial detective department, arrested Mary Hubbard and a man named Montiyano for the murder of an unknown man at Murray Bay, Quebec. The man was tried first and sentenced to 99 years' imprisonment, while the woman, taking the stand in her own defence, was acquitted.

Wednesday night Chief Detective Walsh of Quebec notified Chief McCaskill to arrest the woman for highway robbery. She was taken to Quebec.

Labor Blames Three.

Indianapolis, Dec. 20.—Upon the McNamara brothers and Ortie E. McManigal, the confessed dynamiters, who in the name of labor unions committed crimes against which civilization revolts but in which labor unions took no part, Chester H. Krum, arguing to the jury in the dynamite conspiracy trial yesterday, rested the responsibility for the series of explosions which the forty defendants are charged with having caused. Mr. Krum, associated with U. S. Senator John W. Kern, as counsel for the defence, told the jurors the Government had failed to show that President Frank M. Ryan and other officials of the Ironworkers' Union had violated the federal statute prohibiting the carrying of explosives on passenger trains and that the Government had based its charges chiefly upon the admissions of the dynamiters.

The defence's counsel attacked the confession of McManigal as given on the stand, "because this same McManigal is an admitted thief, who testified in court that he stole 100 pounds of dynamite and hid it in the shed of his unsuspecting father at Tiffin, O.

A LIVING TOWER.

Captain Meeker's Unique Idea in the Building Line.

What is known as the "living tower," says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, stands on the very summit of a hill more than 200 feet high at Camp Meeker, a summer resort in Sonoma county, Cal. It was Captain Meeker, an old pioneer, who first conceived the idea of building a tower on the very summit of a high hill near his hotel, and while looking around one day for a suitable site he found four young redwood trees standing about twelve feet apart, representing a perfect square. The trees were each about 150 feet high. Fifty feet of each top was lopped off, and the work of building six stories was then commenced. From top to bottom the living tower was a hundred feet high.

Each floor is about 12 by 12 feet and rests on strong timbers, the ends of which are securely attached to the four trees by means of steel cables and bolts. So strongly was every part braced that the whole structure does not move as much as one would naturally suppose, even when rocked by heavy winds. In the building great care was taken by the workmen to cut only the branches growing on the inside of the square, and the trees were not chopped, mutilated or weakened any more than could be avoided.

Leading up from each story are broad stairways, so that one may ascend and descend with ease and perfect safety, while around the edge of each floor are strong railings to prevent accidents. Since this tower was completed the trees have grown and flourished just as well as before. This living tower is claimed to be the only one of its kind in the world.

Paint of Our Forefathers.

A white lead and oil paint, the finish of our forefathers, is easily and economically mixed from the raw materials as it is needed for use. With each 100 pounds of white lead mix five gallons linseed oil, one pint turpentine and one pint drier. An allowance of 50 cents for the labor of mixing gives eight gallons of white paint for about $13.15, or $1.64 a gallon. Two coats of this, or better three, after coating knots and pitchy, sappy places with orange shellac, provide a good finish either outdoors or in.—Country Life in America.

At any of the large United States automobile factories women are engaged in certain branches of automobile building, although the industry is scarcely a decade old.

MANY APPEALS ARE BEING HEARD

Considerable interest was manifested this morning in the hearing of appeals against the voters' list, which commenced at ten-thirty before Judge Huycke. Five hundred and seventy-five appeals were on the list altogether. The local option interests were represented by Mr. A. E. Dixon and A. B. Cunningham, and the opposite interests by Mr. D. O'Connell and D. Burritt. The former party had three hundred and fifty appeals, and the latter two hundred and twenty-five.

The appeal of Mr. F. J. Cavanagh was allowed. He fulfilled all the requirements of salary, age and nationality.

The requirements necessary to make a citizen eligible for a vote are that he should be twenty-one years of age, a British subject and have been a resident of the municipality for twelve months preceding last November.

About forty of the appellants were present in person.

Some of the appeals allowed were those of Miss Norah Devlin, William Bassett, George McKenzie, H. C. Treneer W. H. Watley, Edwin J. Seabright and Wm. Mein.

DEATH OF MRS. GEORGE MILLER

Was Daughter-in-Law of Mr. F. W. Miller, Water Street

Mr. F. W. Miller, Water street, received word to-day that his daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Miller, of Chicago, died suddenly at Ottumaa, Ohio, where she underwent an operation which proved successful. Leaving the hospital she was driven to the home of Mrs. A. A. Harvie, a daughter of Mr. F. W. Miller, but in walking to the house a blood vessel was ruptured, and the end came quickly.

The remains were interred at Marsella, Ohio, where brothers of the late Mrs. Miller reside.

OBITUARY

The Late John G. Greer

The death of Mr. John G. Greer, brother of Dr. T. N. Greer, of this city, took place in Toronto on the 15th inst., after an illness of about two years. He was the second eldest son of the late Henry Greer, formerly a well known resident of Cavan township. The late Mr. Greer was for twenty-five years the eastern representative of the firm of Goldie & McCullough, of Galt. About two years ago he resigned this position owing to ill health and since then has resided with his brother, Dr. Greer, until a few weeks ago when he went to Toronto for special treatment, which, however, proved unavailing, the end coming rather suddenly on Sunday last. The funeral, which was private, took place on Tuesday, 17th, in the family plot at Gardener's Cemetery, near Millbrook.

The Late Mrs. Dobbin

Mrs Margaret Dobbin, relict of the late John Dobbin, of North Monaghan, passed away yesterday afternoon, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. J. Byrne, 124 George street, in her 91st year.

The late Mrs. Dobbin was born in North Monaghan and lived there until her husband died about twenty years ago, when she moved to Peterborough. She was a Methodist in religion, and was well known and highly respected by everyone who knew her throughout the days of her long and useful life. Surviving her are her sons, John, of Brayside; George, of Monaghan; Andrew, of Rochester, and Robert, on the homestead. Her daughters are Mrs Margaret Burns, of the city; Mrs George Steers, of Yellowgrass, Sask. Her brothers and sisters are James and George, of Toronto, and John Fowler, Monaghan; Mrs. Geo. Tully, Lennox, Iowa; Mrs. Andrew Grant, Boliver street; Mrs. Richard Lillico Monaghan, and Mrs. Robert Leach Cleveland, Ohio.

Scene from "BILLY THE KID."

Berkeley Haswell, the popular young actor, is the criminal hero of "BILLY THE KID" at the Grand on Christmas Day, matinee and night and such is the slant of human nature when the dashing bad man is concerned—he gets just as much applause as if he were the most virtuous of mortals. He is a very clever young artist and is surrounded with a company of capable actors The melodrama is of Western type with lots of action, exciting situations, plenty of fun and a nice little love story, and the scenery and production is all that could be required.

DAINTIES FOR CHRISTMAS

It has been said that in "Merry England" old Christmas customs have a stronger hold than any other nation how to provide good things to eat for the season of cheer and festivity. While other nations claim to have equaled the "roast beef and plum pudding of Old England," there still remains at least one field in which English products cannot be surpassed and that is the manufacture of cocoa and chocolate powder and the many confections derived from these.

With the knowledge gained from nearly 200 year's experience in this business and a trade that has assumed world-wide proportions, since 1729, the House of J. S. Fry & Sons Limited, may be given a fare share of the credit that attaches to the "old country" for her supremacy in the cocoa industry. Fry quality has been attested by the awarding of over 300 "Grand Prizes" Gold Medals and Diplomas. While, commencing with the Royal Warrant of Appointment to H. M. King George the Second, in 1729, the House of Fry have catered to scores of the crowned heads of Europe.

EUROPEAN POURPARLER GOES AT SNAIL'S PACE

The Powers Accept the Principle of Albanian Autonomy and Are Willing to Let Servia Have a Port on on Adriatic.

London, Dec. 21.—The slow and devious processes of diplomacy are advancing toward to solution of the near eastern puzzle at a snail's pace. The only definite achievement of the day was an agreement by the ambassadors of the six great European powers that their Governments would accept in principle autonomy for Albania and a guarantee to Servia of a port on the Adriatic Sea. Having passed this milestone in their deliberations the ambassadorial conference adjourned over the Christmas holidays.

The Balkan peace delegates enjoyed the hospitality of the Lord Mayor of London at a Mansion House luncheon, a function which is traditionally given in honor of members of foreign missions, representatives of friendly navies and former Presidents of republics who visit London. The peace delegates mingled in the most friendly fashion, partook of the famous Mansion House turtle soup and listened to an optimistic speech by Premier Asquith.

Of business the delegates transacted none of a formal character, but the embassies and the hotels where the delegates are quartered were buzzing with informal conferences.

The sublime Porte has empowered its envoys to include the Greek delegates in the negotiations for peace, and a messenger with the documents containing this decision is expected to reach London to-day. Despatches received here from Constantinople say that the Turks are confident that they now occupy a better military position towards the Greeks than when the negotiations began. and that Turkey now would not sign an armistice with them even if the Greeks requested it.

The Turkish delegates have been instructed, according to another report, to raise the question of the status of Adrianople immediately, and if Bulgaria persists in demanding its surrender to break off the peace negotiations; but diplomats generally are skeptical of this story.

While the agreement of the ambassadors of the powers on autonomy for Albania is an independent step the working out of the details of the scheme making its effective will be one of the most difficult problems a European conference ever has grappled with.

The Economist notifies financiers and investors to expect in the coming year loans totaling $400,000,000, with which to repair the losses caused by the war and the mobilization in Russia, Austria and Italy. The newspaper estimates the cost of the war at $175,000,000, using as a basis of reckoning the fact that there are 1,090,000 men under arms—400,000 Turks, 300,000 Bulgarians, 200,000 Servians, 150,000 Greeks and 40,000 Montenegrins—at an average expense of ten shillings daily per man.

Turks Not Sincere?

Belgrade, Dec. 21.—The newspapers here state that they are firmly of the belief that the Turks are making all sorts of excuses at the peace conference in London in order to gain time to complete the reorganization of their army and start the war anew. The papers demand that the allies force the Turks to immediately make peace or resume hostilities.

Djavid Pasha, commander of the seventh Turkish army corps, who retreated towards Goritza after his defeat at Monastir, has sent a special delegate to the Servian headquarters to state that his men are suffering from the plague and diphtheria. He made a request that 200 portions of serum be sent him, and the Servian chief of staff has ordered that the request be complied with forthwith.

Cost Austria $800,000 a Day.

Paris, Dec. 21.—Austria-Hungary is spending $800,000 a day to defray the expenses of the mobilization of her army, according to an estimate made by a correspondent of The Temps just returned from the country.

At the same time the fear-stricken peasants are becoming the prey of dishonest speculators. Groups of these men are cornering all the gold and silver coin, with which they buy all the paper money they can find at a heavy discount, and then send it to Austria proper, where it is good for its face value.

JURY IN HICKEY MURDER TRIAL FAIL TO AGREE

Judge Refuses Their Release and Sends Them Back After 21 Hours Deliberations.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 21— The jury, in the case of J. Frank Hickey, on trial for the murder of Joseph Josephs of Lackawanna, battled all night without reaching a verdict. and at 10.30 this morning, 21 hours after they received the case, reported to the court that they could not agree. Justice Brown declined to release them and sent them back to the jury room.

Buffalo, Dec. 21.—After nine hours' deliberation the jury in the case of J. Frank Hickey, accused of murdering Joseph Josephs, the seven-year-old Lackawanna boy, was unable to reach a verdict and the twelve men were locked up for the night. If a verdict is reached during the night it will be sealed and reported to Justice Brown in the Supreme Court to-day.

The conflicting expert testimony as to the state of Hickey's mind at the time he killed the boy is the point over which the jury split.

WITNESSES WERE FIXED HE SAYS

Man Sentenced to Ten Years, Claims Unfair Trial.

London, Dec. 21.—Joseph Davies, sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary by Judge Macbeth last week on a charge of highway robbery with violence, wrote a letter from the county jail this morning in which he accused certain officials with "fixing" witnesses to swear against him. The letter was sent to Squire Chittick.

Davies asserts that he was subject to an unfair trial in which false witnesses swore against him. In the letter he expressed a desire to prefer like charges against Crown Attorney McKillop and High Constable Hughes, feeling confident he could prove his innocence. He asks the advice of the squire in this respect.

C. R. from Moncton to Windsor Junction, or to hand the same road over to a private company.

It is stated also that the I. C. R. will show a surplus of $800,000 and that $500,000 will be spent on rolling stock.

It is also said that the C. P. R. will soon build a big hotel in Halifax.

In India he will traverse the valley of the Indus to Calcutta. From Calcutta the route is to Borneo, thence to Australia and New Zealand to Montevideo, Valparaiso, Callo, Peru, to Panama and through Mexico into the United States, then to Vancouver, and thence to Calgary.

Hon. James Young's Illness.

Galt, Dec. 21.—The condition of Hon. James Young, who is lying in a precarious state at his residence, "Hill Crest," for several weeks, shows some slight improvement to-day. Mr. Young is 78, and too close application to this literary labors in connection with his history of Canadian public affairs is the immediate cause of breakdown. His weakness is aggravated by bronchial trouble.

TERRIBLE DEATH OF SMALL BOY

Tripped and Fell Into Kettle of Boiling Water.

Durham, Dec. 21.—A terrible death was that experienced near Orchard, eight miles south of here yesterday morning, by Henry, the five-year-old son of Henry Seim. Running past a large sugar kettle, filled with boiling water, while romping with his uncle, George Seim, in the woods, the lad tripped and plunged headlong into the boiling mass.

When reached by his uncle he was literally cooked, although he survived the accident nearly three hours.

To Demand Protection.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Henry Lane Wilson, the American ambassador to Mexico, who has been here in conference with State Department officials regarding conditions growing out of the Mexican revolution, left yesterday preparatory to sailing for his post without the expected note of representations which this Government is proposing to be sent to the Mexican Government demanding protection for American citizens and property. This action is taken as a further evidence of the intention of the administration to deal with this delicate and difficult situation with circumspection and in a spirit of deliberation.

The communication is now being prepared with the greatest care at the State Department, and will be transmitted to the American ambassador shortly after his arrival in Mexico City early in January.

RAILROAD MAGNATE IS KIND TO UNFORTUNATE LAD

Canadian Press Despatch.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 21— Wally Barrow, aged eighteen, who has been a waif all his life, and knows nothing of his parents, and who lost both legs on the Great Northern Railway, left yesterday for St. Paul, Minn., to spend Christmas with James J. Hill, the railroad magnate.

While recuperating in the county hospital here, Barrow wrote exonerating the company of all blame and asking if there was not some railroad work he could do. Hill replied offering artificial limbs, education, and a life position on the railway.

TORONTO'S HYDRO ELECTRIC SYSTEM

Undertaking is on Paying Basis After Providing for Interest, Sinking Fund and Depreciation Out of Income

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Following are some of the outstanding statements in a report of independent auditors who absolutely contradict the statements made by City Auditor Walter Sterling, concerning Toronto's Hydro-Electric system:

"There has been no improper capitalisation of expenditure as alleged.

"The Accounting Department is not over-staffed, and its system of book-keeping is well adapted to the requirements of the enterprise.

"The policy of the Commissioners in charging sinking funds and depreciation funds against revenue is not only sound and proper, but it is the only practical policy open to them.

"The undertaking is now actually on a paying basis, after providing for interest, sinking fund, and depreciation out of income."

The independent auditors were John MacKay & Co., Toronto.

WAS INTENDED TO INSPIRE HORROR

Acts of McNamara Brothers Not Approved Of.

Indianapolis, Dec. 21.—Wm. [illegible] Gray, Philadelphia, counsel for the defence of the alleged dynamiters, told the jurors to-day that none of the defendants approved of the acts of the McNamara brothers or of the assaults and riots in labor disputes, as had been described by witnesses.

"But these assaults are offences expressly reserved for the states to handle," said Mr. Gray. "It is not the mission of the Federal Government here to step in. The only charge the Federal Government can bring is that of illegal transportation of explosives.

"Why then did the Government bring in all this evidence about explosives? Its only purpose was to inspire horror in the minds of you jurors. If these men had transported dynamite to San Francisco during the earthquake there and used it to destroy buildings so that fire might not spread, if they had been actuated by this humane motive, they would have been equally guilty under the law. The law has only to do with the transportation, not to the motive for that transportation."

CANADIANS IN BRITISH POLITICS

London, Dec. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Charles Newhouse Armstrong of Montreal, vice-chairman of the Central Railway Co. of Canada, will be the next Conservative candidate for the Colne Valley division of Yorkshire.

Otto N. Kahn, another Canadian, will contest the Gorton division of Lancashire for the Conservatives. Both candidates are personal friends of Sir Max Aitken.

Frontenac Jail Unsanitary.

Kingston, Dec. 21.—In a report, Dr. Bruce Smith severely criticizes the county council for not making the jail quarters sanitary. He says no turnkeys having regard for his health, would stay in the quarters provided for them.

ROAST FOR CHURCHILL

London, Dec. 21.—Much hard language was indulged in and venomous feeling aroused in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon over the retirement of Vice-Admiral Sir Francis C. Bridgeman from the position of First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, who is a member of the House, and Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, reviled each other to the utmost limit allowed in the British Parliament.

"Backstairs methods," "bribes and threats," "gross insinuations" and "skulking" were some of the choice phrases exchanged.

In his reply, Winston Churchill said he had never taken seriously unsupported charges of espionage, favoritism, blackmail and inefficiency made by Lord Beresford.

Mr. Churchill stuck to his guns in saying that he had written to Admiral Bridgeman insisting on his resignation solely on account of the admiral's health rendering him incapable of adequately fulfilling his duties.

QUEEN DEFIES OLD TRADITION

Vienna, Dec. 21.—The Neues Tageblatt's Athens correspondent says Queen Olga of Greece intends to visit the twenty-one monasteries of Mount Ahos, 80 miles to the southeast of Saloniki, thus breaking the rule prohibiting women to visit the sacred mountain, which has been strictly observed for 1,580 years.

"The monks on the mountain," continues the correspondent, "on many occasions have refused to permit royal ladies to visit them, always excusing themselves behind the legend that the Virgin Mary with the infant Christ visited the mountain and that no woman has been allowed to do so since. But now that the Greeks have conquered the territory and the King and Queen propose to visit the mountain, the monks summoned their council and decided that they had no course but to rescind the rule.

MONTENEGRINS DISPLEASED WITH KING NICHOLAS

Failure of Tiny Kingdom's Campaign Has Caused Great Anger and Six Thousand Lives Lost to Little Purpose Has Enraged the People.

London, Dec. 21.—The Daily Telegraph's Vienna correspondent says:—While the Austro-Servian question, which appears to have weathered most of the dangerous stages for the moment, is a secondary consideration, news of an anti-dynastic agitation, to which grave importance is attached, comes from Montenegro. Reports to hand from Cettinje speak of the danger for the future of King Nicholas' dynasty as the result of the unfavorable outcome of the war for Montenegro. The enormous losses of the Montenegrin army and the failure to capture Scutari have caused bitterness and anger. The press comments attack the royal family. This news is confirmed by Belgrade despatches. Of 42,000 men in arms at the beginning of the war, 6,000 have fallen, among them many officers belonging to prominent families in the country. The number of sick and wounded is great, and the economic results of the war is very serious, as a famine is threatened.

King Nicholas is aware of the dangerous temperament of the country, and took command of the troops at the last moment at Scutari, hoping to associate the fall of the town with his name so as to strengthen the dynasty. He failed, however, and the situation at Scutari seems, indeed, to be astonishingly good, the position of the besiegers being far worse than that of the besieged, who, at any rate, are under shelter, while the Montenegrins are exposed to the cold.

King Nicholas begged the allies during the last few days to represent the case of Scutari as strongly as possible for Montenegro. Not much, however, is expected from the peace conference on the subject, as [illegible] if Turkey were disposed to make [illegible]cessions, the energetic defender [illegible] Scutari, Riza Bey, long ago decl[illegible] his intention to blow up the fort[illegible] himself rather than yield to the [illegible]ntenegrins.

Some little confirmation of the foregoing despatch has reached London as to the strength of the anti-dynastic feeling against the Njegust family and the growth of sentiment in favor of the Karageorgevitch family. The Njegust and Karageorgevitch families have long been rivals for ultimate predominance in a united Servia-Montenegro. King Peter is the son-in-law of King Nicholas, but for years hatred has prevailed between the father and son-in-law, a reconciliation only taking place before the outbreak of the present war.

PANAMA DISPUTE SHOULD GO TO HAGUE SAYS SPEAKER

Washington, Dec. 21.—That the United States should admit to arbitration the Panama Canal controversy between Great Britain and this country, was the declaration made last night by Everett Wheeler of New York at the opening session of the American Society for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes.

"It is inconceivable," he asserted, "that after the United States has settled by arbitration far more important controversies between itself and Great Britain than any that can possibly arise with reference to the Panama Canal, it should refuse to refer to an impartial tribunal, formed in pursuance of a treaty which the United States itself proposed, this pure question of law as to what the Hay-Pauncefote treaty means."

The speaker scouted the idea that it would be impossible to procure unbiassed and impartial arbitration. He said this was "doing great injustice to the judges who form the panel of the High Court at The Hague, who are not arbitrators put forward by each nation to maintain its own interests, but judges of high character, learning and ability.

"So far as The Hague Tribunal is concerned," Mr. Wheeler continued, "most of the judges are citizens of nations that have but a trifling interest in the controversy, or perhaps none at all. But if it were otherwise it would be better a thousand times that the United States should submit its case to this tribunal than that it should be false to its plighted faith and the honorable traditions of 125 years."

More than usual interest was attached to this year's meeting of the society because of the important international questions now at stake, both at home and abroad, among them the Balkan, Panama and Mexican situations.

SUFFRAGISTS NEAR ALBANY

Wappinger Falls, N.Y., Dec. 21.—Albany only 80 miles away. This was the cry of the little band of suffragettes who arrived here late yesterday afternoon, after an eight mile walk from Fishkill Landing over good roads. Last night the four pedestrians, Miss Rosalie Jones, Miss Ida Croft, Mrs. Jessie M. Stubbs, and Mrs. Lavinia Dock are sleeping contentedly in a local hotel and on the morrow will plod the seven miles to Poughkeepsie, where they will remain over Sunday.

When the little party left Fishkill Landing, the president of the village and the chief of police formed a guard of honor until the suffragists were well on their way. They were accompanied by a score of enthusiastic suffragists, and on their arrival here they were met by a large delegation with rousing cheers. Miss Craft addressed a crowd of workmen coming from a factory, and Miss Jones and Miss Croft spoke at the Assembly Hall.

Aviator Was Unfortunate.

Vesoul, France, Dec. 21.—The German aviator who landed at Marnay in his biplane Thursday, and whose machine was seized by the French police, has proved to be a German non-commissioned officer of the army, named Ziffa. He was dressed in the uniform of the German military flying corps.

He declared yesterday that he had undertaken to follow the course of the canal from Mulhausen in Alsace-Lorraine, to the fortress of Strasburg, but had lost his way. The French military governor of the fortress of Belfort has sent a detachment of the flying corps to assist Ziffa in the resumption of his flight.

"UNTO US A SON IS GIVEN."

—Dec. 22.—Isaiah 9:1-7.—

"Unto us a Child is born; unto us a Son is given."—Verse 6.

TO-DAY'S study relates to a subject which has thrilled the civilized world for centuries—a subject which to all eternity shall be a theme of angels and men. The birth of Jesus must be considered from the standpoint of a Gift of Love Divine.

The world was under sentence of death; mankind had been dying for more than four thousand years. God had pitied humanity from the first. Yea, before sin entered, Divine wisdom saw the end, and would not have created man, nor permitted the condition which led to sin and death, had Divine Wisdom not foreseen and arranged in advance for human Redemption.

God had purposely arranged so that it would require the death of a perfect man to redeem Adam and the race which lost life in him. God knew from the beginning that no such man could be found, because all men were of Adamic stock and had a share in imperfection and condemnation. The Divine Plan contemplated that His Only Begotten, the active Agent of Divinity in the work of Creation, should be granted the great privilege of being man's Redeemer, and thereby securing a great reward—immortality, the Divine nature, through a resurrection from the dead.

The First Step of Redemption.

The primary step in man's recovery necessarily was that the Logos should be made flesh and dwell amongst us, and taste death, by the grace of God, for every man. (John 1:14; Heb. 2:9). It is this first step that we celebrate at this season of the year—the birth of Jesus. "He who was rich, for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty might be reclaimed."

To-day's study points out that those Jews who were then supposed to be in greatest darkness would see the great Light of Divine Truth, as represented in Jesus and His ministry. This had a primary fulfilment in Galilee, where the major portion of the mighty works of Jesus were performed. But its real fulfilment lies in the future, when the great light of the Millennial Kingdom, "the Sun of Righteousness, shall arise with healing in its beams." Before that glorious Sun, sorrow and sighing will flee away; ignorance and superstition will vanish; sin and darkness will be no more. Jesus is the great Center of that Sun of Righteousness, but as He points out, the Bride class, in process of selection during this Age, is to sit with Him in His Throne; will shine forth with the Bridegroom to heal earth's sorrows and scatter earth's night. (Matt. 13:43.) All this will come because "unto us a child is born; unto us a Son is given"; because the Government shall rest upon His shoulders; because His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty, Mighty One, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

"He who was rich for our sakes became poor."

We are to understand verses three to five as referring, not to Natural Israel, but to Spiritual Israel—nominal. The holy nation has phenominally increased without increasing the joy. There are many false children in the nominal family of God; there are many "tares" in the wheat field. But in the "harvest" time of this Age, there will be a joy; the faithful will rejoice as they that "divide the spoil." The burdensome yoke of the creedal superstitions will be broken, and the rod of the oppressor, Satan, will be broken as in the day of Midian, when Gideon with his little band put to flight the army of the Midianites and set the people free.

Our great Redeemer, highly exalted, is eventually to bear many titles in commemoration of the many wonderful Offices He will fill and services He will accomplish. But these are yet future. First of all, His revelation to the world will be as the Wonderful One, the embodiment, the Expression of Divine Justice, Love, Wisdom and Power. As yet the world knoweth Him not. He will be revealed to mankind "in flaming fire," in the time of trouble, and subsequently, in the rescue work of His Millennial Kingdom.

"Unto us a child is born."

He will be the world's Counselor, to give assistance, guidance, whereby they may return, through Restitution, into harmony with Jehovah and to the enjoyment of the blessings provided through Redemption. His title, The Mighty God, or Mighty, Mighty One, will be recognized then, on earth, as well as in Heaven—that "Him hath God set forth to be a Prince and a Savior, to grant repentance and remission of sins.

The title, The Everlasting Father, will apply to Him as the Life-giver of the world, during the thousand years of His reign. Not so the Church; Jesus is not the Church's Everlasting Father, as St. Paul declares, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us again to a hope of life."

His title, The Prince of Peace, will not apply to Him at the beginning of His reign, when He will be breaking in pieces as a potter's vessel every human system out of accord with the Divine standards, but true peace shall speedily be established, and He shall be known as the Prince of Peace.

I've even known girls to slight those whom they really cared for to give someone to whom they were merely kindly disposed because they feared critism if they did not give.

It should be used regularly as a hair dressing by everyone with healthy hair because it never fails to prevent dandruff, falling hair, or any scalp disease.

But Parisian Sage is not only a preventive it is a certain cure for dandruff; it stops itching of the scalp instantly; it makes hair grow thick and luxuriant. It is especially in demand by ladies, because it makes the hair beautiful soft and fluffy. It is offered by druggists and department stores everywhere under a positive guarantee to do all that is claimed for it or money back.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 20.—Wheat—Market opened under pressure of lower American cables and values were lower. Following the opening there was covering by shorts and prices advanced on the unfavorable weather in Argentine, higher closing at Buenos Ayres, firmer Plate offers and forecast of light world's shipments, other than America. There is an improved demand from the continent, with Antwerp bidding and taking freely of Manitobas with an improved demand for good wheat generally.

Corn—Opened unchanged and later the Plate grade declined ¼d on the smaller inquiry for cargoes, and importers selling. The American grade was steady and unchanged.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If In Doubt About the Right Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill, from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak, there is no pill like them.

"Speaking of my own experience with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I can say they have proved the most stimulating pills for the liver I have found. I have proved their tonic action upon digestion, and the same results have been secured by friends upon whom I have urged their use. The manufacturers are to be congratulated upon possessing so valuable a prescription, and the public should know that so valuable a remedy has been placed at their command."

No other pill for constipation, for liver, kidney, or stomach trouble, compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild and sure always to restore health. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all dealers, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston Ont.

Write Ideas For Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25, a low figure.

You Will Earn $100 Monthly For Spare Time Work.

FREE Send your name and address at once for free copy of our illustrated book, "MOVING PICTURE PLAYWRITING"

FOSTER'S BULLS-EYE

The speech on the naval issue by Hon. George E. Foster was easily the most effective sample of debating heard in the House of Commons this session. In biting phrase and apt comparison, he tore the Liberal case against the Borden naval policy to shreds. He puts Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declarations in their proper light—that they were made merely in the hope of keeping his old separatist navy idea while pleasing the Liberal imperialists by enlarging his program to a more expensive scale than that proposed by Mr. Borden. As Mr. Foster said, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declaration for a large fleet unit on each side of Canada was a death-bed repentence, or a platform to get in on. There was not the real sincerity in it that would be liked, because it was such an augmentation of the former Laurier plans. Though Sir Wilfrid declared that four years ago he knew all the facts and figures presented to Parliament through the Admiralty memorandum, what had he done at that time to aid the Empire in the crisis which that memorandum indicated was approaching? His two "tin-pots" cruisers were cast offs by the Admirlaty, and even before the last Dominion election, the Laurier Government had held without action, tenders for the constituents of the units they had contemplated ordering.

Attack as they may, the Liberals will not be able to make material headway against the Borden policy. Mr. Borden went to the British Admiralty, and asked in what way Canada could most effectively assist in the defences of the Empire, and the Admiralty replied that it had no hesitation in saying that the most effective contribution would be a certain number of the strongest and biggest ships science could build or money supply. That is what Canada is doing, and later on will come the question of a permanent policy, a policy that will undoubtedly have reference to the provision of a Canadian fleet for local defence purposes. Canada will most effectively aid the Empire by maintaining a small navy in Canadian waters, weeks away from the theatre of war. That must be done by having the ships ready to strike in those distant waters. Yet Canada ought to have a naval force in its own waters, as a second line of defence. If Canada aided the general defences of the Empire, thus adding to its own security and aiding in the preservation of the Imperial tie, and also made special provision for protecting itself in the event of war by a local fleet, it would have double security. Of the two, the contribution to the central navy is to be preferred, but as that is not to be periodical or regular, but only if the need arises, Canada can without embarassing itself financially have a few ships in its own waters. There is no real reason why the combination should not be made.

SENATE REFORM

The intimation in the Mail and Empire that if the Liberals in the Senate undertake to kill the Borden naval bill they will find a movement on foot for the reconstruction of the Senate is not without some authority. If the Liberal majority in the Senate have the audacity, the supreme nerve to prevent the will of the House of Commons taking effect on a subject in which the honor and duty of Canada are so vitally concerned it ought to be put out of business. The trouble is that the Senators are appointed for life, and a Government would be able to carry into effect its intentions in respect of Senate reform only when a majority in that body concurred. An election in which the people triumphantly endorsed the Government would have a moral effect in persuading the Senate that it could not obstruct the will of the people for partisan purposes, but every time rancorous partisans have the power to obstruct Government legislation are they to be allowed free play? The battle against such a Senate in Canada would have none of the difficulties attendant upon the fight of the British House of Commons against the House of Lords over the veto matter. The senators in Canada are appointees of a Government, with no vested rights or privileges beyond what the Constitution allows. It might be necessary to get the British North American Act amended, if the wings of the Senators could be clipped by that avenue of procedure, but whatever the means, there is no doubt about the determination of the Conservatives that such a vital matter as the naval contribution shall not be subjected to any unnecessary partisan obstruction. It is not likely that Canada would tolerate anything of that nature for the minute, even from the embittered relic of Liberalism. The warning is quite plain.

SHEEP-RAISING DECLINE

The decline in sheep raising in Canada, and in Ontario should be a matter of greater concern. Nothing is being done in this province to encourage sheep raising. The Government muddles along, or rather Hon. James Duff muddles along, in the same old way, trying to encourage agriculture by roundabout and sometimes useless methods. The number of sheep on Canadian farms has decreased from 3,155,000 in 1871 to 2,360,000 in 1912. Canada has changed from a sheep-exporting country, to a sheep-importing country. Of the 39,000 head marketed in Winnipeg last year, not 1,000 were Canadian-bred sheep. Yet in the Peterborough district, and through Eastern Ontario, there is no reason why there should not be great flocks of these animals. There is an immense quantity of pasture going to waste in Ontario that might well be used for live-stock raising, with plenty of marsh hay for winter feeding. Why does the business languish? Prices are the highest in history.

The trouble seems to be that in many parts of Canada people are investing their surplus money in land. They are neglecting the extension of their production to gamble in sub-divisions or farm properties. There may be more money in it temporarily, without hard work. But there is no question that as a nation nears the crest of a wave of prosperity, the general public starts in to make things hum, and when the bottom drops out, it is the general public which is left stranded. Yet it is hard to think that the well-financed farmers of Ontario are that. Certainly those who are not well off are not doing it. Is it the scarcity of labor? The sheep is almost able to look after itself. Whatever the true explanation is, someone ought to come forward with suggestions for an effective remedy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The price of silk hats is going up, and the price of coffee is coming down in the United States, according to a New York newspaper. The news should be satisfactory to the consumer. A silk hat is a luxury that the ordinary chap can do without.

The Hamilton city council has passed a resolution urging on the Canadian government the duty of making some public recognition of the great services to the empire rendered by Mrs. Fessenden, in having been the first proposer and promoter of the institution of Empire Day, which has become a general institution in Canada, in connection with the birthday of the great queen, and which has spread more or less throughout the empire. Such services in the case of men are rewarded by the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Why should women be shut out from such honors? At all events there are ways of recognizing women's services. The Hamilton resolution asks for public recognition in a tangible way. — Montreal Witness.

FELL DEAD AS HE TALKED WITH OLD SWEETHEART

Detroit, Dec. 21—Frank Laughlin and Mrs. Diana Brown were lovers in St. Thomas fifty years ago. It was another instance of the course of true love not running smooth, and finally they separated. Mr. Laughlin went to Dryden, Mich., and married another woman.

The aged pair met by accident in this city yesterday, after a separation of over half a century, Mr. Laughlin having left Dryden to visit son, who is a prominent jeweller in Detroit. They went to the Franklin House to renew the old friendship.

The reunited friends went to a parlor and began talking over old days in St. Thomas. Mrs. Brown said her comanion was much animated, his cheeks flushed, his eyes bright, as scenes of their boyhood and girlhood life were recalled.

Suddenly after a hearty laugh at some childish prank, Mr. Laughlin pressed his hand to his heart and fell to the floor. He died instantly. The body was taken to Dryden for burial. Mrs. Brown gave her address to Coroner Burgess, who investigated the case, as 33 Miller street.

Laughlin was 76 years old. He leaves a widow and six children at Dryden, where he was a prominent stockman and a member of the Episcopal Church.

MANY LETTERS FROM CHILDREN TO SANTA CLAUS

Those at the Review Office Turned Over to St. Nicholas Girls.

Below will be found a few samples of letters to Santa Claus, which have been received by The Review. There is a pathetic note to the letter of one little writer, who says he has four brothers and one sister. His father is very sick and cannot work—

Here is the first one—

Dear Santy—Will you fetch me a doll carriage and a doll, and the baby a rattle-box, papa a handkerchief and mamma a brooch. Good-bye.

Dear Santa Claus— Bring me a doll and a carpet sweeper. This request is from a little girl of course.

Another missive says—Please Santa Claus will you bring me a doll carriage and a doll, a set of dishes, and five cents worth of candy.

Dear Santa Claus— I have four brothers and one sister. My father is very sick and cannot work and we are looking forward for you coming. So good-night Daddy Xmas and God bless you.

These letters, with many others, have been turned over to the members of the St. Nicholas Girls' Club, who will see to it that the little ones receive a call from Santa Claus. There are still a few children who have not yet been arranged for and if there are any readers who desire to play St. Nicholas for a poor child, they are invited to telephone their name before Monday noon. This is the last call.

All you have to do to become a member is promise to give some little boy or girl a happy Christmas. You are going to be allowed to do it in your own way. All that you have to do is to send your name and address to The St. Nicholas Girl and you will receive the name of a little boy or girl whatever age you specify

Then it is up to you to go and see that little boy and find out just what will make it most happy. It may be a very little thing indeed but it will be JUST what the kiddie wants. If you feel that you can care for more than one let the St Nicholas Girl know.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor,—I had business today with the Court of Revision in seeing that my name was properly inserted on the voters' list. While there I was compelled to wait what seemed an unnecessarily long time while the legal representatives of two factions wrangled with each other and subjected the applicants to all manner of questions, some of which appeared to be anything but pertinent, thus wasting the time of the court and those who were anxious to do business with it. Who pays the piper?

JUDGMENT AGAINST COUNTY

In default of defence in the claim of the Department of Justice, against the County of Peterborough, judgment was entered to-day against the County for $3,515 and costs.

It is understood the judgment will be placed in the hands of the Sheriff, for execution of the same.

This claim as is generally known is in connection with the Buckhorn Bridge.

NIGHT SESSION WILL BE HELD FOR APPEALS

The hearing of applications to be placed on the voters' list is still going on in the City Council Chamber.

Up to about three o'clock this afternoon about fifty names had been added to the list. The work is necessarily rather slow. A session will be held to-night although it will take a considerable time yet before the hearing of appeals is completed.

An Italian made application this afternoon but his name was not allowed until Mr. O'Connell [illegible] himself that the applicant is a British subject. Mr. Miniocla was called as an interpreter and stated that the applicant's father was a naturalized citizen, but the son was born before he took out his naturalization papers.

Mrs. Fussee, east city, made application to have her three daughters placed on the list, but her request was not allowed.

Most men seem to regard marrying an heiress as a pleasant method of taking the gold cure.

The more men know, the less they believe.

Oshkigmong, Dec. 21— A very painful misfortune happened to Mrs. Ben. Taylor a few days ago while doing some work in the house. She was in the act of reaching overhead when the chair which she was standing on toppled over, precipitating her to the floor, resulting a fracture of a bone below her wrist. Dr. Blakeman attended her. Mrs. Taylor is doing as nicely as can be expected.

Mr. H. C. Buffam of Virgil, who is to take charge of the school here, made a flying visit to his new home. His duties will commence after the New Year.

Mr. Ed. Taylor, who has been visiting his parents, has returned to Langford.

A Lazy Liver

Upsets the Whole System. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Put Things Right Again.

His liver is to sluggish—his stomach bad.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

Instead of flowing into the bowels, to regulate them and aid digestion, the bile has been going all through the system, upsetting digestion, leaving the bowels constipated, and making the sufferer perfectly miserable. This is biliousness.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

Doctors prescribe Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills and they are known throughout the world as a proven cure for all digestive troubles. They are equally effective in strengthening weak kidneys and curing rheumatism.

HOCKEY PLAYERS PRACTICE TO-NIGHT

ttawa Collegians Play Here Monday Night---Frank Heffernan Played Great Hockey Against Stewartons

Ottawa, Dec. 21.—(Special) — The ttawa College hockey team leaves ere, Monday to play at Peterborough the same night. The team will lay in Hamilton Tuesday night, and hen go to Detroit for a couple of ames. Next they go to Cleveland or three games.

The Collegians will play in New ork the early part of January and eet Harvard in Boston on January th.

The long hoped for sheet of ice as at last appeared at the rink and ockey practices will commence toight with the intermediate and nior players called to work at 7 'clock. and the juniors at 8. The team to play against Ottawa ollege on Monday night will be deided after the workout to-night. The game will be called at 8.30.

Frank Heffernan, who may play for the Collegians, was going strong at Toronto last night, when Toronto R. and A. A. senior O. H. A. seven defeated Stewartons of the Capital City by 12—2. The Mail and Empire says:

Heffernan, the former Peterborough and Ottawa College player, soon got the eye of the gallery by his brilliant rushes, and was easily one of the stars of the game. For a big fellow, he has a wonderful burst of speed, and once he broke away he was never headed. His rushes did not do much damage early in the game, as the T. R. and A.A. forwards failed to come back with him, but later on they got working together. That he will be one of the star defence men in the senior O.H.A. this season is an assured fact, and his clean playing will earn him many friends.

ICK SHEEHY TO CAPTAIN OTTAWA COLLEGE TEAM

Ottawa, Dec. 21.—At a meeting of e members of the Ottawa University football team, the captaincy for e 1913 season was voted to none her than Dick Sheehy, the flashy lf-back of the garnet and grey urteen. The choice is generally nceded to be a most excellent one. Dick has been in the game for ur seasons and has just gone rough the best fall of his career, ving acquired the well-earned reputation of one of the most brilliant and heady back division men in the Intercollegiate. The new captain of the garnet and grey football fourteen hails from Peterborough, the home town of Frank Heffernan and Vernie Hayes. Sheehy is only nineteen years of age, being a first year arts man at the Sandy Hill hall of knowledge. He has yet three years to complete his university course. Dick bids fair to reach the height of his glory next fall.

EIGHT YEARS IN THE BIG SHOW

Ty Cobb was asked the other day by an enthusiast in his home town whether he thought he would build up a batting average like that of Hannes Wagner or Napoleon Lajoie. Tyrus said he hoped he would, but was doubtful about being able to do so.

"Ty" Cobb

The Georgia whirlwind has been in the major league eight years, all of which have been spent with the Detroit club. As everybody knows, Tyrus has been "going some" during this time, but he will have to keep it up and do even better than he has up to the present to beat out the old-timers.

FOURTH PLACE FOR 1913 TIGERS

"Tigers next year will not finish any better than fourth place, for I can't see how they have a chance to beat the Red Sox, the Senators or the Athletics," says Hughey Jennings. How different this is from the "we will win the pennant next year sure. We had a bad year last season but with just a fair break in the luck next season we will be so far ahead when October comes that you will need a telescope to locate us" talk. That is what we usually get when a manager is asked about next year's prospects.

Sporting Notes.

Of the fifty trotters which entered the 2:10 list in 1911 only five have improved their marks this season in the mile races over the light harness tracks.

The New South Wales and Victorian Rowing associations are endeavoring to induce an English eight oared crew to visit Australia next year to row at Henley on the Yarra, Melbourne, and on the famous Parramatta river.

A fine stadium is to be built for the College of the City of New York. It will have a circular track a fifth of a mile in length, a concrete grand stand with seats for 12,000 spectators and every modern convenience for training purposes.

EZRA'S HARD LUCK.

It Began With His Name and Ended on His Tombstone.

Tom McNeal of Topeka was talking to Abe Peters about luck, so Tom reports. Tom thought there was no such thing as luck, but Abe protested.

"Take the case of Ezra Boil," said Abe. "To begin with, think of his name. A name like that is hard enough luck to prove my contention but Ezra lived up to it. When he was a baby he fell into the horse trough and was almost drowned. Then he got hold of a can of concentrated lye and it took them four weeks to bring him round. He fell out of an apple tree when he was six and broke both arms and a leg, and just as he was hobbling round again he went on a watermelon stealing expedition with six other boys. The others got away but the dog caught Ezra and chewed him up until the farmer came along and he put on finishing touches with a harness trace. He fell in love when he was seventeen, spent all he had for buggy rides and candy for the red cheeked object of his adoration—and she shook him and married another. A mule kicked him and broke six ribs. He had a lot of hogs and they died of cholera on the identical day when hogs reached 9 cents a pound, live weight. He had a big crop of wheat and a hail storm came along and ruined it one hour after his hail insurance policy had lapsed. He got $500 to make a payment on his land, put in the bank and the bank busted.

"A cyclone wrecked his house and barn and crippled all his family except his mother-in-law, who escaped unhurt. He bought four gold bricks and took some counterfeit money in pay for two good horses.

"Then he died. When they were taking him to the cemetery the team pulling the hearse ran away going down hill and scattred the remains of Ezra along the side of the road.

"In the course of time his family marked his grave by an appropriate stone on which the stonecutter got the date of his birth wrong and misspelled his name in two places.

"And still you say there is no such thing as luck!"—Saturday Evening Post.

SHOOTING PAINS IN SIDE, ARMS, BACK

Prove the Presence of Rheumatic Virus, Which Is Cured Quickest by Nerviline—Rub It In.

Pains in the muscles, in the sides, the back, the neck, or the chest—they always carry with them great discomfort. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense. If allowed to continue they are dangerous. Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation and drives away pain as Nerviline. Nerviline does this because it penetrates so deeply. Nerviline is not only powerful, but soothing. By relieving congestion it cures pain. It does this always. It cannot fail because it is a true antidote for pain. You can scarcely find anybody that will not tell you wonderful things about the pain-curing power of Nerviline. Remember, that there is not an ache or pain that Nerviline will not cure immediately. Nerviline is an anchor of health in every household.

BUSY SCENE AT THE CHRISTMAS MARKET

The Christmas market to-day was away ahead of anything for several years. An immense crowd surged around the market hall and the police were compelled to clear aisles for the people to pass around.

Fowl of course, was the principal offering and the prices were fairly reasonable and within the reach of most pocket-books. Turkeys were very plentiful and a good turkey could be bought for $3.00. There were many higher priced, of course, although very few went over $3.50. Geese sold at easy prices. One woman had her prices for the latter graded to one cent, having one for sale at $1.89, and one right beside it at $1.90. Fully as many geese were bought up as their feathered rivals, the turkeys.

Chickens brought good prices and were plentifully disposed of.

The recent inquiry into the matter of forestalling, effectually prevented any attempts to buy up fowl before the regular hour of opening. Chief Thompson had officers around the market who kept a vigilant watch for any such attempts.

On the market square good potatoes could be purchased at $1 per bag.

Music and Drama

Fritzi Scheff, who is also Mrs. John Fox ,Jr., is this year starring in "The Love Wager," under the management of Joseph M. Gaites.

Miss Scheff has appeared in grand opera, light opera and musical comedy. Two years ago she was married to John Fox. Jr., the famous American novelist. She has starred under the management of Charles Dillingham and the Shuberts, and now Mr. Gaites has the distinct honor of having her in his list of attractions.

Miss Scheff's first husband was a little German baron. Her greatest hits were made in Victor Herbert operas.

She recently received an offer to appear in vaudeville for ten weeks at $3,000 a week, but declined because she wants to be a star in opera.

A steady increasing demand for fat actors is making itself manifest in the theatrical market, but the available supply is diminishing every day. For the part of "Little Jimmy" Wellington with the two companies playing "Excuse Me," for an important role in Rupert Hughes' new comedy, "What Ails You?" and for an equally important assignment in the cast of the new Hopwood-Luders fantasy, "Somewhere Else," Henry W. Savage requires players of girth and substance above the ordinary. The orders for "Excuse Me" and "What Ails You?" are being satisfactorily filled by Charles Everett Wright, Edward Begley and Sydney Greenstreet, respectively, but when Wright left the "Excuse Me" company to begin rehearsals for "Somewhere Else" there was a large vacancy.

Margaret Anglin is one of the very greatest contemporaneous emotional actresses. Miss Anglin made her first Broadway hit some years ago at the Empire Theatre in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," in which she did superb work. Later she appeared in "The Great Divide," "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie" and other plays. This year she started here season in "Egypt."

Blanche Ring is now touring the country in "The Wall Street Girl." She appeared on Broadway last season in this musical piece and, as usual, was a distinct hit. Miss Ring made "The Good Old Summer Time" famous when she sang it at the Herald Square Theatre, Broadway, a few years ago. She has had many big song successes since then. Among these was "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay." Miss Miss Ring came from Boston originally, but now, the whole country claims her.

George Ade is responsible for the great "Fables-in-Slang." Also, he he is the author of "The Sultan of Sulu," "Just Out of College," "Father and the Boys," and other American pieces. He is a newspaper correspondent, a trans-continental traveller, a 'round the world tourist, and amateur farmer. He comes from Indiana, which also boasts of James Whitcomb Riley and Booth Tarkington.

Mabel Taliaferro was this season in vaudeville in a sketch from her own pen entitled "The Return of Tori San." Miss Taliaferro first presented this playlet in New York and was then booked to appear in the largest cities out of town. She was a famous child actress ten years ago, and was later starred by her husband, Frederic Thompson, in a number of pieces, incuding "Polly of the Circus." Her sister is Edith Taliaferro, of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" company.

For "Somewhere Else," the musical fantasy by Avery Hopwood and Gustav Luders, which Henry W. Savage will stage in December, Hy Mayer has designed costumes of startling originality. They are bizarre, without being so extraordinarily so as to preclude their appearance on the street and the fashion experts in the employ of the costumers who will furnish the sartorial equipment of the production, declare they would not be the least surprised to see some of the "Somewhere Else" models being worn on Fifth Avenue by the devotees of extreme styles. To prevent such adaptation of the Mayer designs in advance of the New York premiere of the new piece, Mr. Savage has had the drawings copyrighted. For this purpose duplicates of six dozen designs—each sketch accompanied by a detailed description of the costume—have been sent to Washington.

George Bernard Shaw's greatest comedy "Fanny's First Play," which is being presented by William Collier's Comedy Theatre by Granville Barker's London company of players is still running in London. and has just reached its 600th performance in the English metropolis. It will soon attain its 100th performance here.

It looks just now as if George M Cohan would stay at his own own theatre, at Forty-third street and Broadway, New York, far into the new year. Mr. Cohan's comedy, "Broadway Jones," has been doing a land-office business, and there is every reason for thinking that Mr. Cohan will remain on the Big Street until the Spring zephyrs blow. Mother Cohan and Daddy Cohan are still in the cast and will remain there just as long as their talented son stars in this piece.

Harry Lauder is not only one of the highest salaried performers in the world, but he also is regarded as one of the most artistic in the sense that he so effectively and unerringly depicts the types he presents on the stage. Mr. Lauder is under contract to appear again in this country during the coming season at the head of his own touring company.

"Ready Money," the melodramatic farce by James Montgomery, now running at Maxine Elliott's Theatre. New York, seems to have caught the fancy of London theatre-goers. The play over there has been attracting large audiences. The role of the smooth counterfeiter, played in this country by Joseph Kilgour, is played in London by Alan Aynesworth, one of England's best known actors.

"THE CIRCUS GIRL"

Commencing Thursday, Dec. 26th-28th, the ever popular Joe Marks No A.1 Company will present his advanced Repertoire and Vaudeville Players headed by the clever actress, Miss Gracie Marks, who is supported by one of the best Repertoire Companies ever seen on the stage.

On Thursday night Mr. Marks will open his engagement with a very pleasing feature production, 'The Circus Girl,' a play that will give us an incite into the real circus life The story is in four acts. and if you wish to enjoy an evening of fun, see "The Circus Girl."

The play is not only a screamingly funny play with music, but thrilling with excitement and touches of pathos but it also has a beautiful story with a tear that glistens while you laugh again. It is a play for the old and young people taken from the book, "Polly of the Circus," and a very excellent attraction at popular prices. The play is staged by an excellent cast of players, and a high class line of vaudeville specialties.

For a hearty laugh and a delightful play, see "The Circus Girl," the opening play of the Marks Bros' No. A.1 Company, Joe Marks, manager and proprietor. Special matinee Saturday afternoon 2.30 p.m. Prices—Night 10 20, 30. Matinee, 10, 20.

TWENTY-TWO LIVES ARE LOST IN SHIP DISASTER AT SEA

Furness Liner, Bound From Halifax to St. John's Nfld., is Wrecked in Gale and Men go Ashore, But Are Unable to Scale Cliffs and Are Forcd Back to Wreck.

ONLY FIVE MEN WERE SAVED

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 23.—Capt. Barr and 21 of the 27 members of the crew of the Furness Line steamer Florence, from Halifax, N.S., for St. John's, lost their lives in the wreck of the vessel on the ledges west of St. Shotts' during a northwest gale last Friday. Five exhausted survivors, who reached land in a boat, brought the news to Trepassey last night.

The steamer carried no passengers.

Capt. Barr of the steamer and all his men reached shore after the vessel struck, but the lofty, inaccessible cliffs of St. Shotts prevented their escape. The big tide, backed up by the southwest gale, made it impossible to remain there, and all hands were obliged to put back to the ship, which was pounding heavily.

Capt. Barr felt confident that the wind would go down, but Second Mate J. Hedley volunteered to take four men in one of the ship's boats and seek a more favorable landing place further along the coast. In the heavy seas then running the captain was unwilling to risk more lives, and gave his consent to the second mate's expedition with reluctance.

With great difficulty Hedley piloted his small boat along the coast until he saw a break in the rugged line of cliffs. Pointing the nose of the boat directly into the surf he avoided the outlying rocks and on the crest of a great breaker ran his craft in without being upset. Tumbling out hastily to avoid being sucked back by the undertow, the mate and his four men dragged their boat up the beach out of reach of the sea and made their way back along the cliff to where their steamer lay. The wind and sea in the meantime had increased. The combers broke continually over the decks of the vessel, which was grinding heavily on the jagged rocks.

Hedley and his men searched in vain for some path by which the cliff might be scaled or the crew of the Florence helped. The coast in that vicinity was uninhabited. The few fishermen's huts were deserted for the winter and Hedley had to take refuge for the night in one of these abandoned shacks. At daybreak Saturday Hedley found that the wind had been steadily increasing. Hurrying back to the point off which the Florence lay, he could see no sign of the steamer. Considerable of her cargo of lumber was floating along the shore, but no boats were visible.

After the five survivors had made a long but fruitless search along the shore for some trace of their shipmates they started for St. Shotts, the nearest inhabited place, several miles distant. Two of them were so exhausted from the cold and exposure that they had to be assisted by their comrades. These two were left at St. Shotts to recuperate, while the others pushed on to Trepassey, whence they sent word of the disaster to this city. They are not expected to arrive here before the middle of the week.

Besides Mate Hedley, the survivors are: Seamen W. Wight, C. Malmquist, E. Taylor and T. Snedding.

The steamer Florence was built in Sunderland, England, in 1889. She was 283.5 feet long, 40.2 beam, with a depth of 26.9 feet.

ESCAPES THE ROPE

Heck Ellis Will Spend Remainder of Days in Prison.

LINDSAY, Dec. 23.—The sentence of death passed upon Arthur A. Ellis here at the fall assizes, for the murder of Lew Porter, in the lonely woods of the country back of Kinmount, Ont., was reduced by the Minister of Justice to life imprisonment. The exercise of executive clemency followed upon a petition signed by hundreds of the farmers and trappers of the locality, among whom were several members of the township council. Ellis was to have been hanged here Jan. 7.

Ellis was awakened from his slumbers in the jail here to be told of the commutation of his sentence. He showed little emotion or surprise, but bore himself stoically, as he has done on all occasions save for a brief breakdown after his sentence.

Ellis is the man who shot down Lew Porter, his brother-in-law, just as dusk was falling in the northern woods last March. His defence was that he had been in mortal dread of Porter, whom he said had fired upon him first. The trial produced many picturesque and dramatic incidents, and the whole countryside was wrought to the highest pitch of excitement both at the time of the killing and the trial.

FLEW OVER THE MEDITERRANEAN

Aviator Garros Completes His Long Flight.

ROME, Dec. 23.—Roland G. Garros, the French aviator, completed yesterday his long flight from Tunis, Africa. Garros, after a splendid flight from Tunis on Dec. 18, landed at Trapani, Sicily, a distance of about 160 miles, over the Mediterranean Sea. He left Trapani Saturday and flew to the Italian mainland. Yesterday he continued his flight, stopping at Naples for lunch.

Steamer's Boat Found.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 23.—A lifeboat from the missing freight steamer Morien drifted ashore Saturday near Placentia, slightly damaged and bearing evidence of having been launched from the wreck. The Morien has not been reported since she left Louisburg, C.B., Nov. 16, for Placentia. It is supposed that she struck a reef and that the crew took to the boats, all hands perishing. Captain Burchell was in command of the vessel. The Morien was built in 1909, and was of 493 net tonnage.

Portuguese Cabinet To Quit.

LISBON, Dec. 23.—The Portuguese Premier, Dr. Duarte Leite, on his return from Oporto, will hand to the President of the republic the resignation of the Cabinet.

The crisis, which has been latent for some time past, is due to the Democratic party's disagreement with the procedure of the Government.

BRANTFORD OFFICERS HAVE HARD TUSSLE WITH ROWDIES

The Station is Besieged as Result of Arrest of a Bad [illegible] Mob of Hoodlums Assaul Constables and Are Charged With Batons.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 23.—A turbulent mob attacked the police station here on Saturday night in a riot which lasted two hours and finally culminated in the release on bail of Charles Walling, an ex-bartender, alleged to have been one of the ringleaders of the riot. The trouble was precipitated when Sanford Maracle, a bad Indian, was arrested, although Constables Stewart and Stanley were nearly wrestled into the canal by the Indian and the lawless element which surrounded the officers.

A crowd of several hundred followed the party to the police station, where the police later came out and charged with batons in an effort to effect a break-up. It was during this melee that Walling was arrested, and the crowd later demanded his release.

Walling finally got out at 12.30 a.m. after revolvers had been fired and the police station battered in. Several of the officers had narrow escapes from missiles hurled through the windows. Eighteen prisoners, chiefly disorderlies, were in the lock-up wondering if the mob would reach the iron doors between them and freedom.

The police appealed to the firemen to turn the water on the mob, but Mayor Hartman refused to give his consent to this procedure.

Fire Chief Lewis and Mayor Hartman appeared on the scene. Both addressed the crowd, the mayor stating that he did not want to find it necessary to read the Riot Act.

The episode, it is believed, will strengthen the police commissioners in their contention that more men are required for the city.

The department in general has recently been subjected to attacks by a local pamphlet issued weekly, and this has seemingly had the effect of arousing the passion of the lawless element against the force. Aldermanic charges of police extravagance amongst the police board have not helped matters any.

PRESIDENTS ARE INDICTED

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Dec. 23 — President Charles S. Mellen, of the New York New Haven and Hartford Railway, E. J. Chamberlain, President of the Grand Trunk Board of Directors, were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury here, this afternoon, charged with violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, in connection with an alleged monopoly between the two roads. The indictment avers that they have been engaged in an unlawful combination since August 3rd, last to prevent the construction and completion of certain extensions of the Grand Trunk in New England.

NEW PORT FOR SERVIA

Is to Get Outlet on Adriatic Says Poincare.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The crisis of the peace conference will be reached at the session to-day. If the Turks decide to waive their demand for the revictualing of Adrianople the allies will present their terms for peace. The conference can then proceed to the discussion of its real business.

The opening of another chapter of warfare is a step which the allies do not invite, but for which they profess to be fully prepared. While suspicion exists that the Turks have been sparring to gain time since the conference assembled ten days ago, the consensus of opinion is that the Turkish Government will recognize the situation and conclude peace, and that the political situation in Constantinople dicts es that course. The advice which the principal powers have been giving to Turkey is in the direction of peace.

The Bulgarians declare that if the Turks are not ready to come to terms and if none of the powers offers acceptable mediation, the allies are ready to resume the war immediately with fresh ardor, greater vigor and a deeper feeling that they will achieve ultimate victory, because, as they themselves express it, they "are fighting not only for the independence of the Balkans, but for western civilization against the traditional eastern enemy."

Servia's Port.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Premier Poincare, in the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday, explained that the port on the Adriatic to be allowed Servia will be free and neutral. It is to be connected with Servia by an international railway under the control of the powers, and Servia is to have liberty to transport all merchandise, including munitions of war. She will pay no customs duties. He continued: "The European powers wish to assure to Servia certain indispensable guarantees so that she may live and breathe."

Premier Poincare expressed satisfaction with the agreement over the Adriatic outlet for Servia, expressing the opinion that it "eliminates one of the principal causes for European discord."

There was, he said, no ground for the fears on the part of some Frenchmen that England at times pursued an isolated policy which did not conform with the policy of France. He said: "England acted openly and loyally."

To Hold Adrianople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 23.—The Cabinet yesterday discussed the peace negotiations and forwarded fresh instructions by wire to the delegates at London. It is believed in some quarters that Turkey is about to invoke the good offices of the powers to promote an agreement.

The military feeling continues strongly in favor of reopening hostilities rather than surrender Adrianople. Reinforcements arrive almost daily from Syria and Kurdestan. Several important orders for guns and war stores have been placed abroad.

The military powers favor remaining on the defensive during the winter and assuming the offensive in the spring. While this military spirit undoubtedly endangers the stability of the Cabinet, it is not shared by the sober-minded citizens, who are most anxious for the conclusion of peace.

Consul Incident Is Closed.

VIENNA, Dec. 23.—A despatch from Belgrade says that the Servian Premier, M. Pachitch, Saturday afternoon visited the Austrian Minister on his own initiative and expressed the sincere regret of the Servian Government at the blunders made by individual military officers in the affair at Prisrend, in which Consul Procheska figured.

This announcement may be regarded as satisfactorily closing the incident.

Christmas has now reached the stage where she wishes it were all over.

NEW DUTIES ASSUMED BY ARCHBISHOP McNEIL

Canadian Catholics Must be Less Parochial and More National in Their Sympathies He Declares in Inaugural Address.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—His grace, the new Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto, Most Rev. Neil McNeil, was installed with all due ceremony in his high office at St. Michael's Cathedral yesterday morning, when high mass was celebrated by a prince of the church, Mgr. Stagni, the papal ablegate to Canada. Advent being a penitential season, there was not quite so elaborate a ceremonial as might otherwise have been the case, but the installation was impressive and dignified. Among the clergy present and participating, were the vicar-general, Mgr. McCann; Bishop Dowling, Hamilton; and Bishop Fallon, London.

His grace in his address to the gathering said it was of interest that within the last two years clergy had been moved from Saskatchewan east, from Prince Edward Island to Nova Scotia, from Nova Scotia to New Brunswick, a bishop from New Brunswick to British Columbia and one from British Columbia to Toronto. It was a call to Catholics to enlarge their minds and hearts and to think of lines beyond parishes or dioceses.

"It may well be that the Catholics of Canada need to be better acquainted with one another," said his grace, and he spoke of the gathering of the nations in Canada. In fifty or seventy-five years the Dominion would be one of the powers of the world, and then they would look back to the first decade of the twentieth century, to these first days of transition in the growing pains of Canada. What place would the Catholic Church have occupied in forming the nation and welding it together? By its innate power it would necessarily have a large part, and it was not possible that that power would be without effect in the foundation of the nation unless they made it seem to appear they were innately selfish looking after local or small interests. Instead of that they must have the charity, the greatest of the true virtues, by the practice of which they might enter in the mind of the Lord.

TWO HUNDRED COAL MINERS TRAPPED

Canadian Press Despatch.

Tokio, Dec. 23— Over two hundred Japanese coal miners were entombed and are probably dead as the result of a terrible explosion which occurred in Ubari colliery, in Sapporo, on the Island of Hokkaido to-day. Of the two hundred and more men working in the galleries of the pit at the time, only three were brought to the surface alive, and officials fear all the rest perished.

VALENTIA FARMER WENT THROUGH ICE TO DEATH

Took Short Cut on His Way Home From Lindsay—Help Came Too Late.

LINDSAY, Dec. 23.—John Scott, a farmer living near Valentia, eight miles from Lindsay, fell through the ice on the Scugog River Saturday night and was drowned. Scott was on his way home from Lindsay, and decided to take a short cut across the river. The ice gave way and Scott called lustily for help.

Two farmers came to his assistance with a plank. This being insufficient, they ran to a nearby house and secured a rope. Just as the rope was within grasping distance, the exhausted man sank. Yesterday morning Scott's body was recovered by a number of Lindsay firemen and removed to the morgue.

Scott was a brother of Joshua Scott, living at Lindsay.

Almost Jumps Bridge.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—Dr. G. L. Davidson, the well-known heart expert, narrowly escaped death Saturday morning when his electric runabout skidded on the Huntley street bridge over the Rosedale ravine, dashed into the side and tore one hundred feet of railing loose. The car came to rest in a precarious position, being half on the bridge and half hanging over a fifty-foot drop. It was just evenly balanced. The difference of half a foot would have caused the fall.

BUBONIC PLAGUE BREAKS OUT

Dime Novels Crusade In Germany.

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—The proposed law against dime novels and sensational literature has been received with favor by the majority of the federated states of Germany. The measure will provide heavy penalty for the display and sale of this kind of literature, and for the confiscation of all copies. The existing legislation in Germany affects only those publications which are offensive morally and religiously.

BOMB THROWN AT THE VICEROY OF INDIA AS HE WAS ENTERING DELHI

Lord Hardinge Escaped with Slight Injury but Attendant was Killed—Was Entering the New Capital in State—Outlets of City Placed Under Guard

Canadian Press Despatch.

Delhi, India, Dec. 23. — Baron Hardinge Viceroy of India, was wounded and an attendant killed by a bomb hurled at him from a housetop as he was entering the new capitol in state to-day. Bomb struck the "howdah" or basket on the Viceroy's elephant instantly killing the attendant and wounding Baron Hardinge. The Viceroy was rushed to an hospital.

Lady Hardinge was also riding in the howdah but escaped injury. Surgeons making examination of Lord Hardinge's injury at the hospital found it was only a slight wound on the shoulder.

Proceedings were only halted to take the Viceroy to the hospital and Lady Hardinge to the Vice-Regal residence.

Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson and financial members of the Council of the Governor-General of India, stepped into the breach and the ceremonies were continued.

The attendant killed was a parasol bearer. The driver of the elephant was also wounded in eight places from pieces of the bomb, which was a powerful one.

While the procession proceeded, police surrounded the house from which the bomb was thrown and made several arrests. All outlets from the city have also been placed under strict guard.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC PRICES ARE LOWER

Comparative Figures Showing What the Hydro is Doing in Hamilton as a Competitor of the Cataract Power Co.--House Lighting is Cheaper

Ald Johnston, chairman of the Civic Power Committee, has received some interesting figures from Mr. W. H. Childs, of the Hydro department of the city of Hamilton. The statement is a comparitive one, showing the charges made by the Cataract Power Company before the introduction of the municipal lighting plant. In some cases the commission's charges are now less than a quarter what the company charged. Here are some of the figures:

McLaughlin Carriage Company, West King Street, light installation, 790 watts. Cataract Power Company $2.16; Hydro, 79 cents. Power for elevator, 7 1-2 horse-power, Cataract Power Company's minimum charge, $9.80; Hydro's for July $3.53.

W. W. Currier, residence, Wentworth Street south; Cataract account for March, $3,09; Hydro price $1.53.

Dr. Theo. Coleman, 135 East Main Street, Cataract Company's account for 66 kwh for September 1911, $5 net; Hydro's account for 83 kwh for September 1912, $2.89. Note the increase in consumption (almost 25 p.c.) and the decrease in the cost.

J. R Bertram, jeweller, 629 East Barton street, installation two 100 watts and two 60 watts. Cataract's account for August $3.23; Hydro's flat rate $1.35.

F. D. Morden, dealer in electrical fixtures, John Street. Cataract's minimum charge per month $10. Hydro's price would have been as follows: June $3.30, July $2.79, August $2.95, September $4.81.

B. C. Arnedt, residence, 547 Main Street East. Cataract's charge for 20 kwh for March was $1.76; now has Hydro at flat rate for $1.11.

J. H. Barnard, residence, 476 King William Street. Paid Cataract $1.70 for April; Hydro price 90 cents for amount used. Paid Cataract for February $1.99; Hydro's rate $1.04.

Diamond Flint Glass Company, Trolley Street, 125 horse power. Paid Cataract for September 1911, $328; paid Hydro September 1912, $173.54. Paid Cataract October 1911, $368; Hydro's charge October 1912, $173.54.

B. C. Arnedt, tailor, King Street east, half horse power motor. Cataract's price per month $4.17. He now pays Hydro $2.58 per month.

Geo. Metcalf, merchant, McNab Street. Paid Cataract for August lighting $1.28; Hydro price for same current, 48 cents.

Canada Preserving Company, Pine Street, paid Cataract Company for February $3.61; Hydro price $2.20.

Ald. Johnston, in most of these cases, has been supplied with the Cataract receipts, and these will be shown to those interested, at the ward meetings to be held on Thursday and Friday night.

IMPERIAL BOND WOULD SUFFER

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Melbourne Argus, commenting on Bonar Law's proposal of a colonial conference, declares his new turn in tariff reform agitation may produce dangerous results, not only to Unionists, but also the Empire. The Imperial bond will be strained to the breaking point if the people of the United Kingdom are led to believe they are being taxed for the emergency of the dominions. By their conduct tariff reformers are putting an intolerable strain on the allegiance of the conservative elements of their own party. The promised restriction on foodstuffs is only beginning. In Australia, Canada and the United States, the system began with comparatively low duties, which were constantly raised by the demands of protected interests. The most dangerous proposal put forward by Law is that of submitting the matter to a colonial conference.

HICKEY ESCAPES THE CHAIR

But Goes to Prison For Not Less Than 20 Years.

Canadian Press Despatch

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 23— J. Frank Hickey, convicted of murder in the second degree, for the killing of the lad Joseph Josephs, was this morning sentenced to the State's Prison at Auburn for an intermediate term, the minimum of which is twenty years and the maximum life.

BUFFALO, Dec. 23.—J. Frank Hickey was Saturday found guilty of murder in the second degree in having strangled to death Joseph Josephs, a seven-year-old Lackawanna boy on Oct. 12, 1911. The jury was out twenty-six hours.

The jury, it is said, stood ten for conviction for second degree murder, one for insanity and one for acquittal.

Hickey is well pleased with the outcome. "I think the verdict is all right," he said. "I don't think that I should have been found guilty in the first degree, for I was not responsible."

Public indignation at the outcome of the case is intense and in legal proceedings the possibility of having Hickey tried for the murder of the Kruck boy is being discussed.

REBELS ARE MOBILIZING

Insurrectos Increasing in Strength in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 23.—A colony of American negroes, located twenty miles west of Durango, is reported to have been attacked by a band of rebels. Two of the defenders, according to the report were wounded, and a number of women mistreated. The rebels sacked the place.

Mobilization of rebels in the State of Morelos continues, but according to arrivals here, the centre of greatest activity on the part of the revolutionaries is along the Morelos state line. Lt.-Col. Riveroll, the federal commander, is conducting a campaign of extermination in that district in which no prisoners are taken and all wounded are shot to death on the field.

The railroad stations at Pastor, Atencingo and Cuauthxco, near the Pueblo-Morelos state line, have been burned by the rebels.

Federals Slaughtered.

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 23.—Refugee federal soldiers arrived yesterday at Juarez to report that the 250 federal irregulars garrisoned at Ascension, practically were annihilated Wednesday when rebels attacked the town, about 75 miles southwest of Juarez.

The attack was made shortly after midnight, and fighting continued only for a few hours.

A train bearing 600 regular cavalry of the seventh regiment arrived last night at Juarez from Chihuahua, and will go early today against the rebel mobilization.

HER BEST CHRISTMAS

COME on along, Sandy; I'll treat to dinner at the Metropolitan!"

Sandy, a tall girl who didn't look her thirty years, was busy glancing over a typewritten sheet and for a moment did not answer. Bob stood watching her, taking in the delicate lines of her face and the beauty of the "sandy" hair, which, when he was alone and forgot that Sandy was a newspaper woman and his "pal," he was pleased to call golden.

"Cut that out, Sandy. You'll be back. I have a check and it's Christmas Eve. I'm for a treat. I say—did you hear me ask you to go to the Metropolitan? You take it as calmly as if I had asked you to go around to Otto's lunch counter. Deuce take it! Why can't you be a little enthusiastic?"

Slowly the girl raised her head. More than a sheet of copy had been holding her attention. But she caught Bob's frown and immediately the mother instinct in her was aroused. She broke into her usual comrade laugh.

"All right, Bob. The invitation overwhelmed me. The Metropolitan? But I couldn't Bobby dear. My shirtwaist is soiled and you yourself said there was a hole in my beautiful brown coat."

"Oh, come along! I was only jokin You'd outshine all the women at the Metropolitan if you went there in a khaki suit. I wish you had a little more vanity. Women are awfully tame when they haven't."

"Come, now, you know I'm vain of the fact that I haven't any vanity. Don't call me tame. I won't go to the Metropolitan with you if you do. Somehow I feel——"

"Fiddlesticks! Get on your hat. I'm going. The idea of a newspaper woman's feeling! Cut it out!"

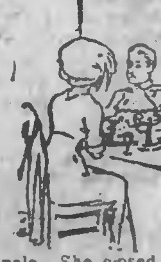
The Metropolitan was filled with the "vulgar rich" in holiday attire; but Sandy and Bob were happy in true Bohemian style as they sat at their little table chatting and joking like two boys. Sandy never would play the woman—that was the only objection Bob had to her.

"I say, Sandy, I bet you've no plans for to-morrow and I'm coming to take you out. I've a great plan. Put on that brown silk and play you're a woman for once."

"Yes, a sweet, young, clinging feminine creature with my heart on my sleeve! 'Twill be charming, of course. Do you really think I could play the part?"

"Stop joking, Sandy. You never will take me seriously. You will go, won't you?"

"I'd like to please you, Bobby, but I really must be home to-morrow. I have work that must be done and besides I have a feeling that I ought not to go."



"Feeling be darned! If you had fewer 'feelings' and more feelings for a poor fellow—What's the matter, Sandy?"

The girl had cast a glance over the room and had grown suddenly pale. She closed her eyes for a moment. Bob had caught the pallor.

"Oh, nothing. I had a little twinge of that old neuralgia."

Thus the chasm was bridged and the dinner ended happily. If anything, Sandy was gayer than usual.

Four o'clock the next day Sandy's heart was beating loud. Her "studio," as she was pleased to call it, wore it's very best attire. Even the inevitable typewriter was out of sight.

She was older, older by six years, than when he had last seen her, but happiness made her wondrously beautiful. Bobby would have lost his wits. If he should not come! But he would come. If he should come and the dream could not be realized! But he would not come unless he could.

A rap at the door!

"Miss, there's a shentlemen a askin' for ye. Should I send him in?"

"Yes, Mary." The tones were perfectly calm. Six years of patient waiting had not been without their power.

"Margaret!"

"John!"

"I knew you would come. I saw you last evening. I knew you would find me. Oh, John, I am so happy!" She rested her head on his shoulder to hide the tears.

"My Margaret, now and forever!"

"And Constance?"

"Constance is gone—and she wished it to be."

A long silence.

"Sit down, John. There is your chair. How often have I pictured you in it. Let me think. Let me get my breath. I knew you would come. I wonder what Bobby will say! He thinks I have no heart. But—it was to be."—New York Mail.

American Manners.

Frederick Townsend Martin, at a dinner in New York, criticized American manners wittily.

"Kipling," he said, "declares truly that a gentleman has manner, while a would-be gentleman has manners. We should remember that. We lay too much stress on such details as taking off our hats when we go up in the elevator with a scrubwoman.

"In fact, in everything, we seem to search too uneasily for the correct, the modish, course. A society editor told me the other day that he had just got a letter from a young woman that ran:

"'Dear Editor—Please state who should keep up the instalments on the ring when the engagement is broken off.'"

Members of the "outside" civil service of Canada are being paid their salaries up to the end of the year. This is to facilitate enjoyment of the Christmas season.

Major H. J. Snelgrove, a widely-known fraternal society official, formerly of Collingwood and Cobourg, died at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, from heart disease.

A film caught fire during a cinematograph performance last night at Baraquet, near Menin, Belgium. Many persons were killed or injured. Ten bodies have been recovered.

Brakeman Woodland was killed and Engineer Ferguson badly scalded when an eastbound freight crushed into a standing freight in front of a gravel station near Fort William.

Militant suffragettes made an extensive raid last night on the pillar letter boxes in London. They employed black and red fluids in an endeavor to obliterate the addresses on the heavy Christmas mail.

Child Has Strange Disease.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 23.—"Santa Claus is going to bring me a dollie," said little Muriel O'Brien as she awoke in her cot at the Hotel Dieu after being asleep for two days.

The child was taken to the hospital Sunday and her case has attracted a great deal of attention among the doctors. At intervals she becomes unconscious and no reason can be determined by the doctors. She suffers no pain.

A WINTER FANCY.

White Velours Hats Are Very Popular.

STUNNING MODEL IN BLACK AND WHITE.

The hat manufacturers know well the popularity of these pretty white velours models, and they are bringing them out by the scores for winter selling.

This white velours hat is faced with black velvet and trimmed with black and white braid used in a most effective fashion. With the hat is shown the "great-grandfather's" stock which is just now the craze with tailored suits.

EMERGENCY CUPBOARDS.

The Unique Contrivance of a Housewife Who Mends For Herself.

"You always seem to have anything handy," I said as Eleanor brought me a button just the size of the one which had unexpectedly vanished from my glove.

"My emergency cupboard," she replied, smiling, then, seeing my questioning glance, added: "Haven't I told you about it? It is rather a good idea, I think, and saves me no end of bother."

"Tell me about it now. What does it mean? It is difficult to start, I suppose?"

Eleanor shook her head.

"Quite simple. It is just an ordinary cupboard which would otherwise be given over to lumber. Not at all a big affair, for there are only four shelves in it."

"And you keep in it"—

"Anything and everything which is likely to be wanted in a hurry," Eleanor replied promptly. "One shelf is a sort of needlework place, for on it are all sorts of buttons, various colored cottons, tapes, pins and so on. Then if I want to mend anything in a hurry or persons come to grief when they are here the repairing materials are ready at hand.

"Another shelf I call my hospital. There I keep bandages, cotton wool, ointment, embrocation and other things which usually can never be found quickly enough when wanted, even in the best regulated households."

"And then?"

"Oh, the other two shelves are for emergency visitors. On the one I keep a dainty tray with a cloth on it, spread with an afternoon tea set, biscuit barrel and so on. Having no maid, it used often to be a bother to leave my guests while I got tea. Now I have only to lift out my tray, add a plate of bread and butter and make the tea, and it is ready."

"And the other visitors' shelf?" I queried.

"That is the one at which John always laughs," Eleanor said. "But it has been very useful more than once for all that," she added. "On the fourth shelf I keep all sorts of tinned and potted foods—soups, meat, vegetables, fruit. It is only a matter of half a dozen jars and tins altogether, but with them at hand I never fear if an unexpected lot of people come to dinner when we are intending to dine on scraps. Twenty minutes with my emergency cupboard give me a delightful meal."

Passing of Parlor.

Another sign of the times is the passing of the parlor and the making of the best room in the house the living room. Time was when the parlor was like a new suit of clothes, only to be used on special occasions. It was usually furnished with uncomfortable chairs that were covered up during the week and used on Sunday.

Times have changed, however, and people are furnishing living rooms instead of parlors. Here we find the piano and big, comfortable chairs that are ready for business all the time. Some of the big houses have the drawing room, but in the average home the living room has taken the place of the parlor. It is only another sign that people are realizing the necessity of having a house furnished in real homelike fashion.

The Revival of Combs.

The latest fashion notes from Paris say that elaborate combs will be worn again the coming season. The fan shape is better suited for those of riper years.

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

Clever Poaching in France.

Poaching in France is scientifically organized by regular bands of poachers, who set out at night by motorcar with highly specialized apparatus, afterward hurrying back to Paris, their bags hidden away, to place the game on the market. Some of the poachers have immense nets made of fine silk mesh supported on long poles. Ten men are required to manipulate the nets, eight to hold the poles and two to beat the game. The poachers place their game on the central market through receivers in different parts of the country, smuggling it through the octroi (city customs) concealed in motorcars beneath cushions and in tire cases or in commercial travelers' sample boxes with double bottoms.

Did You Ever Consider

How much your earning ability represents? What is your income? Is it $1,200, $3,000 or $5,000 per year? How much capital at 6 per cent. interest would it require in order to equal your present income? $50,000 at 6 per cent. interest equals $3,000 per year.

Your earning capacity is your family's capital. How long would it take to accumulate a sum which, at interest, would provide sufficient income, in the event of your death, to support your house and educate your children?

You, no doubt, believe that if you do not die you will be able to create an estate. Statistics show that the majority of people die leaving nothing. Are you positively sure that you will live to create this estate?

Life is uncertain—men apparently in the best of health die suddenly. In order to make provision in the event of your death the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will, by your depositing a comparatively small amount each year for a definite number of years, pay to your wife or child, or estate, immediately upon receipt of proofs of death, a certain amount of money. This offers you the means of creating an immediate estate in the event of your death.

The two illustrations herewith will show the benefits of a policy of Life Assurance as issued by this Company.

POLICY No. 263187
LIFE R. P. 20
Issued October 10th, 1911. Assured died June 20th, 1912. Annual Premium $113.00
Sum Assured - - - $5,000.00
Premium Paid - - - 113.00
Return over Cost $4,887.00
The Assured's Expectation was 38 years 9 months, but he lived only 8 months.
Consider the SMALL payment to the Company and the LARGE amount the Company paid to the Beneficiary

THE FOLLOWING IS AN ACTUAL RESULT of a matured policy on the life of a resident of Montreal—
POLICY No. 31602
ENDOWMENT 20 R. D. 20
Issued 1891. Matured 1911. Age 25. Amount $2,500. Annual Premium $110.15
Cash received at the end of 20 years - - - $3,079.95
Total Payments to the Coy. 2,203.00
Return over Cost $876.95
Which means the return to the assured of every premium paid to the Company with over 3 per cent. compound interest.

MONDAY, DEC. 23, 1912,

THE BANK ACT REVISION

The new Bank Act will follow lines generally advocated throughout Canada by sensible people for making better provision for publicity and security. Additional safeguards in connection with the organization of new banks, with special provisions protecting the interests of subscribers in cases where they fail to launch the bank effectually, will be a special feature of the revision. The power of issuing notes against gold specially deposited as security will be a valuable addition. In addition to this, bank [illegible] will be more carefully super[illegible] and the consent of the Minister of Finance must be obtained before an agreement can be entered into between banks for amalgamation or purchase.

The new Minister of Finance, who has had a very thorough training in Toronto financial circles, will undoubtedly prove himself to be a wise choice, reflecting great credit upon Mr. Borden's foresight in taking a practical financier. The Bank Act revision will be a notable one, since the strong tendency in Canada toward the centralisation of money power may soon develop into a real evil unless it is checked by wise legislation.

The banking system of Canada has its critics, but it undoubtedly offers a splendid contrast to the American system of single banks national and local. There has been little criticism of Canadian banks yet for the denial of reasonable accommodation to manufacturers and business men. As a rule the small man has not been frozen out entirely. But with the growth of the money power, or a clique of financial wizards in Toronto and Montreal, using bank funds for speculative work, and to advance projects of their own, there may come a time of shortage and tight money for the ordinary small borrower. All of these things must be guarded against if the people of Canada would get the utmost of service out of the big institutions which form so essential a part of the public business system. Mr. White has been referred to as the representative of the big interests, but he has denied that he is under obligation to anyone, and has frequently asserted that his sole aim is the good of the people generally. This is as it should be. Canada wants a Finance Minister every time who will protect the people against the selfishness and aggressions of the financial powers that be.

FIRE LOSSES

The movement by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and other business organizations, to have founded in Canada a National Fire Prevention Association, is one that should be welcomed by all business men. There is now no centrally directed or organized effort to educate the people upon taking precautions against fire, nor of constructing buildings of material that is fireproof. Into the question of fire protection enter the questions of building by-laws, the supply of automatic sprinklers, the inspection of buildings by fire prevention experts the question of civil water supply, and other matters. All of these need investigation and acting upon by the central association, that some positive and aggressive effort may be put forth by someone directly interested in the broad aspects of the matter.

The figures presented by F. H. Wentworth to Montreal and Toronto business men, regarding fire losses in the United States and Canada are astounding. They are not to be measured in cold statistics. The annual loss in the United States through the burning of material and buildings is $200,000,000, and the loss in Canada is proportionately greater. It amounts to $500 per minute. The record of the average fire losses in the United States and two or three European countries is:

	Average Fire Loss Per Annum.	Per Capita
Canada...	$ 23,000,000,000	$3.97
United States...	245,000,000	3.00
Germany...	30,000,000	.50
Austria...	7,000	.29
France...	12,000,000	.20

The result of all this, as applied to this continent, is that every business man and insurer of property is paying for the tremendous losses that occur yearly. If there were less careless and wasteful methods in use on this continent, the insurance rates would not be so high. So the effort of the Manufacturers' Association and kindred bodies to commence a campaign to put a stop to fire losses to some degree ought to have cordial co-operation and sympathy everywhere.

BITTER LIBERAL NEWSPAPERS

The Halifax Chronicle is the chief Liberal organ in Nova Scotia and it is a bitter Laurier partisan if there ever was one. It argues against the idea of giving Britain any emergency aid, any contribution now to help prepare for the day of trial, on the ground that "we fail to see exactly what respect the present generations of Canadians are under even moral obligation to the present genertaion of Englishmen." So Canada must build a separate Canadian navy, because Canada "owes nothing to England," eh. This is a splendid brand of loyal Liberal talk, isn't it? We do not question the loyalty of the Liberals in general. They are quite as anxious that Canada shall do what is its bounden duty as are the Conservatives. It is the Laurier politicians, the so-called leaders of public opinion, who are making the wrong guess. The drift of public opinion in Canada, and we think in Peterborough, is directly in favor of Canada giving three Dreadnoughts to the British navy. That addition to the central strength of the Empire's defences, is a protection to Canada as much as to the other dominions. It fulfills in some measure our duty to the Empire of which we now form so important a part.

To say that the giving of Dreadnoughts to Britain implies any sense of inferiority by Canada is utterly to mistake the whole status of imperial co-operation. Canada does her part in giving three Super-Dreadnoughts because she feels herself that she ought to do something for the "common defence of the Empire," not reserving her efforts to the creation alone of a separate Canadian navy, with all its delay and attendant difficulty. Canada wants to give immediate and effective aid, and that is what the Borden naval policy does. The permanent naval policy will come in time, after mature deliberation upon matters of imperial co-operation. The Hamilton Herald sums up the matter correctly when it states that it cannot conceive of any person or newspaper advocating the establishment alone of a Canadian navy without that newspaper or person being liable for to a charge of haboring separatist sentiment. The first and most effective way Canada can help the Empire in this its real emergency is to do as the Admiralty said, "give the biggest and strongest ships of war that science can build or money supply." There is no getting away from the strength of Mr. Borden's program.

EDITORIAL NOTES

You won't feel a bit poorer after Christmas for having made a small contribution [illegible] the poor of the city. You will have a brighter and happier Christmas by the knowledge that you have done your share to alleviate the suffering that does prevail despite the fact that you may not understand how it can in a land of such opportunities. Misfortune may come to you some day; it is liable to come to all of us.

The highest prices for farm produce prevail at seasons when such merchandise is scarcest. These seasons generally occur when the roads are in the poorest condition. Therefore, those localities having roads which are always passable reap the benefit of marketing their produce when the best prices prevail— From Farm Improvements.

New year will be an important one in the history of Peterborough, and strong men are needed in the City Council. Will a few more men with good business training, step into the municipal arena

NOT VERY FEROCIOUS

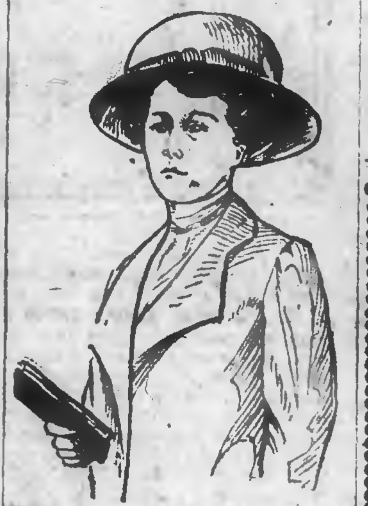
MISS BARBARA WYLIE IS REALLY A CHARMING WOMAN.

English Militant Suffragette Who Has Been Visiting In Canada on a Mission Connected With the Suffrage Agitation Likes Canada, But Suggests That We Have Much to Learn.

Miss Wylie, the English militant suffragette, who has been touring Canada addressing suffragette meetings and endeavoring to place the cause before the women of this country, is a very able and eloquent speaker. She has visited Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal and the principal cities of the east before returning to England.

Miss Wylie is a handsome type of an intellectual woman, keen and bright and good-looking and quite stylish in appearance. She is the very opposite from the Amazonian individual that one would naturally expect to see when her record is taken into account. She has served two terms in English prisons and has several times been foremost in riotous attacks on English Cabinet Ministers and vigorously defends the methods of the militant suffragettes of England. Few people in this country felt disposed to sympathize with those women in their aggressive methods but after listening to the explanations of Miss Wylie and her eloquent defence of them almost every reasonable person now admit that there is certainly much to be said in favor of the militant methods.

Miss Wylie's style of speaking is most winning. She possesses a beautiful, well modulated voice, a fluent delivery and is evidently deeply read and thorough conversant with public matters in English political life. Her delivery is of the pleasing, natural extempore style and no heckling or cross-questioning has the least effect in disturbing her. To every comment or question she at once has a sharp, pointed reply that almost invariably wins the sympathy and applause of her audience and even her most bitter opponents can not fail to admire the skill and ability with which she argues the suffragette cause. She wears as ornaments two silver decorations which indicate her suffering for the militant cause. One is a gate of prison bars with chains symbolic of imprisonment and martyrdom and the other is a small brass tag with the word "Holloway," the English jail in which she was twice imprisoned, and on these tags are the numbers of the cells she occupied while in prison.



MISS WYLIE.

Miss Wylie has expressed herself as well pleased on the whole with her reception in Canada and has found considerable interest taken in the English suffragette crusade, but she considers that there is yet much educative work to be done in this country. In England she says women see on every hand conditions that should be remedied and feel that they are helpless to improve conditions without votes as there are laws standing in the way of reform and these have to be removed or new laws are required where none exists at present. The militant suffragette movement has made decided progress she claims in the last five years and many of the English Cabinet Ministers are favorable to the change, but Premier Asquith stands, she says, as a barrier in the way as he is stubbornly opposed to the idea. Miss Wylie contends that the object of the English suffragettes is not to fight men but to co-operate with them in bringing about good progressive legislation, particularly that sort in which women are especially interested as affecting them as a class. She contends they are better able to judge of good laws for women than the men and would be most helpful in framing such useful legislation.

Dogs' Rest Established.

A haven of refuge for the dog which is weary of too much attention from his master and mistress, or is tired of the fulsome adulation of the crowd, is being provided by the United Travelers and Counties Club in Piccadilly, London, which was opened officially recently. Of course, the premises with their fine view of the Green Park provide pleasant surroundings and numerous conveniences for the mere human being, but it is in the annex in Down street that dogs will be kept while their masters and mistresses are busy.

Caustic.

Scene—Train stopping at small road side station. Irritable Old Gentleman—What on earth do they stop at a station like this for? Objectionable Passenger (alighting)—To allow me to get out. Irritable Old Gentleman—Ah! I see it has its advantages, then!

PLANNING FOR THE CHRISTMAS TABLE

Some Valuable Hints to the Woman Who Would Beautify Her Dinner Table on Christmas

What an important function is the good old English Christmas dinner. Around the table old friends are once again united, past grievances are forgotten, peace and goodwill reign supreme, unless we are so unfortunate as to possess a stony heart like the one that belonged once upon a time to the immortal Scrooge. Even thus may it be our lot this year to find a little Tim into whose life we can bring happiness.

Brightness must be the predominant feature in Christmas-time decorations, and that is why scarlet is ever the favorite hue at this time of the year.

A box of growing lilies of the valley are a delightful investment and may be made a thing of beauty if treated thus: First measure the width and length of the box, then stand it upon two pieces of bright red crinkled tissue paper that are five times as wide and three times as long as the box.

Bring the paper up the sides lengthways, turning it in about an inch at the top and securing it to the top of the box with a little seccotine. Now tie the paper at the sides with a piece of thin string, tying it as tightly as possible without cutting the paper. Pull out the ends and arrange them so that they form a kind of large rosette at either end of the box; finish with bows of ribbon.

This makes a charming centre for your table; or, if lilies are too expensive, fill a box with small growing ferns, planting here and there a scarlet tulip among them.

Dainty candle shades could be made of the crinkled paper with stars cut out in silver paper and gummed on to them, and the housewife who is really artistic will have a touch of red to correspond in all the little details of the table service. This idea can even be carried out with the ham frill using for this alternate ruches of white and red tissue, letting a white ruche come next to the ham.

CHRISTMAS COMMANDMENTS

Don't arrive half an hour too soon and jocularly explain that you've "come early to avoid the crush."

Don't entertain the company with a humorous description of the old gentleman you saw coming up the street. He may arrive later.

Don't always catch the same girl when playing blind man's buff. People may suspect that you can see.

Don't attempt to do conjuring tricks unless you've tried them before.

Don't say, "I thought so," when you are informed that the mince pies are home-made; it's ambiguous.

Don't say that the plum pudding is "just like mother's." It might be considered a poor compliment.

Don't say, "That yarn of yours always makes me laugh" when your host introduces his annual joke. It sounds like another way of saying, "Chestnuts."

Don't sing more than half a dozen songs in succession, because—well, it's bad for the voice.

Don't, when asked to take a glass of port wine, sip it, and then inquire whether it's port or sherry. You may be misunderstood.

Don't, when conversing, harp on the "ripping time" you had at Brown's the other night. It savors of odious comparisons.

TWO JUVENILES STEAL PURSE AT THE POST OFFICE

Owner Left Muff on Radiator and Boys Took Advantage

One Goes to Industrial School; the other is Remanded

On a charge of being jointly implicated in the theft of a chain purse containing $41, two boys were arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning in juvenile court. It appears that on Saturday afternoon a woman, who resides in the country, entered the Post Office and stopped at the stamp wicket. She placed her muff, which contained a purse and $40, on the radiator while she posted some letters. On returning, she was alarmed to find the purse missing from her muff. She at once informed the police department and remarkably quick work by Detective Newhall resulted in two boys being rounded up, from descriptions given the officer by the informant. The younger of the two lads had previously been in police court and was on suspended sentence.

The boys admitted the theft this morning. The money was recovered but the purse, which was hidden by the boys, has disappeared, and the party who took it is requested to return the same to the police station.

The boys were arrested on George street, having spent only 20 cents of the stolen money. The younger lad was committed for three years to the Industrial school by the Magistrate, and the other remanded one week.

C. A. FLEMMING TELLS OF THE EX-CORKSCREW TOWN WITHOUT THE OPEN BAR

He Says Owen Sound is a Good Place For Men Women and Children to Live—Farmers Pass by the Licenced Places and do Business in the Water Wagon Town—Some Comparisons with Other Places

A large audience of men, at the Grand Opera House, yesterday afternoon, heard C. A. Flemming of Owen Sound tell of conditions in his town, with local option in force for seven years.

H. B. Cowan was chairman. The Harmony Quartette and Douglas Stanbury, of Toronto, sang. J. M. Greene led in the singing from the leaflets and Rev. Mr. Hamilton of Toronto, Dominion Alliance Secretary followed Mr. Flemming with a five minute address. Ex-Mayor Pearson of Newmarket had been called to other meetings. Both visitors spoke to another large gathering at night. Mr. Flemming is president of a Savings and Loan Company, Principal of a Business College, a chartered accountant and has been auditor for the town.

"Judge the Local Option Law as you would any other law, and it's alright," he said. "Local Option is observed in Owen Sound as well as the Ten Commandments. A Law that is not broken is no good.

The speaker took up the pamphlet distributed by the liquor interest. It admitted, he said, that business was very good. "We had a population of 9000 when we voted on local option; at the last census we had 12,555. If that is killing a town you can stand to be killed, can't you."

WATER GAS AND LIGHT.

Mr. Flemming explained that the town operated the water, gas and electric light. He gave the revenue for each in the years of 1905 and 1911. Gas increased from $14,714.17 to $19,880.53; water from $9,411.17 to $18,477.95; light from $7,025.8 to $31,941.88.

"I am not claiming local option does all this, but we were told the town would go to ruin; farmers would not come near us and the grass would grow on the front street."

BENEVOLENCE

In 1905, Owen Sound, he said paid $794.46, but in 1911 the figures were only $583.56. "We're not parsimonious; we don't need to pay out so much. At the Soo, with all licenses the expenditure was $1548.49; at Port Arthur, $2,317.87, at Peterborough $4,938.

EDUCATION.

For education, in 1905, Owen Sound paid out $21,150; in 1911 the figures were $44,941.86. Now the attendance was better, and 1,018 boys attended the public school. Three new schools had been built. Miles and miles of cement pavement and sewers had been constructed and loans had been made. Progress such as this was in the face of two disastrous fires, in which the C.P.R. elevators and freight sheds and a sawmill were lost. This meant a loss of 600 men. "Take that out of some towns and there wouldn't be much left," he remarked.

Mr. Flemming gave a large number of statements from merchants who reproted on the business done in the year of this fire. Parker & Co., the oldest, reported more business than last year. A grocer said sales had been 12 per cent. better and more on a cash basis. Another grocer, who had been in business 6 years, said business had never been better, and another merchant of 20 years said business was the best.

With Chatsworth eight or nine miles distant and the bar doing business, the Owen Sound market on Saturday was the largest ever known. The farmers passed by the licensed places. The speaker said he saw farmers who had come twenty miles to get 23 cents for turkey.

THE POLICE RECORD

The bills telling of Owen Sound's record, the speaker said, had been used from the Atlantic to the Pacific by the liquor interest. He saw them in Saskatchewan. He told of the death of Magistrate Spencer between the time the vote on local option was taken and the law came in force. The old system was to arrest a drunken man, only when he was disturbing the peace. There were few cases where he was fined for the second offence for drunkenness. The third time he paid $1 and costs. The convictions were the merest fraction of the number of drunks he pointed out. With the new law and the new Magistrate, it was a fine for every case.

For the months of May, June, July August, September and October, of 1909, the liquor interest gave the number of cases of all kinds at 236, but the figures from the Clerk of the Peace were 106.

In 1911 Port Arthur had 1,308 convictions for drunk and disorderly; Fort William had 1,248, and Owen Sound 232. For the eleven months of 1912, Owen Sound had only 111. In November, of this year, Owen Sound had only 37 cases, aggregating $85 in fines, and this was in the town that before local option was passed was known as the Corkscrew town.

Mr. Flemming did not say that there was no drinking in Owen Sound. The boys who went about with flasks in their pockets were the sons of men who kept liquor in their homes. "We have a lot of barroom appetites who must be satisfied, and they'll break the law to get it." He gave many other statistics which showed that Owen Sound was cleaner and freer from police court cases and convictions than other places. Only a week ago the Ministerial Association passed a resolution giving their unqualified endorsement to local option.

PROPERTY VALUES

He said between 100 and 125 houses and some business blocks had been erected since the bars were shut out. He valued property known as the Harrison estate recently at $50 per foot. The same could be bought before local option at $15 and $20. Other properties had jumped from $6,500 to $30,000; $16,000 to $30,000; $8,800 to $12,000. A block of three stores which sold for $16,000, seven or eight years ago, brought $24,000 and he recently offered $30,000 spot cash but was turned down.

Speaking of drunken men, Mr. Flemming said that on Saturday night he saw more drunken men in the Union Station in Toronto than he had seen in Owen Sound since local option went in force.

While the town was under license, he, as Principal of the Business College had to discipline students for drinking. Since the town went dry he had not had a case. Owen Sound he said in closing was a good place to live for men, women and children.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. WILSON

By Young Ladies of St. John's Bible Class

The girls of the Bible class of St. John's made a present of a pretty brass kettle and lamps, at the close of yesterday's session, to their teacher, Mrs. Macfarlane Wilson, who is leaving the city. Rev. Canon Davidson in making the presentation on behalf of the class, spoke feelingly of the value of Mrs. Wilson's work, and Mr. R. J. Devey, superintendent also added words of hearty appreciation.

MANY APPEALS YET TO BE HEARD

Meanwhile Both Parties are Busy at Work

The Court of Appeal was resumed this morning after having adjourned at ten o'clock Saturday night. Both the local option and opposing forces have been very active each day, those interested having placed their automobiles and other conveyances at the disposal of their party.

Judge Huycke anticipates however that many of the original list of appeals will not be pressed, the appellants preferring to abandon them.

The list is still very large however, and will not be completed today.

BETTER BUSINESS THAN LAST YEAR

The Christmas rush has not, so far, been felt very heavily in the local stores, although the trade in most of them exceeds that of last year.

LAD FORCED PIN DOWN HIS THROAT

Father Hurried Him to the Doctors Who Extracted it With Difficulty

On returning to his home at 154 Lock street, last evening, J. J. Cunningham found his seven year old son, Ivy, with a pin lodged in his throat. The youngster while playing with a tin whistle, had found the pin and forced it down his throat.

Mr. Cunningham rushed the boy in a sleigh to Dr. Halliday who found it necessary to call in Dr. Buchanan, to assist in the difficult case.

The pin, when finally extracted was found to be bent. The lad was removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where he is doing nicely.

$350 FOR THE MISSION CAUSE

This Years Contributions at St. John's Show Increase

Yesterday at St. John's, Canon Davidson noted that a cheque for $350 for missions in the North-West and abroad, had been sent in during the past week, which is slightly in advance of the contribution sent in for the same purpose last year. The missions' committee, led by Mr. Aylmer, hope to materially increase this amount next year.

Parents Bereaved

Fanny Katherine, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Boucher, Crescent street, passed away on Saturday afternoon.

The funeral took place this morning to the Little Lake cemetery.

HIGH COST OF GAS.

How to Reduce This Important Household Item.

The high cost of living necessitates a closer scrutiny of the gas bill than ever before, and the careful housewife who uses gas for cooking and heating purposes as well as a lighting medium is on the lookout for new devices that are both practical and economical. There is a host of new inventions on the market, and from the woman whose home is equipped with a big gas range to the occupant of a furnished room or a small section of an apartment house there are articles to meet all needs.

Where a combination lighting and heating device is desired there are several from which to choose, and all may be attached to an ordinary gas fixture. The newest is of tin and resembles an old fashioned candlestick inverted. It is easily adjusted and may be used to both heat and light the room, or separately, in either capacity. Another contrivance, somewhat similar, is of sheet iron. Then there are the luminous radiators that look so cheerful on a cool day, and a much more pretentious piece of apparatus is in the form of a radiator similar to that used for steam or hot water heating.

It is in the realm of the cook that the searcher for gas appliances is most likely to find what she is after. There is a little piece of tin and wire that costs but a dime and slips over a gas jet and on top of which a cup of water or any other liquid may be quickly and satisfactorily heated to the required temperature. Then come the special saucepans, not altogether new, but so fashioned that two or three may be placed side by side over one jet, and several vegetables may be cooked at a medium expenditure of gas. The cookers—two, three, four or even five tier—that may be placed over one jet, also help to keep the gas bill down, as the heat from one jet suffices to cook whatever is placed on the different shelves.

KEEP OLD LINEN.

It Will Come In Handy For a Number of Purposes.

An old sheet makes an excellent ironing cloth.

In the sickroom it may be folded in two and placed under the invalid, protecting the undersheet and saving the washing bill.

When the sheet is much worn it should be cut up, and the best pieces should be laid away in the medicine chest that they may serve for poulticing and bandages.

Table napkins that are considerably the worse for wear will still make capital glass and china towels.

Sheets invariably give way in the center before they are worn at the edges. When they show signs of breaking down in this way they should be cut up the middle, the two sides should be joined together, and a good strong undersheet is then ready for use and will wear again for years. When past even this service the sheets may be utilized as dust covers.

Old sheeting may also be sewed up into useful bags for inclosing frocks while they are in the wardrobe or into cushion slips, which can be filled with down or feathers.

The Light in the Sea.

In the course of a cruise organized by the Norwegian government for oceanographical purposes investigations were made to determine to what depths in the ocean atmospheric light penetrates. From the experiments it appears that the red rays do not extend below 500 meters, but the violet and the blue are still impressed upon the photographic plate. At 1,000 meters are still to be seen some violet and ultra violet rays, but at 1,700 meters every ray of light is extinguished. The Norwegian government proposes to utilize this knowledge in the study of the marine life of the ocean bed.—Harper's.

The Injurious Veil.

Over and over for generations the thing has been told that women injure their eyes with the veils they wear—thin mesh, heavy mesh, spotted and figured—all kinds of veils. Now comes an addition to this old time information, which never caused one veil less. It is said that the veil causes, first, eye strain, then headache, nervousness, wrinkles and finally general and serious nervous disorders. This would seem to indicate that the game is not worth the candle.

Curious Beehives.

In the village of Hoefel, Silesia, there are a number of beehives in the shape of life size figures cleverly carved in wood and painted in colors. The figures were carved more than a century ago by monks of the Naumburg monastery, who were at that time in possession of a large farm in the district. The beehives represent different characters, ranging from Moses to a military officer, a country girl and a night watchman with a spear.

The Fastidious.

"Catch any fish on your trip?"

"No, and I can't understand why. Had a $200 outfit. Had the right kind of books and the latest thing in flies."

"Maybe you weren't wearing the right kind of hat."—Washington Herald.

She Did.

"Jack proposed to me while turning the music for me at the piano."

"Ah, I see! You played right into his hands."—London Answers.

Hurt not others with that which pains yourself.

Paris says satin will be replaced in the spring by crepe de chine, an dit is said that mills are working to capacity there on the latter fabric, and also china silk, which is to be used as its lining.

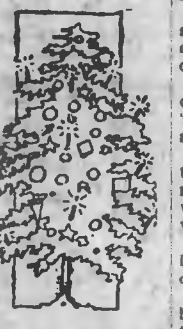
MY CHRISTMAS DREAM

NOW, this was the wonderful dream I had—a dream of the Christmas Tree:
I dreamed that a melody sweet and glad rang out from somewhere to me,
And out of the silvered east they came and out of the rosy west—
More children than ever a man might name or ever a man has guessed;
And going and coming, and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing,
Were all the children that ever were known since ever there was an earth,
In hundreds, in couples, and all alone, each chanting a song of mirth.

And then in this wonderful dream of mine the children ran to and fro
And marched in a long and winding line as swiftly as they might go;
And each as he passed the Christmas Tree looked up with a radiant face,
And each as he came there bent the knee with curious, childish grace—
And coming and going, and going and coming
With buglers a-blowing and drummers a-drumming,
Were all of the children that ever have been since there was a world at all
And none was a-hungered or pale or thin, or crippled or like to fail.

And all of them sang in this dream of mine, a song that I wish I knew.
For it had a melody fair and fine and every tone was true;
And all of the children they looked at me in pity—or so it seemed—
While stars in the boughs of the Christmas Tree in marvelous glory gleamed.
And going and coming, and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing,
Were all of the children that ever have played since ever the world began.
And each little fellow and each little maid delightedly laughed and ran.



And then in this wonderful dream I dreamed, I thought that the Christmas Tree
Grew fairer and fairer until it seemed no fairer a thing could be;
And all of the children they called my name and all of the children smiled.
And suddenly then to my heart there came the faith of a little child.
And going and coming, and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing.
I marched with the children of all the lands, of all the years and times,
And laughed as we ran with our close-linked hands and chanted our world-old rhymes.

WINTER TOURIST TRIPS

Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern, luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With one change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast, where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides, it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes, via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m., January 6th, via Detroit, for Palm Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

GWENDOLYN'S TRIP TO THE ICE PALACE

By Winifred Stewart

EVERYBODY was flying hinthre and thither. In another week Christmas would be here, and there was such a lot of things to get ready. Presents had to be bought, and heaps and heaps of other things had to be prepared.

Gwendolyn Taylor, a little girl of six years, was sitting gazing out of the window. She had not been well, and was not allowed to go out. "It's dreadfully hard," thought Gwendie, "and this is just the jolliest time of the season. Her brothers and sisters were out skating, and she longed to be with them.

It was beginning to grow dark though it was early in the afternoon. A big fire was crackling and laughing up the chimney, casting shadows over the walls and floor of the room. Heaps of picture books and toys were strewn about, and Gwendie sat moodily at the window wishing she could get out to play among the snow.

She picked up one of the books, and was just turning over the leaf when a sweet, soft voice exclaimed—"Do you wish very much to be out in the snow?"

Gwendie looked around the room but she could see no one, and then looking at the opposite side of the window she saw a tiny little man.

"A fairy," said Gwendie, "or am I dreaming," and she rubbed her eyes; no it was quite true—a tiny fairy was seated at the other side of the window.

Gwendie was so amazed that she only stared at the stranger, and then recollecting herself, said—"Oh, I wish ever so much to be out in the snow dear fairy, but I've been in bed with a severe cold, and am not allowed to go out. But how did you get in? I'm quite sure no one ever opened the door."

"Oh! I didn't come in by the door," said the fairy, laughing heartily. "I slid down the chimney."

"Oh!" said Gwendie, nodding her head approvingly.

The fairy then handed her a tiny sweet, and told her to swallow it, and immediately she found herself as tiny as a flower. The messenger then helped her into a fireproof costume and hand in hand they whizzed up the chimney. When they reached the roof of the house, Gwendie was breathless with excitement. She scarcely had time to think when she found herself in an aeroplane, and the tiny man was seated beside her. There was a loud whirring sound, and soon the flying machine was high above the house and gardens sailing quite smoothly through the air.

"Oh! oh! look, everything seems to be flying away from us!" cried Gwendie in astonishment as she looked downwards.

"Don't fear," said the tiny man. "See- we're flying between the housetops and the clouds!"

At last, with a jerk, the aeroplane halted, and she opened her eyes.

To Gwendie's surprise, they were standing in front of a fantastic gate composed of ice that glittered and dazzled the eyes with countless colors.

"What place is this?" asked Gwendie. And the tiny man replied—"This is the land where Jack Frost and his fairies dwell."

Gwendie gazed in wonderment at the whole scene; it was really magnificent. Tiny little fairies came to welcome her, and Jack Frost himself was waiting to receive her.

"Come away," said Jack Frost, leading her into the palace. "We are all delighted to see you."

Jack Frost looked very pretty in his sparkling white fur coat and glittering head-dress. He was the most elegant fairy, and quite two inches taller than any of the others. He led her into a corridor, where Gwendie could see long vistas of clear ice, and what she wondered most at was that walls, floors, and ceilings, and even the chairs, were all made of ice. Lights shone from above, tinting everything with delightful shades of colour, and as they walked through the corridors Jack Frost opened a door, and to her astonishment countless little fairies were skating over what seemed to Gwendie to be polish-glass. The floor stretched as far as the eye could reach, and a little band of tiny men were playing charming music.

"Now, you can skate as much as as you like," said Jack Frost smilingly. Gwendie jumped for joy; she simply loved skating. Two fairies fastened skates both on to Gwendie's and Jack Frost's shoes, and they soon were skating out and in among the fairies. Oh! how Gwendie enjoyed herself. They waltzed together and kept time with the music, and she wished she could skate with Jack Frost for ever.

"Oh," said Jack Frost as he saw all the fairies tripping away, "it is time you were returning."

Gwendie kissed him good-bye, and soon she was settled in the aeroplane with the tiny man.

They were flying pretty near to the house-tops now, and Gwendie clapped her hands as she once more caught sight of her home.

Soon they were in the room again, and the tiny man helped her to take off the fire-proof coat, handed her another sweet, and disappeared.

Gwendie swallowed the sweet and sat down on the window seat. Her brothers and sisters were still skating and having fun among the snow. Then she heard some one call "Gwendie," and in another minute her mother was in the room.

"Dear me, I thought you must be asleep; I've been calling for the last half-hour, and wondered why you never came down."

"How could I when I've been skating with Jack Frost?" replied Gwendie.

Mother smiled and said she would hear about the skating expedition after tea.

Women are growing taller and fashions are all the prettier for it.

A VISIT FROM FATHER CHRISTMAS

Teddy Bear hung on the Christmas tree—
A capital place both to hear and see—
The candles were many and all alight,
And Teddy Bear thought it a splendid sight.
Old Father Christmas, in mantle red,
Smiled as he nodded his hooded head;
Round him each little one danced with glee,
Thinking, "Oh, what has he brought for me?"
Teddy Bear wanted to shout for joy,
"See, there's an engine for Freddy-boy!
And the loveliest dolly with golden hair,
And eyes that open and shut, for Clare!
'Well, I'm glad that I've come to stay,
Everything here is so bright and gay,
With plenty of presents for every one,
And old Father Christmas to share the fun!"

Father Christmas may be partial in the distribution of his gifts; but old Father Time hangs the same present on everybody's Christmas tree—the opportunities afforded by a brand new year.

SANTA CLAUS.

Christmas Eve is coming soon.
Now, you dear old man,
Whisper what you'll bring to me—
Tell me if you can.
When the clock is striking twelve,
And we're fast asleep;
Down the chimney broad and black
With your pack you'll creep.
All the stockings you will see
Hanging in a row.
And mine's the longest one,
So you'll be sure to know.

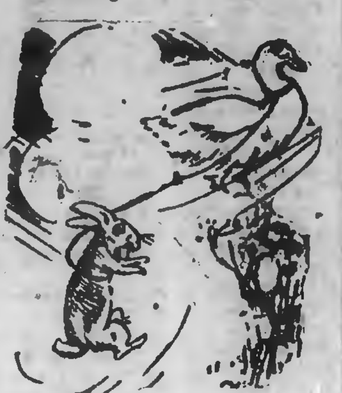
HOW BUNNY LOST HIS CHRISTMAS DINNER

"Dear brothers," said Bunny, "it's time that we caught
A goose for our dinner." Said they, "Happy thought!"
So, taking a rope, they set off in a row
To catch the fat goose that was first at the show.
One held on the rope Bunny tied to his waist,
The other he looped and most cleverly placed
Round Goosie's fat neck; but his plans all went wrong—
The bird started running and dragged him along.



Poor Bunny! he said, as his tears fell like rain,
"I shall never get to my burrow again!"
For just then the goose jumped and started to fly,
And Bunny was frightened at being so high.
At last the rope caught in the branch of a tree,
And luckily breaking, it set the goose free;
But there Bunny dangled until he was found,
And helped with a ladder to get to the ground!

AN EXCITING GAME

This is the most amusing game, and it is advisable to play some distance from the Christmas fire, as it will be found a pretty warm one. Chairs should be placed in a circle; there should be one less chair than there are players. The chairs should be strong ones, and should be of different sizes if the game is to be the greatest fun. One child stands inside the circle of chairs, and the others all sit down on the chairs, and at a given signal the children sitting down begin to move on to their neighbor's chair and the one in the centre has to try and get on to the unoccupied chair. It is more funny than you can imagine, and the players get so excited. If the one in the middle goes happen to get into a vacant seat, the one to whom it belongs has to be in the centre now, and try in his turn to get an unoccupied seat.

SANTA CLAUS STOCKING

A Nice Xmas Game.

"Santa Claus Stocking" is just the game you want for Christmas. Each child must take the name of a thing which Santa Claus might put in anyone's stocking. For instance, one might be a doll, another a gun, another a dog, and a fourth a box of sweets. When all have taken the name of some object, a grown up person begins to tell a story, gradually bringing all these names in. Directly an object is mentioned the child who has taken its name must do an action in connection with it. The doll might say "Mamma!" in a squeaky voice; the gun must shout "Bang!" the toy dog must bark; and the box of sweets—well, the best thing is to smile sweetly and look pretty! Should any child fail to do his action when the object he represents is mentioned he must pay a forfeit. At the end of the game the one with the least amount of forfeits is the winner.

OTTAWA COLLEGE AND PETES CLASH TO-NIGHT

WOUNDS AND FINES IN GAME BETWEEN N.H.A. TEAMS

There was nothing doing in the line of pink teas at Toronto Arena Saturday night when the Wanderers defeated Canadiens in an exhibition game by 4—3, Art Ross netting the deciding goal. The Mail and Empire says:

A disgraceful incident in the third period unarred the exhibition, and nearly started a riot. Lalonde crosschecked Odie Cleghorn over the face into the boards, and his brother, Sprague, rushed up and belted Lalonde over the eye with his stick, inflicting a wound that required twelve stitches to close. Both were ruled off for the balance of the game, and each fined $25, while it was learned that President Emmett Quinn tucked on another $50 fine to S. Cleghorne and a suspension for a month. S. Cleghorn was arrested, but Lalonde refused to lay a charge. While the players were waiting for the substitutes to come on, Ernie Russell and the Canadien trainer got into an argument, and Russell took a crack at the trainer with his stick. While nothing so drastic was expected between Lalonde and the Cleghorns, one could easily see that there was bad blood between them."

Walter Miller relieved Gordon Roberts in ther third period.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

A STORY OF LA FONTAINE

La Fontaine used to denounce the stage "aside" as utterly inartistic and inadmissible. In "Jean de la Fontaine" Frank Hamel tells of an outburst before Moliere, Racine and Boileau.

"Nothing," said La Fontaine, "is more contrary to good sense. What! The pit is supposed to understand that which an actor is not expected to hear, although he is close behind the one who is speaking? Absurd!"

As he grew very warm while thus expressing his feelings, and as it was impossible to make him hear a word Boileau tried to arrest his attention by repeating over and over again in loud tones, "La Fontaine must be a pretty rascal, a great rogue." But La Fontaine took no notice of all this abuse. At last they all burst out laughing, and this interrupted his train of thought.

"What are you laughing at?" he said.

Boileau replied gravely: "Fancy! I was abusing you at the top of my voice and you never heard me, although I am near enough to touch you, and you are astonished that an actor does not hear an aside that another actor utters on the boards."

The Two Coats Were There.

Sometimes the more you get a negro cornered the less cornered you have him. This fact, long known to many, was discovered the other day by a leather man in the "swamp."

This man suddenly awoke to the fact that certain back walls were dingy with dirt and decided they'd look much better if whitewashed.

So he summoned his old negro factotum and told him to get busy with his whitewash brush, giving special directions to put two coats on.

When the job apparently had been finished the leather merchant inspected it and found the whitewash suspiciously thin looking.

Summoning Sambo, he said as sternly as he could, "You didn't go over those walls twice as I told you to."

"No, sir," was the quick reply. "I ain't gone over twice, but I done put two coats in de pail, sir—two coats in de pail."—New York Mail.

She Was So Sure.

A woman who may be called Mrs. Smith placed her umbrella against the counter at which she was making some purchases in a department store the other day and when she finished picked it up and started away. At least that was the way it ran through her mind.

"Pardon me," said a strange woman, "but you have my umbrella."

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Smith; "that is my umbrella."

"Pardon me again," insisted the strange woman, "but it is mine."

"I guess I know my umbrella," said Mrs. Smith, beginning to show fight. "If you have lost your umbrella I am sorry, but I can't give you mine."

"Did you carry two umbrellas when you left home?" asked the stranger.

Then Mrs. Smith discovered that she had an umbrella in each hand, and she surrendered.—Cleveland Press.

Food Tasters at Feasts.

The sixteenth century feast was a round of precautions. The table laid, the pantler at once tasted the bread and salt as a preliminary "feeler." Then my lord washed in water tested for poison and dried with a towel already kissed as a like precaution, this the while each dish of the first course, then on the dresser, was being tasted by the stewards and cooks under the direction of the sewer. The dishes then came to the high table, and "assaye" was taken by the carver and the sewer himself. Nothing was left to chance. Pieces were chipped from each loaf and corners from all meats. Pies were broken open and "cornets" of bread dipped into several places and swallowed by the tasters. Granted the well being of these tasters, the feast could then proceed.—London Chronicle.

Music and Appetite.

The majority of the great musical composers had appetites on an equality with their talents. It is told of Handel that when he dined alone at a restaurant he always took the precaution to order the meal for three. Once on asking, "Is de tinner retty?" at a restaurant, or a tavern, as it was then called, where he was little known, he got the reply, "As soon as the company comes," and astonished the waiter by seating himself, with the remark, "Den pring up the tinner; I'm de company." The appetite of Haydn was yet more voracious. He delighted in dining alone and always finished the meal ordered for five persons.

TIMING THE SCRUBBINGS.

Sandglasses Mark Hand Washing In a German Hospital.

The whistling egg boiler and other patent inventions have threatened the existence of the old fashioned sand glass as part of the kitchen paraphernalia, and it seemed likely that the children of a later generation would be quite ignorant of the use of what with the scythe, so often stands as the symbol of time.

A German surgeon, like many Germans a strong disciplinarian, has, however, found a new use for the sand glass, and under his directions one of the larger Berlin hospitals has just placed an order for a score of sand glasses, which, however, are not timed for the boiling of an egg, but for rather longer—for five minutes.

It was discovered that some of the younger surgeons were rather easy going in the matter of cleansing their hands before operations. The regulations prescribe four processes of five minutes each, but rarely were the times kept with any approach to accuracy.

The excuse was that it was difficult to estimate the time without a clock Others pleaded the difficulty of keeping count of when they began and then reckoning minute by minute with only a small watch to go by. The sandglasses, however, are to put an end to this. Each washstand basin is to have its sandglass.

For five minutes the surgeon washes his hands with soap and warm water and then cleans his finger nails. Another turn off the sandglass, and five minutes more of hand washing with soap and warm water is to follow. The third turn keeps time for a third wash, this time in alcohol, and the fourth is for the process of sterilization with a wash of corrosive sublimate. Over all these operations the sandglass stands as arbiter to decide when each has been thoroughly carried out.—London Standard.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Stevenson, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. "I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. NERVILINE FOR MAN OR BEAST

PRINCESS HAD ROMANTIC CAREER

Accompanied Her Soldier Husband in all His Campaigns.

KARLSRUHE, Germany, Dec. 23. —The death of Princess Agnes Salm-Salm Saturday brought to an end a most romantic career.

She was the daughter of an American colonel named Leclercq, and was born at Baltimore, M.D., in 1840. In her youth she gained some renown as an actress and then she married Prince Felix Salm-Salm in 1862.

The prince was a soldier of fortune. He served first in the German and then in the Austrian army, on leaving which he went to the United States and joined the Union Army, during the civil war, rising to the rank of brigadier-general. After the conclusion of the war he went to Mexico and became aide de camp to the Emperor Maximilian, but went back to Germany and joined the Prussian army on the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870. He was killed at the battle of Gravelome.

Insomnia and Tobacco.

The dominant characteristic of tobacco is the fact that it heightens blood pressure. The irritant action by which it does this sometimes leads to still more harmful results. Its second action is narcotic. It lessens the connection between nerve centers and the outside world. These two actions account for all the good and all the bad effects of tobacco. As a narcotic it temporarily abolishes anxiety and discomfort by making the smoker care less about what is happening to him. But it is a well known law of medicine that all the drugs which in the beginning lessen nerve action increase it in the end. Thus smoking finally causes apprehension, hyperexcitability and muscular unrest. Here this inevitable law seems to give contradictory results. Every physician knows that an enormous amount of insomnia is relieved by smoking, even if it is at the expense of laziness the next day. At the same time every physician knows that most excessive smokers are troubled with insomnia.—Century.

Meanness of Mose.

A typical southern "mammy" entered the office of a well known attorney and, after mopping her shining brow with a bandanna handkerchief, said to the man at the desk.

"Ah wants t' git a divo'ce f'om mah husban', Mose Lightfoot."

"On what grounds?" asked the attorney.

"He's jes natchelly wufless," was the reply.

"What is your husband's occupation?"

"He jes sets roun' de house all day and p'tends to mind de baby."

"Does he take good care of the child?"

"'Deed he do not! He's too lazy. Dis mawnin' he tried to make de dawg rock de cradle by tyin' its tail to one ob de rockers."

"Did the scheme work?"

"Land sakes, no! Mose am so evahlastin' grouchy dat he couldn't speak enough kind words to make de dawg wag its tail!"—Judge.

THE MAN AFTER WHOM KNOX CHURCH WAS NAMED

Rev. H. J. Keith Tells the Life Story of John Knox—Once a Galley Slave.

The life story of John Knox, galley slave, preacher and deliverer of Scotland, was related in a vivid and enlightening manner last evening by Rev. H. J. Keith, to a very large congregation.

Previous to his address the remarkable boy contralto, Douglas Stanbury of Toronto, sang "Rock of Ages" in a manner that went straight to the heart.

Rev. Keith in introducing the life of John Knox referred to him as the man universally acknowledged to be responsible for the banishment of Roman Catholicism in Scotland. Commencing at the tenth century and continuing to the fifteenth, Scotland was in the grip of Papal rule but from the end of the fifteenth up to the present, Scotland had rejoiced in Protestantism, thanks to the teachings and labors of John Knox.

The evolution of Protestantism in the land of the heather, came only after many martyrs to the truth had been burned at the stake.

Two of the most illustrious and zealous of the latter who chose to die rather than bow down to the Pope were Patrick Hamilton and George Wisher, who were slowly burned at the stake.

John Knox himself was educated in a Roman Catholic University, and after his graduation recognised Papal supremacy. He first came under the influence of the teachings of Wisher when doing duty as guardsman to Wisher then in captivity for proclaiming Protestantism. He learned Wisher's views and became convinced that he would never adopt the Protestant beliefs. For one whole week he deliberated on his future, finally renouncing Roman Catholicism and becoming eventually the instrument to liberate Scotland. Knox felt himself called to declare the judgments of God to the Protestants of his country and he preached vigorously and mercilessly against the existent evils of the Roman Catholic church.

ARRESTED AND MADE A GALLEY SLAVE.

The years that followed were strenuous ones for the devoted John Knox. His pulpit powers were wonderful and his words worked like magic wherever he preached. On one occasion his bitter denounciations led to his arrest and with others he was taken to France and there for nineteen months he knew what the life of galley slave was, toiling at an oar under the slave drivers' merciless lash. He was finally liberated however, when his vessel fell into the hands of the English and Knox travelled up and down Scotland again, and became more than ever a power in the land.

Knox became chaplain to Edward VI. About this time he married Margery Bowes with only the precarious livlihood of $40 a year.

The remainder of his life was spent in preaching wherever opportunity afforded. He also enjoyed the companionship and help of the famous John Calvin and Martin Luther, whose teachings had stirred up the Reformation.

Rev. Mr. Keith's story was historically accurate and very entertaining. He related the scenes near the close of Knox's life, showing the wonderful vigor and energy of Knox even when an old man. Almost his last public sermon was delivered in denunciation of the perpetrators of the terrible massacre on St. Bartholomew's Eve in France.

MRS. BEST IS APPRECIATED

Was Presented With Prayer Book and Hymn Book

After morning service at St. John's church yesterday a gathering of churchmen of the congregation, composed chiefly of ex-church wardens, remained and presented Mrs. James Best with a prayer book of the most handsome kind obtainable. The address was read by Rev. Canon Davidson, and Mr. Peter Campbell the presentation. During their terms of office they have observed the constant and faithful work of Mrs Best in the church, and they have desired to express their warm appreciation. Mrs. Best has been one of the central figures in the appreciation. Mrs. Best has been one of the central figures in the church work as choir-mother, member of the Chancel Guild and Women's Auxiliary, and has spent a large amount of her time in the services of the church. The address was signed by a large number of contributors. Mrs. Best was quite overcome by the surprise and expressed her thanks in a few words

BARNARDO HOME OFFICIAL DEAD

George Wilson Griffith Succumbs to Heart Trouble.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—George Wilson Griffith, J.P., the well-known representative of the Dr. Barnardo Home, died very suddenly on Saturday afternoon. He spent the morning at his office at the home. After returning to his house on Lansdowne avenue, in the afternoon he complained of illness and Dr. N. C. Bennett was summoned. He expired from heart failure shortly after the doctor arrived.

Mr. Griffith was connected for twenty-five years with the Dr. Barnardo Home. Until two years ago he made annual visits to as many as possible of the boys who were placed out with Canadian families. For the past two years he has been engaged in the Toronto office of the institution.

FEARS THE HAGUE.

U. S. Politician Would Not Trust the Panama Case To Tribunal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The United States never could submit the Panama Canal controversy with Great Britain to an international court of arbitration, declared Representative Mann of Illinois, floor leader of the House, in an address last night at the banquet which brought to a close the conference here of the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes. Several speakers during the conference had urged such arbitration.

The question was submitted to a fair jury here, the congress of the United States, said Mr. Mann, and this country has spoken upon a question which is as much her internal affair as any that could arise. He asserted that the rest of the world was opposed to the United States in the Panama matters and that an international court could not decide the question equitably.

That Canada never would break her ties with the Mother Country, was the message given by Prof. George M. Wrong, Toronto, who added that this union would but serve to cement the friendship between the two English-speaking nations.

He Wears One Suit Three Times.

The czar of Russia is generally supposed to spend more on his clothes than any other reigning monarch. His imperial majesty rarely wears a suit of clothes more than three times, and he pays from $35 to [illegible] for his ordinary walking and morning suits. The two firms of tailors who have the czar's custom do little other business. The czar's custom is supposed to be worth $10,000 per annum net profit to the tailor who makes his ordinary clothes and $15,000 per annum to the tailor who has the making of his uniforms and court dresses.

British Doctors Reject Terms.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The British Medical Association has rejected the final terms offered by the Government for service under the national health insurance act, which will be inoperative without the aid of the doctors.

The original compensation fixed by the Government was $1.08 yearly for each insured patient, which with drugs and other allowances brought the amount up to $1.44. Later the Government fixed the remuneration at $1.89, but the doctors declared that the least they would accept was $2.04. The offer rejected Saturday night, according to Chancellor Lloyd-George, is the last concession on the part of the Government, which threatens to institute a state medical service.

TABLE ACCESSORIES.

Napkin Rings Out of Date—Napkin Envelopes In.

Napkin rings are out of date. The time honored circlet of silver, ivory or carved wood will no longer grace the tables of the truly up to date housekeeper. In their place has appeared the daintiest of table accessories, the napkin envelope.

These dainty receptacles are made of fine linen that matches the centerpieces and doilies used elsewhere on the table.

They are decorated with embroidery, of course, but here there is opportunity for more elaborate work, and different work if you choose. For example, a girl can make her own napkin envelope, embroidered with a pretty spray of her favorite flowers and her monogram or one initial in one corner, and this is a good plan, for then if she goes away from home on a visit it can be taken along to be used by her hostess in place of the usual ring.

You can obtain the pattern by opening an ordinary business envelope six and one-half or seven inches by three and one-half inches wide. Cut the linen according to this pattern and buttonhole the edges, either straight or in shallow scallops. Then stamp the desired design on the plain portion of the linen that corresponds to the side of the envelope which bears the address when sending a letter. You can choose a design of flowers that will allow a blossom or a spray of leaves to be carried over on the flap, or that space may be reserved for the monogram or initial of the owner.

Another method of making the envelope is to cut an oblong piece of linen 10½ by 6½ inches, scallop and buttonhole the edges. From one end measure three and one-half inches and fold the linen over flat, so that it will lie over the other fold, as does the flap of the envelope. This done, the embroidery is worked on the outside of the flap, and the ends of this oblong envelope are caught together with the buttonhole stitch or by narrow ribbon run through small eyelets that have previously been worked.

VARIETY IN MEALS.

Boarding House Business Good For Woman of Executive Ability.

In the Woman's Home Companion a woman writes a most interesting account of her experiences as a keeper of a boarding house. She thinks that where a woman has a very small amount of capital the boarding house business is the best business in the world. Following is a brief extract:

"The actual reason for my success in keeping boarders is this: I have given my boarders clean rooms, good service and excellent homelike meals, well cooked from the best materials and served simply and efficiently.

"Breakfast is from 7 to 8:30. They have their choice of two cooked and one uncooked cereal and the fruits of the season, eggs in every style or chops, hot rolls and coffee. Some take eggs beaten in milk and others hot boiled milk. I take pains to have the tastes of the boarders catered to. That pays.

"Luncheon is from 12 to 1 o'clock. We have a hot entree, a cold meat, preserves and cake, plenty of bread and butter, coffee, tea and iced tea.

"Dinner is from 6 to 7:15. We have soup, one kind of meat, but that superlatively good; two vegetables, a salad and a dessert—not an elaborate menu, but cooked well, daintily served and made of the best materials and the best variety. We once ran forty days without duplicating a dessert. That's why my guests are permanent and paying."

For the Men's Room.

Among the new leather belongings which are ready for holiday giving are these excellent gifts for a man. One is a set of desk scissors and paper cutter in a leather case, and the other is a new whisk broom holder, which is very mannish in style.

DESK SCISSORS AND BROOM HOLDER.

New Beauty Spot is on the Veil.

The beauty spot veil is the very latest fashion whimsy. On the length and breadth of a white or flesh tinted shetland silk veil there is just one dot—an appliqued dot of velvet—and when the veil is tied over the hat the dot is made to come in that particular locality where a court plaster beauty spot would ordinarily be worn. This may be at the side of the chin, on the cheek, at one corner of the mouth or in any other piquant and becoming situation.

UNIQUE LOCOMOTIVE.

One In Italy That Seems to Run Backward to Go Forward.

There are very few modern American locomotives of unusual design. After years of experiment, during which many extraordinary engines were proposed, we have adopted certain fundamental types, and unless there is a complete revolution in the construction of our locomotives it is hardly possible that the engines of the future will be much different from those of the present.

In Europe and other foreign countries, however, they still continue occasionally to build an engine that embodies very unusual features. One of the latest was constructed for the Italian state railways, and the cab was placed in front that the engineer might have the clearest possible view of the track ahead.

When in operation the engine presents a very strange appearance, says the Railroad Man's Magazine, for, while it is actually running forward, the action of the driving wheels would be considered backward in this country. The engine seems to run backward to go forward.

It is a four cylinder compound, with the cylinders arranged in a peculiar manner, the two high pressure cylinders being on one side of the center line and the two low pressure cylinders on the other. Coal is carried in bunkers in the cab, though in this respect the accommodations for fuel are decidedly limited. Water is carried in the circular tank tender.

MONSTROUS SLANDER SAYS PREMIER WHITNEY

In Vigorous Repudiation of Having Brought Pressure to Bear on the Conservatives on Assessment Committee to Throw Out Tax Reform Measure the Premier Charges Mr. Southam With Ingratitude.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—"It was an absolute untruth and a monstrous slander." Such was Sir James Whitney's characterization yesterday of the attack made upon him and the members of the assessment committee, by The Ottawa Citizen, a Conservative newspaper:

"I do not care to say anything today about the attacks — open and secret—made upon me by Mr. W. M. Southam during the last two or three years. The assistance given him by me to enable him to get his taxation scheme before the Legislature, and the manner in which he repaid it, would make interesting reading, but let that suffice.

"I wish merely to protest as vigorously as I know how against his treatment of the Conservative members of the assessment committee. He says that I 'played the big boss act,' and that the 'Conservative members fell into line.' This is an absolute untruth and a monstrous slander. The report—which I think would meet with the approval of any reasonable man who reads it, no matter what his view may be on the merits of that question—would, I am quite certain, have been the same had I been a thousand miles away. It was the natural conclusion of the majority of the committee after hearing what was laid before it and giving the subject careful consideration.

"I repeat that I am not exercised over what Mr. Southam may say about me, but I desire to say to him that not one of the nineteen or twenty gentlemen whom he has maligned, need hesitate as to the outcome of a comparison with him with reference to capacity, personal honor, public spirit, or any other of the qualities which go to make men worthy and deserving of the respect of their neighbors. It is too bad that such men should be subject to insults from every man who thinks he has a mission to reform the world and turn things upside generally."

RAILWAY PRESIDENTS IN COURT THIS AFTERNOON

Are Charged With Violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Dec. 24— Chas. E. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and E. J. Chamberlain, president of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, were ready this morning to appear before Judge Hough in the Federal District Court this afternoon, to give bail and answer to indictments found against them yesterday, charging them with a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. The penalty, upon conviction, is one year in jail, a fine of five thousand dollars or both.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Attorney-General Wickersham will follow up the indictments of officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and Grand Trunk Railroad with immediate consideration of the question whether civil suit should be instituted to restrain the two roads from pursuing their alleged combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The men indicted are Chas. E. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; E. J. Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, and Alfred Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk board of directors. The indictments were due largely to the oral testimony of the numerous witnesses, which the attorney-general said had developed more than he had anticipated.

The penalty for the crime charged, which is alleged to be a violation of section 1, of the Sherman anti-trust law, is one year in jail, a fine of $5,000 or both. Mr. Mellen and Mr. Chamberlin, upon being notified of the indictment, promised the federal authorities, through their counsel, that they would appear at one o'clock this afternoon to enter their pleas.

Mr. Chamberlin is already in New York and Mr. Mellen will come from New Haven. Mr. Smithers is now in London. It is believed by the federal authorities, however, that he will sail for this country as soon as he hears that an indictment lies against him.

"A quiet meeting" between Mellen, Chamberlin and Smithers in New York on August 5, 1912, is named in the indictments as the time and place at which the defendants first "engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy to prevent the construction and completion" of the proposed extension of the Grand Trunk Railway system in New England and the operation of the Grand Trunk steamships between Providence and New York. Two other meetings, it is alleged, were afterwards held, also in New York, one on Sept. 20, 1912, and the other on Oct. 1, 1912, for the purpose of completing the alleged conspiracy.

TICKET CLERKS ARE ROBBED

Daring Criminal Loots Grand Trunk Office

BUFFALO, Dec. 24.—Within sight of scores of people, a highway man at 5.15 o'clock yesterday afternoon held up two clerks in the city ticket office of the Grand Trunk Railway and succeeded in getting away with $327.

Joseph E. Edwards, chief clerk, and Harold D. Mowry, a stenographer, were behind the desk when the man walked in. Drawing a revolver he threatened to kill them if they made an outcry. He then walked behind the counter and ordered Edwards to open the cash drawer. When the drawer was opened the stranger gathered up all the bills in sight and fled.

The ticket office is on the ground floor of Ellicott Square. The counter where the men stood is visible from both Main street and the court of the big office building.

CAUSE OF RIOT; IS FINED $30

He was remanded to jail on the charge of drunkenness. Charley Walley, the young man said to have been a ringleader in the riot, was remanded. He admitted being drunk, and stated that he remembered nothing of the proceedings. Special constables will be sworn in for the remainder of the holiday season.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

MANY SUSPECTS ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH OUTRAGE

Baron Hardinge Passed Restless Night—Muscle Under Shoulder Blade Found to be Torn—Bomb Contained Screws and Talking Machine Needles

Canadian Press Despatch.

Delhi, India, Dec. 24.—The attempt on the life of the Viceroy and Vicerein, Baron and Lady Hardinge, by an Indian fanatic yesterday, kept police and civil authorities of the Imperial city of India busily occupied throughout the night. Large numbers of persons have been arrested on suspicion, of participation in the outrage. The bomb hurled at the Viceroy was of an ordinary type, but it contained a large number of screws and talking machine needles, some of which when dispersed by the explosion struck the helmets of men belonging to a battalion of the Kings Royal Rifles, who were drawn up in line along each side of the street. None of the soldiers, however, were seriously hurt.

A bulletin issued this morning by doctors in attendance on the Viceroy says:—Baron Hardinge passed a restless night. It was necessary to relieve his pain by injections of morphia. He suffered little fever last night but none was present this morning. It was found at the operation yesterday evening that a muscle under the shoulder blade was rather severely torn.

A bulletin issued this evening reported the condition of the Viceroy as satisfactory. Some fragments of metal found in the wound proved to be portions of the howdah. In addition to the attendant a native boy who climbed a tree to watch the procession, was killed and thirteen were injured.

DELHI, India, Dec. 24.—Lord Hardinge, Viceroy of India, was wounded, and an attendant of his killed by a bomb hurled at the Viceroy from a housetop as he was entering the new capital in state yesterday.

The motive for the attempt is a mystery on which it will be impossible to hazard a guess until it is known whether the miscreant is a Hindu or a Mussulman. It is not known as yet whether the bomb-thrower has been arrested. Fears are expressed that it may have been a manifestation of Moslem resentment at the British occupancy of the ancient Mohammedan capital of India. It is asserted that a warning reached London some time ago to the effect that some violence would be attempted by Mohammedans on the occasion of the state entry of the Viceroy into Delhi.

The viceroy was making his entry in state into Delhi, as the last of the ceremonies in connection with the transfer of the capital from Calcutta to Delhi. The transfer was made in October last, but Lord Hardinge was not to take formal possession of the new quarters until yesterday. A large gathering of troops, officials and Punjab chiefs was present, to welcome the vice-regal party. Its splendid elephant procession had just left the railway station, passing through Chandal Chowk, when the bomb was thrown. It was hurled by a man standing on a housetop, and it struck the howah, or basket, of the Viceroy's elephant, in which he and Lady Hardinge were riding.

Three splinters of the powerful bomb penetrated the back and shoulders of Baron Hardinge, and he was also wounded in the neck by the screws with which the bomb was filled and which passed through his helmet.

The doctors who removed the metal splinters from the wounds declare that it was marvellous how the Viceroy escaped more serious and even fatal injuries.

The Viceroy tried to stand up, but reeled and fainted, and the officials who gathered around had much difficulty in removing him from the elephant's back. The Viceroy and Vicerine were assisted to alight from the howdah and placed in motor cars, one of which conveyed the Viceroy to the hospital and another the Vicereine to the official residence.

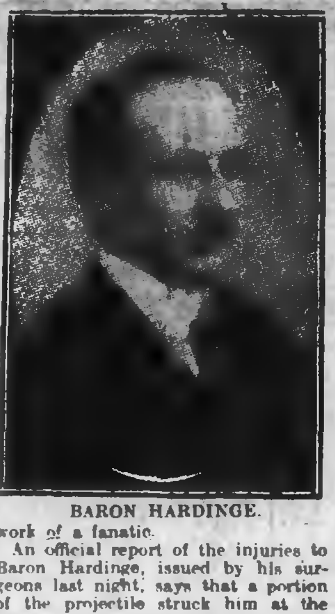
The native standing behind the Viceroy and Vicereine holding the Imperial umbrella, was blown from his position to the ground and instantly killed, while the driver sitting in front of the howdah was wounded in no fewer than eight places.

True British tradition that nothing can be allowed to interfere with British policy in India, the celebration of the inauguration of the new Imperial capital was proceeded with almost immediately.

Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson, financial member of the council of the Governor-General in India, took the Viceroy's place in the procession which then proceeded on its way through the new Imperial city to the Durbar camp where a great number of rajahs and other Indian chieftains were gathered. Sir Guy then took up his position in front of the vice-regal dais and read aloud a despatch from Baron Hardinge saying that he was only slightly injured by the missile of a fanatic. The reading of the message was received with prolonged cheering.

Immediately after the attempt at assassination, the police surrounded the house from which the bomb was thrown. All outlets from the city were placed under strict guard.

Coming on the day of the change of the seat of Indian government from Calcutta to Delhi brought about owing to political unrest in Bengal, deep significance may attach to this attempt upon the Viceroy's life, though he himself has characterised it as the work of a fanatic.



BARON HARDINGE.

An official report of the injuries to Baron Hardinge, issued by his surgeons last night, says that a portion of the projectile struck him at the back of the right shoulder and along the inner border of the shoulder-blade. It passed upwards and issued through the skin along the upper line of the shoulder, causing a wound four inches long and exposing the muscle and bone. There was no injury done to the Viceroy's lungs.

STEAMER IN PERIL

Blinding Snowstorm Makes Assistance Difficult

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sandy Hook, N.J., Dec. 24.—The passenger and freight steamer, Turrialba of the United Fruit Co., with fifty passengers aboard, was driven hard aground in a blizzard near Barnegat early to-day.

A wireless from the stranded steamer at noon reported she was resting easy. The U.S. Revenue Cutter, which put out to her assistance, is having difficulty in locating the distressed vessel because of a blinding snowstorm.

ALLIES STATE TERMS AND TURKS WILL CONSIDER

Financial Propcsals to be Made to Turkey Are Reserved For Future Conference

LONDON, Dec 24.—After several days of preliminary skirmishing in accordance with the cherished traditions of Oriental diplomacy the Turkish delegates yesterday faced the real attack of the allies at the fifth meeting of the Peace Conference which has as an object the settling of the war between the Balkan allies and Turkey.

The victorious allies laid their most important cards on the table. These were in the form of territorial conditions which they had agreed to impose on the Ottoman Empire. The demands as set forth were:

First, the cession by Turkey of all the territory west of a line starting from a point east of Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora, to a point in the Bay of Malatra, on the Black Sea, and excluding the peninsula of Gallipoli, Albania's status to be decided by the powers.

Second, the cession of the Aegean Islands occupied by the Greek forces in the present war and by the Italians in the recent war.

Third, the cession to Greece of all Turkish rights in the Island of Crete.

The Turkish delegates secured an adjournment until Saturday to consider the demands. In the informal conversation with the delegates they asserted that it would be impossible for them to accept such terms, but that statement is inevitable in meetings of this character, and was expected.

The allies did not reveal yesterday the financial proposals which they will make to Turkey, reserving them for a future meeting.

The territorial profits of the war which the allies will divide are the same as those published in the despatches Dec. 14, with the exception of the arrangement of the powers made for Albania. The allies will recognize the autonomy of Albania under the suzerainty of the Porte, but not its sovereignty. Albania will become what Crete was and what Egypt is in its relation to Turkey. The Sultan will be the nominal ruler, but without political, administrative or military power. He will have the right to raise his flag in Albania and appoint a resident governor, but only for the purpose of ratifying the decisions of the local government.

Seven Sailors Saved From the Sea.

LUNENBURG, N.S., Dec. 24.—The schooner W. M. Zwicker, Capt. Publicover, has arrived at Lehave after a 37-hours' run from City Island, N.Y. She experienced a very stormy passage on Friday night and picked up the crew from the American schooner Henry R. Tilton, Captain Sprague, from Windsor to New York. They also sighted a wreck 45 miles each by north off Highland Light, waterlogged and sails gone. The Tilton's crew of seven men was lashed to the spanker boom for many hours. The Tilton was 460 tons register.

LOVE IS REMANDED

Says He Noticed Butcher Knife on a Ledge

OWEN SOUND, Dec. 24.—Henry Love, the Ceylon man who is held in the county jail here pending further development on the charge of murdering his wife, was yesterday formally remanded for a week by Magistrate Menzies of Owen Sound. The son, Arnold Love, has told the authorities one point of which he apparently did not speak at the inquest. On Monday evening preceding the disappearance of Mrs. Love, just before he retired he noticed a butcher knife lying on the window ledge in the kitchen. This, he says, is about all that he forgot to tell at the inquest.

FRANCE HAS EYE ON PANAMA CANAL

PARIS, Dec. 24.—Parliament adjourned yesterday for the Christmas holidays. It will meet again in January to elect a new President of the republic.

The last business transacted prior to adjournment was the adoption of a motion by Representative La Grosilliere of Martinique, asking the Government to put in force urgent measures for securing to the French Antilles the fullest benefits to be derived from the opening of the Panama Canal.

Russia's Strict Censorship.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 24.—An Imperial decree issued yesterday forbids the circulation of military or navy news of any kind whatsoever. The decree remains in force for a year. It gives in minute detail a list of matters which must not be touched upon, including the fulfilling of factory orders for the army or navy and relating to furloughs or calls to the colors.

ACTRESS WANTS TO END HER LIFE

Has Tried Seventeen Times Without Success

MONTREAL, Dec. 24—Investigation into a charge of loitering lodged against Hazel E. Cook, an actress, who gives her home address as Spokane, Wash., revealed the fact that during the past three weeks she has attempted to commit suicide seventeen times, and on each occasion her attempt has been frustrated.

Miss Cook came here to act at the Theatre Royal in a stock company, but lost her position. Four times she was found preparing to jump into the St. Lawrence, once she drank coal oil, and on a number of occasions jabbed herself with scissors, once nearly opening a vein in her arm.

Yesterday morning she was arrested by the police clambering over a parapet preparatory to jumping from the Mountain Lookout.

ELECTIONS ARE NEAR.

Australia Faces an Important Appeal To Country.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 24.—With the close of the Australian Parliament Saturday, members are busy in their constituencies getting ready for the April elections. The chances for returning is said to be good, but the battle will be a bitterly contested one.

The Liberal party during the last three years of labor administration has been forced to adopt methods of the labor party [illegible] a solid platform, to which every candidate will be pledged. The coming election carrying with it referendum on the nationalization of the trusts operating in the Commonwealth, together with federal control of the trade and commerce and industrial affairs, will be one of unusual importance.

Uncle Sam Welcomes Immigrants.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Twelve hundred immigrants from all parts of the world, detained on the threshold of the new world, were given a taste of Uncle Sam's Christmas cheer yesterday that increased their anxiety to enter.

From two big Christmas trees in the dining-room on Ellis Island gifts were distributed to every man, woman and child. Five clergymen made addresses in as many languages, and the entertainment ended with a dinner, in which figured ice cream and other dainties strange to a large majority of the guests.

SCHOONERS FOUNDERED

Went Down in Gulf of Mexico During Recent Storm

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 24.—The British schooner Georgiana, with ten passengers and a crew of five, foundered off Jamaica, in trying to make that port during the November Gulf storm, and all on board were lost, according to despatches received here yesterday. The British schooner Cartagena has not been heard from since Nov. 17, and it is believed that vessel, with her crew of seven, also has gone down.

The Georgiana was a two-masted schooner, which had traded among the West Indies for over twenty-five years, and which had made regular visits to the various ports in the Gulf coast. She sailed from Montejo Bay, Jamaica, on Nov. 16, for Cayman, Brac, with a cargo of merchandise.

The Cartagena also was a two-master, a regular trader between the West Indies and Gulf ports.

COULDN'T FIND THE WOUND

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—Although before he died Frank Langstaff, aged six, son of the caterer to the Ontario Legislature, told his mother that he had been struck on the head by a playmate a few hours before, two doctors were unable to find traces of the blow. Frankie Langstaff's home was at the Parliament Buildings, where he was idol of the hundreds of people working there. He died suddenly yesterday morning after having been ill only a few hours.

Look Out For the Gypsy Moth.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—The Department of Customs has issued an order prohibiting the importation from the New England States of forest plant products including logs, tan bark, posts, poles, railway ties, cord wood and lumber, unless accompanied by a certificate from the United States Department of Agriculture that such products are free from the gypsy moth.

Lifeboat Drifts Ashore.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 24.—An empty lifeboat, which belonged to the Furness liner Florence, wrecked Friday night, has been washed ashore.

The search for the bodies was abandoned at noon yesterday because of a terrible gale which compelled all craft to put into harbor for safety.

Milk Scarce In Galt.

GALT, Dec. 24.—As the result of scarcity of milk in this section, producers have raised prices. Chief among reasons given for the limited supply is that the big dairy companies of Hamilton and Toronto are coming into the district to get milk. Wagons from Hamilton are collecting milk within miles of Galt and large quantities are shipped by express to Toronto.

What Became of Alvaretta

A Case of Too Many Lovers

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Alvaretty!" shrieked Mrs. Winton down the cellar stairs.

Silence.

"Alvaretty!" she shrieked more shrilly up the attic stairway.

Silence here too.

"Where is that girl?" fumed Alvaretta Winton's mother as she looked into the bedrooms and then made another search of the lower floor.

The Wintons were still asking that question at 6 o'clock that evening, for Alvaretta, the pretty daughter of the house had disappeared as suddenly and mysteriously as though the earth had opened and swallowed her up.

Neighbors had joined the anxious family and perhaps a dozen were sitting and standing around the untasted supper which Mrs. Winton had somehow managed to place upon the table. Alva Winton, the widow's only son, was nervously excited over his sister's disappearance.

"Can't you remember where you saw her last, ma?" he asked for the hundredth time since 3 o'clock that afternoon.

Mrs. Winton sank into a chair and turned her reddened eyes upon her son. "It's the queerest thing, now that I think of it," she answered him for the hundredth time. "She made some remark to me while I was frying those doughnuts, and what with the blue smoke in the kitchen and the sputtering of the hot lard, I didn't sense half of what she said." She smiled deprecatingly at the faces turned toward her.

"Well, ma, what was the half of what you did hear?" patiently insisted Alva.

"She jest ran in through the smoke and asked me if she could go somewhere or do something, and I says as I often do to Alvaretty, 'Oh, yes; run along, do child; only don't be too late!' She kissed me and went off, and that's the last I've seen of my daughter." Then Mrs. Winton broke down and cried for the first time that trying afternoon.

"That's all the clew we got to go on. Now, suppose each one of you take a street and go to every house and ask if my sister has been there or if anybody has seen her since noon. We'll all meet here at 8 o'clock." Young Alva's voice quivered.

"Where you going, Alva?" asked Cyrus Jenkins.

"Down among the stores and along the river," said Alva, dropping his voice at the last word so that his mother should not hear.

"If I could only meet Irving Denby—he might have seen her," mused the troubled youth as he made his way toward the stores which were grouped around the postoffice.

Irving Denby was the youth in the drug store who was deeply in love with pretty Alvaretta Winton. He bored her to death with his attentions, for Alvaretta had already made her choice and was engaged to Dave Bemis, who worked in the railroad office in the city.

So Alva's first inquiry was made at the drug store, where Irving's pale, freckled face became elongated with surprise at the question.

"Alvaretta lost? Pshaw, you're joshing me!" he laughed incredulously.

"It's the solemn truth, Irving. I thought maybe you'd seen her go past or something. I thought you might like to help find her," ended Alva, disappointed.

"Of course I would! Let me see—I did see Alvaretta about—why, it was on my way back from dinner. It must have been 1 o'clock. She had on that blue dress she wears and a white hat. I remember because she looked great, and I wondered where she was going," confessed Irving, reddening to his homely ears.

"Which way did she go?"

"Straight up the hill."

"That's something I've learned," said Alva, drawing a breath of relief. "You're the first one who's seen her since before dinner."

At 8 o'clock Alva was hurrying toward his home anxiously hoping that some of the other searchers had been more successful than himself in finding news of his missing sister. Beyond the statement of Irving Denby that he had seen Alvaretta going up the hill that led to the railroad station there had not been a single clew. Perhaps it was because the hour between 12 and 1 is sacred to dinner in Little River, and thus no one had observed Alvaretta. Inquiry at the station was useless, for when Irving reached there he found it closed.

Perhaps Alvaretta would have returned home when he reached there. This thought hurried his steps homeward.

Eyes as anxious as his own questioned him when he entered the dining room once more. He shook his head slowly and then told them what little information he had gained.

As he finished speaking the door opened quickly and admitted Dave Bemis, Alvaretta's sweetheart. His handsome face was quite pale, and he was breathless with haste, and he spoke without ceremony.

"Where's Alvaretta?" he asked sharply.

"We haven't found out yet," explained Alva. "Who told you about it, anyway?"

"Why, of course I knew!" Dave laughed mirthlessly.

"Knew what?"

"That she was lost. I've been trying to find her all the afternoon."

Alva reddened angrily. "See here, Dave Bemis, you're crazy," he declared.

"So are you," retorted Dave promptly, when Mrs. Winton interposed a slender form between them.

"Stop your quarreling this very instant, boys," she commanded. "Now, Dave, you tell what you mean about your looking for Alvaretty. After you've told, why, we'll tell our story."

Dave Bemis hesitated, looked around at the interested faces, flushed redly and then plunged into his story.

"Alvaretta was to meet me in Millton at 1:45. We were going to get married"—

"Married?" shrieked Mrs. Winton aghast.

"Married?" growled young Alva, doubling a fist. "You mean you was running away with my sister?"

"She said her mother gave her permission to marry me this afternoon. My uncle in England is very sick, and I've been sent for. I've got to sail tomorrow morning, and I may be gone a year, for I promised to take care of his business and wind it up if anything happens to him. I telephoned all this to Alvaretta this morning as soon as I heard of it, and I asked her if she wouldn't marry me before I went. I told her she could take the 1:15 train from here, and I would meet her in Millten, and we could get married in time for her to take the 3:30 back here again. I was at the station and waited three trains, but I haven't seen her, and that's why I'm here now."

"For the land sake, I never heard of such a thing!" shrieked Mrs. Winton when Dave had concluded his recital. "Why, that child must have been asking me if she could marry Dave when I wasn't placing any account on what she was asking I was that interested in my doughnuts! I says to her, 'Yes, yes; run along, do!' and she took me at my word!"

"But where is she now?" demanded Alva impatiently.

"Yes; where is she now?" repeated Dave.

"Nobody knows. Listen while I tell you what we know about it."

So Dave listened while they told him about the mysterious disappearance of Alvaretta and how Irving Denby's statement that he had seen her on the way to the station was the only proof they had that Alvaretta had really started to meet her lover and be married.

"What shall we do now?" Dave was asking when the door was pushed slowly open and a girl's slender form stepped within the room. She wore a pretty blue dress showing traces of dust around the bottom and a white hat very much askew atop of her golden hair.

It was Alvaretta Winton.

"Alvaretta!" they all screamed at once.

"Has any one seen Irving Denby?" she asked, slowly looking from one to another. "Is he here now?"

"No—why?" Alva was holding one hand and Dave Bemis the other hand, and her mother had both arms around her neck. It was difficult for Alvaretta to answer until they freed her.

"I was going to say if he is here one of you must take him out and thrash him," said Alvaretta calmly, and thereupon she proceeded to give most excellent reasons why young Denby should be chastised.

"He sent word up to the house that I was wanted at the long distance telephone," said Alvaretta calmly, "and as mother was busy I just ran down the street and took the message, not knowing that Irving was in the back of the store listening at Mr. Peters' private phone. Dave wanted me to come down to Millton and marry him at once, so I told him I'd go home and ask mother and if she consented I'd meet him there on the arrival of the 4:45.

"Mother was frying doughnuts, and I could scarcely see her through the blue smoke, and the hissing of the hot fat was noisy too. I went up to her and spoke into her good ear. I said, 'Ma, Dave has telephoned that he's got to go to England and may be gone a year and I can go to Millton and marry him now. I'll come right home again.'

"I didn't believe she'd consent, and so I was never more surprised in my life than when she said, 'Yes, yes; run along, do!' So I hurried and got ready, and as I passed the drug store I happened to notice that the door of our church was wide open. I was going to be married, and I felt kind of solemn and as if I wanted to be alone for a few minutes, so I just slipped inside there where it was dark and cool, and when I tried to get out I declare if the door wasn't locked. I cried and screamed, and nobody heard me until a half hour ago somebody crept up the steps and unlocked the door. I was right there and pulled the door open before he could get very far away. It was Irving Denby. Wasn't he the mean, jealous thing?"

Alvaretta glanced indignantly around.

Before any one could answer there came a knock at the door. When it was opened it revealed the mild countenance of the minister.

"They tell me Alvaretta is lost," he was beginning when he saw the girl's blooming face.

Dave Bemis pressed forward, Alvaretta's hand in his.

"You're just in time, Mr. Evans," he said suggestively.

And that was how Alvaretta's elopement ended up in a wedding at home.

Yellow Writing Paper Easy on Eyes.

Oculists have often called attention to the fact that the eyes are easily fatigued by the reflection from white paper, especially when the surface is under a strong light. Since green is known to be the color most restful to the eyes, it is a common practice to use wall papers and draperies of that color in libraries and private studies. For writing paper, however, green is an unsatisfactory color. It imparts a reddish appearance to the writing and makes it hard to read. Yellow writing paper is not open to the same objection. In strong daylight it is softer than pure white paper, and in artificial light is not too dark. Black letters on a yellowish background show clear and distinct. Many mathematicians use yellow paper in figuring long and difficult calculations, and many writers have adopted it for manuscripts.—Youth's Companion.

Articles Marked "Patented."

We are all accustomed to see a patented article marked "Patented," with the date of the patent. It is doubtful, however, whether one in a hundred who notices the mark realizes its importance to the patentee. The statute on the subject makes it the duty of all patentees or those holding under or making the patented article for them to apply the mark "Patented," together with the day and year the patent was granted, and the same statute provides as a penalty for not making that "in any suit for infringement by the party failing to so mark no damages shall be recovered by the plaintiff, except on proof that the defendant was duly notified of the infringement and continued after such notice, to make use or vend the article so patented."—Scientific American.

Give Your Eyes a Holiday.

Everybody should give his eyes a day's holiday at least once a month, says a writer. In the present age we experience far more strain owing to increasing reading habits and multitudes of glaring lights than our forefathers did and we suffer more from headaches. Therefore give your eyes a holiday as frequently as possible. Give them a day's absolute rest and the relief next day will be most refreshing. When taking an eye holiday a room with green wall paper is a good place to rest in if one cannot get to the country among nature's green fields and woods. Green rests the eyes more than any other color.

An Upward Step

Made by a Station Agent

By MARK TRAVERS

James Doughty went to work in a telegraph office carrying messages when he was ten years old. When not engaged at what he was hired to do he was questioning the operators as to how they communicated with distant points, the alphabet they used and other matters pertaining to telegraphy. When he was twelve, though he would not have been fitted to fill an operator's position, he knew many things about the telegraphic system that some operators did not know, for Jimmie was of an inquiring turn of mind and was always looking into things and the reasons for their being.

When he was fourteen, being large and strong for his age, he was given a job as assistant in the construction department of a telephone company. Here, too, Jimmie wanted to know the "why and wherefore" and at the same time absorbed the practical features of making telephone lines. By the time he was eighteen years old, having the materials, he was perfectly capable of setting up a telegraph or telephone line and operating it.

The first situation of any importance Jimmie secured was that of station agent on the Y. C. and St. G. railroad. But he was only nineteen, and to secure such a place he was obliged to take a station in a desolate place, the nearest house being a mile away. At this house he took his meals, sleeping in a room over the station.

In the family with which he boarded was a country lass two or three years younger than Jimmie, whose blue eyes and yellow hair naturally had an effect on the young station agent. A single girl off by herself is to a young man as a jackknife is to a boy. That same knife in a store among a hundred other knives is not nearly so beautiful as when he gets it home.

It wasn't long before Jimmie and Kitty concluded that it would not be half so lonely for Jimmie if they could build a little nest nearer the station, where they would dwell together. Jimmie had the framework of a small house and the other necessary parts shipped to him. The people thereabouts got together for a house raising, and Kitty's pop, with occasional help from Jimmie, did the rest, except the painting, which Jimmie did at such times as he could leave the station.

When all was finished those who had helped to build the nest were invited to the wedding and after it was over left the young couple in their new home. The first thing Jimmie did after they were married was to build a telephone from the station to his home. He located the station end of it in the room above, which he had used for a bedroom, in order that if any one came in while he was talking with his wife he might not be overheard. There was a steep, narrow staircase leading up to this room from the waiting room, ticket and telegraph office below.

He wrote to his old employers, the telephone company, to send him the apparatus he needed, knowing that they had plenty such material in old stock, and they made him a present of an outfit, including a desk transmitter and receiver. Since there were nights that he was obliged to remain at the station he put the instrument between his cot and the side of the house. Since the latter was not plastered there was a convenient place for it between two joists and the clapboards. Often when he was about to snatch an hour's sleep he would throw himself on the cot, pick up the instrument, call Kitty for a few words, then set it down again on the floor. The wires passed directly out of the house, down behind a water spout and thence underground to Jimmie's home.

During the day, when confined to the station, he would often go upstairs, especially after the baby came, to call up Kitty and ask her how she was getting on, if she wanted anything and to send a kiss for both mother and child. One day while thus engaged a person came into the station, and since the room below was neither sealed nor plastered Jim was overheard. After that when telephoning, upon hearing a step below, he wrapped his head and the instrument in a bedquilt, which deadened the sound.

These details may seem unimportant, but a time came when they were a turning point in Jimmie's life. But that was not for some time after his marriage. Meanwhile he was thinking about his wife and baby's future. The appearance of a helpless child in a man's life stimulates him to action. Jimmie was not getting on very fast in accumulating surplus funds, and he felt the responsibilities resting upon him. He didn't like the idea in case he should die of leaving his wife with no income, and as for the baby, a boy, he wished him to have the advantage of an education. That meant the wherewithal to secure one. Since the father had not been able to get much education himself, he understood the disadvantage of being thus deprived and was all the more eager that his son should be favored.

Jim was now a man of twenty-five years. One night there were extra trains on the railroad making their way between the regular numbers, and Jim was obliged to remain at the station. He was sitting at his operating table "dispatching" when he thought he heard the station door creak, but he was too busy to pay any attention to it. The clicking of his instrument went on, drowning any light sound that might be made. Suddenly he heard a click, not of his instrument, but of an entirely different kind. It came from behind him. He turned, and there stood a masked man covering him with a revolver.

"Young man," said the intruder, "another touch on that key and I pulls on this trigger. Is the westbound express on time?"

For a few moments Jim could not find voice to reply. Then another period slipped by, during which he was thinking what he could do to save the express from robbery. In all perhaps twenty seconds passed. The man advanced a step and placed the muzzle of the revolver against the agent's cheek.

"It's twenty-five minutes late," said Jim.

"What?"

Jim repeated what he had said. Had the train been on time it would have been due in ten minutes. A holdup at or near the station was undoubtedly intended, and this lapse of time was not relished by the masked man. He was joined by two more men, also masked, and, having ordered the agent away from the instrument, they held a conference. Then the one who had entered first turned to Jim and was about to say something when he saw a lantern of red glass sitting beside the operating table.

"Oh, there it is," he said, and, taking up the lantern, he put a lighted match to the wick. Pulling a silver watch from his pocket, he glanced at it and remarked to the others that they were obliged to wait half an hour. Then he said:

"One of you will have to take care of this young man."

"Can't we put him out of the way?" suggested one of the others. "There's only three of us to do the job, and we can't spare a man for that. Can't we lock him up somewhere?"

He glanced about and, seeing the stairway leading to Jim's room above, seized the lantern and ran up with it. In a few minutes he returned and told the others that there was a room on the second story to hold the operator if they could make it safe. Then he hunted about till he found a hammer and some nails and, returning, securely nailed the windows. Jim was put in the room and the door nailed so firmly that he could not possibly open it.

At this Jim was delighted. Not fearing to be interrupted, he seized his telephone instrument. But, hearing the men below, he paused. Had he not better wait till they had gone out? No. They would go out only to stop and rob the train, and that would be too late. Covering his head and the receiver with his bedclothing, he called Kitty.

"What is it?"

"Robbers, who are going to hold up the westbound express. Take a lantern and run as fast as you can by the road—don't light the lantern—to the trestlework. The woods will screen you. Light the lantern and stop the train."

There was a quick step on the stairs, and some one stopped at the door. Those below had evidently heard sounds and had come up to see what they meant. But they had nailed up the door and couldn't get in. After listening a few minutes the man went down again.

Jim knew that his wife had time to reach the place he had indicated, where she was not likely to be observed by the robbers, for he could still hear them downstairs and concluded that they would signal the train from the station. As the time passed and he still heard them moving about below he gathered confidence. He stood looking at his watch till it was nearly time for the train to arrive, then heard the men go out together.

There was an anxious wait for Jim, nailed up as he was, for another twenty minutes, not knowing whether Kitty or the robbers had succeeded. Then came a ring at his telephone bell.

"Is it you, Kit?" he asked.

"Yes," came the voice of one gasping for breath.

"Did you stop 'em?"

"Yes."

"Well?"

"They went back two miles to G. to get some firearms."

"What else?"

"That's all I know."

"Good for you, little girl. Our fortune is made."

"Why?"

"This train carries treasure. You have saved it. I can ask for a better position."

When Jim was let out of his prison he learned that after getting an additional supply of arms the train had come on, been signaled to stop, had obeyed the signal, and when the robbers advanced to kill the express messenger they had been received by a volley. One robber was killed outright and the two others were badly wounded.

Jim was relieved from his station and ordered to report at the general offices of the road. There he was informed that he might have his choice of several important stations. The express company sent for the woman who had signaled the train and presented her with a check for $5,000. To her husband they also gave $1,000. In the express car of the train that was to have been held up was $40,000 in currency.

James Doughty is now division superintendent of a telephone company, and his son is a student in college.

Bell Ringing Is an Art.

"Bell ringing is a science," said a master of the art. "It is called campanology, and there are abstruse and technical terms in it, like 'Kent treble bob,' 'Stedman cinques,' 'double court bob,' 'dodges,' 'nolls' and 'stingoes.' Each of these terms defines a certain phase or kind of bell ringing. In England there is a society, the Central Council of Bell Ringers, that every campanologist desires ardently to belong to. Maybe you think bell ringing is simple? Do you know what a peal is? A peal in ringers' parlance is a series of 5,000 changes rung upon a chime, no change occurring more than once."

It Didn't Matter.

"What are you doing, dear?" asked the little girl's mother as she paused to look at some very strange marks the child was making on a piece of paper.

"I'm writing a letter to Lillie Smith," was the answer.

"But, my dear," laughed the mother, "you don't know how to write."

"Oh, that doesn't matter, mother! Lillie doesn't know how to read."—Ladies' Home Journal.

After All Things.

"Howard," said the visitor, "are you going to be a minister, like your father, when you grow up?"

"No, ma'am," answered Howard. "I'm going to be a waiter."

"Why?" queried the surprised visitor.

"'Cause papa says that all things come to him who waits," was the reply.—Chicago News.

Milady's Mirror

The New Beauty Stunt.

"Come, have a game of grace hoops with me," said a girl recently. "Stand over there and catch the hoop on these sticks when I toss it to you from mine."

"Why play grace hoops? It's such a silly, childish game. Let's have a game of bridge."

"This is my hour for exercise. I cannot neglect it, even for bridge. You, too, would do well to take more healthful exercise. You are really getting too stout."

"Too stout? Horrors! Do tell me what I can do to keep myself slender, yet in good physical condition."

"It's really quite simple. I have found a way that, for me at least, takes the place of any expensive 'exerciser' I could buy. Watch while I give you a demonstration of the many splendid exercises that can be practiced with a child's hoop.

"Every day I take what time I can for this—sometimes it's an hour, sometimes less—but always twenty minutes or more.

"For agility I begin and conclude with the grace hoops. Yes, it does give grace, for if one is light on her feet, agile, she is pretty sure to possess a fair amount of grace. I toss the hoop into the air from the points of the sticks, then catch it on them again as it descends. If any one will play with me we enjoy an active game, tossing the hoop from one to the other, trying not to let it fall, for that would count a point against the one who did.

"Then I take this large hoop and use it as a jumping rope. That keeps the muscles of my fingers, forearm, shoulders and lower limbs in good condition. I started by jumping through the hoop five times, but now I can do it twenty-five times without trouble.

"After a great deal of practice I have learned to balance the hoop on the stick—this for steadiness of nerve and poise. That is an excellent exercise, but quite difficult to accomplish, but it is worth the trouble to learn in the beneficial results obtained.

"I use these two embroidery hoops in place of dumbbells. You know the weight of dumbbells has very little effect upon the muscular development. They only serve as a means of exercise. One can get the same results with these little hoops or with any other article that can be conveniently held in the hands, for that matter, if one will imagine that they are heavy dumbbells and lift them with all the force necessary to employ with the real article.

"I let my arms hang loosely at the sides, grasping the hoops firmly in each hand, then raise them even with the shoulders and lower them five times, lifting them slowly, as if their weight were great; then five times over my head; in front of my body, where they touch each time; then I bend and touch the floor and last touch them behind my back. Oh, it's a fine general exercise! It limbers up my muscles and sets the blood circulating through my body splendidly."

Catarrhozone

Dry air treatment is the one treatment that will cure these diseases.

What stomach medicine has ever been known to cure Catarrh or Bronchitis?

Catarrhozone is not a stomach medicine, but an air medicine, that carries to the remotest parts of the throat, lungs, and air cells little drops of healing so curative that whenever it touches germ life it kills and eradicates them from the system.

Thousands of doctors and patients have been disappointed by using stomach medicines for coughs and colds. Have you not found it a rather roundabout way to reach the diseased portion of the throat and lungs?

Why not use Catarrhozone, which is breathed to the very root of the disease and heals so quickly and perfectly that every spot is rebuilt with new healthy tissue?

Catarrhozone is the only medicine that will cure. Thousands have testified.

Think for a moment. Is it not sense? Little drops of healing—the air carries them just where disease exists. That is why

AD CLUB MOVEMENT

One of the by-products of the Advertising Club movement is the development of public men. The world does not realize as yet what a crop of public speakers is being developed by the off-hand discussion of serious topics which is going on at every meeting in boores of advertising clubs all over America. The art of working together in harness with other men, subduing idiosyncrasies and cultivating harmonies, is an essential part of successful public life. When you add to these accomplishments the originality and independence which are native to the real advertising man and the think of the sources of power that are open to him and his expert knowledge of the great art of creating public opinion, is it any wonder that the advertising man is beginning to figure conspicuously in political life in the United States. The only reason he has not taken his proper place earlier in the councils of the people has been his unfamiliarity with organization work, a shortcoming which is being corrected by experience in the Advertising Club movement in Canada and the United States.

THE FACTS OF THE CASE

With a Christmas bouquet of seven questions, the Examiner tries to blame the County Solicitor and Dominion representatives from this county for the claim, and enforcement of that claim by the Government, in the matter of the Buckhorn bridge. Asking all kinds of questions and indulging in innuendo will not hide or obscure the facts.

The one person to blame is Mr. J. R. Stratton. The County entered into an obligation with the Government to pay a sum of money—$3,000.00—as a part of the cost of construction of the Buckhorn bridge and dam. The county expected, through its County Council, to make payment up until the time that Mr. Stratton put forward the proposition that he would undertake to have the county relieved from payment. If the county should not have undertaken to settle the amount it should have said so at the time. If the claim was not a fair one, it should have been objected to, and if it was fair it should have been paid.

Mr. Stratton undertook to have this claim passed, many months before the old Government went out of power. He interested Hon. Mr. Graham in the proposition. Hon. Mr. Graham addressed a letter in April, 1911, in which he admitted that something might be done, but was not definite.

Mr. Stratton took no further thought in the matter. He did nothing in the time that elapsed before the House adjourned. He did nothing afterwards.it resulted in a sort of left over, for which Mr. Burnham nor Mr. Sexsmith were responsible.

Nor was the incoming Government committed to carrying out the proposition put forward by Mr. Stratton. He, no doubt, thought to make himself a good fellow with the county and evidently gave it up.

The County Solicitor has advised his clients, the county, and is no doubt acting on instructions from the County Council. Certainly the Council approves of the course taken, and the strictures of the Examiner do not cause much alarm during this Christmas season.

ANOTHER AVIATION RECORD

Though an aviator perishes every week, Winter and Summer, the art advances, and the standard of endeavor that falls from the hand of one is snatched up by another and carried to new heights. The record for altitude has now been set at 19,032 feet by Roland Garros, the French aviator. In the middle of the Summer the world was amazed at the news that Czakay, the Austrian, had attained a height of 13,779 feet; but in September Garros mounted to 16,240 feet, and now has beaten this mark by more than half a mile. There is only one mountain on the Continent that Garros would not have flown over at this height, and that is Mount McKinley, 20,300 feet. Everist, the highest mountain in the world, is estimated at 29,000 feet, but none of the famous Alpine peaks thrusts itself so far into the eternal blue has Garros has ascended. Balloonists have gone much higher than Garros, but, of course, there is hardly any limit to the altitude that may be reached in a balloon apart from the ability of the passengers to breathe the rarified air and withstand the piercing cold. The idea that human life is impossible at great altitudes is a notion we have received from Alpinists, who have been obliged to undergo the hardest kind of physical toil, such as cutting steps in the ice in a bitter wind, as they forced their way slowly up the almost perpendicular side of a mountain. Garros' experiences and those of several balloonists show that it is quite easy to breathe at great heights, so long as no violent exercise is attempted. In a balloon or a flying machine exercise of any kind is not encouraged, and there is no physical reason why Garros' record should not be excelled either by himself or by some equally daring and skilful aviator. It is within the bounds of possibility that visits to the upper air strata will eventually enrich science, but it is much more possible that it will swell the already formidable list of those who have perished by feats of senseless daring. Seeking new altitude records has not even the excuse of thrilling the crowd, for a man as high in the air as Garros must have been invisible and only a small scientific instrument could bear witness to the wonderful ascent he had made.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Bulgaria, Montenegro and Servia are satisfied to have their share of Turkey served without Greece.

From the Sudbury Star: The good roads movement, as an adjunct of settlement and agriculture, is pretty active in New Ontario just now, and even Sudbury has taken a stir, albeit that a certain false prophet some time ago fancied that this was a sort of place thrown up as if by a sudden convulsion of nature and set down in a mass of rock and mountain.

The Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, denounces great cities as an evil that should be legislated against. He is in favor of a garden city in which each house is surrounded by a plot of ground. This is the idea of the poet, who sighed for the good old days in England when every rood of ground maintained its man. The drift is continually towards the great centres of population. And the greater the hiving the more the hivers seem to like it.

KEEPING HORSES

Figures From Investigation With Over 1000 Equines

The truth of the statement that the methods of handling and the stable accommodations have a marked influence on the amount of feed required to keep a horse in good condition has been proven by investigations made by the animal husbandry students of the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University. These investigations have been carried on for several years; over 1,000 head of horses have been included. It was found that the concerns with the poorest accommodations for their horses and where the least care was given, were paying out the largest amount for feed.

The average cost of keeping horses in Columbus, where the College is situated, is 40.1 cents a day, and, contrary to popular belief, heavy express horses are fed for nearly two and a half cents less than light driving horses. The lowest cost was $89.02 per year in the case of an underfed animal, and the highest cost was $229.92, a stallion being fitted for show.

One noticeable fact was the absence of variety in the ration, the principal roughage being timothy hay the year round, and it was common to find this feed given in excess. Corn and oats constituted principal grains fed. In one instance a saving of $11.55 per animal, or a yearly saving of $660, was brought about by the use of four pounds of ot straw in place of a similar amount of hay.

The Democracy of Death.

In the democracy of the dead all men at last are equal. There is neither rank nor standing nor prerogative in the republic of the grave. At this fatal threshold the philosopher ceases to be wise, and the song of the poet is silent. Dives relinquishes his millions and Lazarus his rags. The poor man is as rich as the richest, and the rich man is as poor as the pauper. The creditor loses his usury, and the debtor is acquitted of his obligation. There the proud man surrenders his dignities, the politician his honors, the worldling his pleasures. The invalid needs no physician, and the laborer rests from unrequited toil. Here at last is nature's final degree in equity. The wrongs of time are redressed, injustice is expiated, the irony of fate is refuted, the unequal distribution of wealth, honor, capacity, pleasure and opportunity which makes life so cruel and inexplicable ceases in the realm of death. The strongest there has no supremacy, and the weakest needs no defense. The mightiest captain succumbs to that invincible adversary, who disarms alike the victor and the vanquished.—John J. Ingalls.

A Bird Performer.

Canaries and other tame birds are sometimes taught to perform tricks, but it always has been regarded almost an impossibility to train a wild bird. Andrew Hume, the famous Scotch bird lover, trained one of the wildest of Scotch birds to perform all sorts of remarkable tricks—to jump and keep time with the skipping rope, to perform on the slack and tight rope, climb an upright rope, stand on top of a running carriage, draw cards out of a box, mount a ladder and ring a bell, go round a wheeling stair step by step and fly to its owner's head when called upon.

Every man has a notion that his "principles" are better than those of other people.

WE wish everyone a MERRY CHRISTMAS and a HAPPY and PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Respectfully yours,

Just Too Dear For Anything.

A story is told concerning a famous man of letters who visited Washington and appeared at a dinner party. He sat next to a young girl, who rattled away at the famous man. He wanted to talk to his hostess, but hadn't a chance. The girl said to him: "I'm awfully stuck on Shakespeare. Don't you think he's terribly interesting?" Everybody listened to hear the great man's brilliant reply, for as a Shakespearean scholar he has few peers. "Yes," he said solemnly, "I do think he is interesting. I think he is more than that. I think Shakespeare is just simply too dear for anything!"

HEAVY BUSINESS AT THE STAMP VENDORS WICKET

The demand for stamps at the post office were perhaps the heaviest since the Christmas mailing season began in earnest about a week ago. Congestion was created owing to the large number who presented parcels to be weighed seeking information about the arrival and departure of the mails, etc.

It was frequently remarked by those standing about that were another temporary stamp office available it would greatly expedite matters and eliminate much of the continuous congestion.

The registered letters and postal note wickets have been crowded for the past several days.

CHORAL SOCIETY IS PROGRESSING

Orchestral and Full Scores of the Messiah, Have Been Purchased

Enquiries as to the progress of the St. George's Choral Society in their big undertaking to produce Handel's "Messiah" next spring in this city elicit the pleasing news that the grand old Oratorio is progressing favorably, nearly all the numbers intended to be used having been put in practice. It is pleasant to note that several programs of music this Christmas contain "Messiah" numbers, perhaps to a greater extent than usual, and it may be taken that the forthcoming presentation, in which choristers from so many city choirs are interested is responsible for this. Be that as it may the presence of a large body of choral singers can have nothing but good effects and the promoters deserve all the encouragement possible to give them. It is understood that the Choral Executive Committee have purchased outright the Orchestral and full scores of the Oratorio, and that the Conservatory Orchestra will commence to practice it on its arrival. Thus the presentation combining vocal and instrumental music so happily promises to be a united effort worthy of the city musicians and the best wishes of all will accompany them as they work steadily on to as far as possible give a really good presentation when the grand day arrives. It is estimated that the chorus and orchestra will number two hundred.

Peterborough Temple Band

The annual serenading by the Salvation Army Temple band will commence to-night, when the band will play in the downtown business section of the city. Serenading will continue for one week. There is every reason to believe the band will be well received by the merchants and citizens who appreciate this splendid organization. Recognition of the same has been made before and will be made again. The band needs funds to continue to hold its sound position. Aid from the public is not without a return. Take the Temple band away from Peterboro and citizens would suffer a loss not easily to be overcome.

BUCK OFF ON CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED HOUSE BREAKING

Romaine Street Resident Tells of Actions of Man, at Early Hour of the Morning—Marauder Was Frightened Away—Detective Newhall Tells of Conversation With Prisoner

After a remand, Frederick Buck was brought up in police court this morning on a charge of unlawfully attempting to break into the house on 519 Romaine Street. Through his solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, the prisoner, who had previously pleaded not guilty, elected summary trial.

The complainant told the court of being alarmed on the morning of December 13th, about 3.20, by the sound of someone fumbling with a key at the the lock of the dining room, on the outside. She was alone in the house with several small children. On hearing the noise she came downstairs and yelled loudly the words "hello there." The noise continued, however, and complainant said she decided to run for help and succeeded in arousing her next door neighbor, Mr. Lyman, who came in about six or seven minutes later. She went back to the house alone to await the arrival of Mr. Lyman. Hearing the noise of footsteps running from the rear of the house to the front, she went out expecting it to be her neighbor coming. She was startled to see a man bare-headed and wearing a long dark coat, running swiftly out to the street.

LOOKED LIKE BUCK

The witness could not identify the man, but she thought he looked much like Buck, the prisoner, by his size and height. Examined by Mr. Gordon, she admitted that a key belonging to the house had disappeared about a month previously. Since the attempted entry to the house the key had been returned. A young girl from Ardendale, named Bernice Steele, so complainant stated, was staying at Lyman's at the time in question who had told her that Buck was at her place on the night of the attempted burglary.

Detective Newhall gave a summary of his investigation and discovery of footprints after being called to the house the morning after. The tracks of the footmarks conformed pretty much with the shape of the booths worn by Buck, and the footprints on the side of the house along which the complainant claimed to have seen a man running. The same evening he watched the house next door to the home of complainant, at 517 Romaine Street, for two hours. Coming up street he learned by inquiry that the man, Fred. Buck, was known to the police department as Harold Wilson.

On the following Sunday afternoon P.C. Brown brought Buck to the police station. There, he was warned by the officer, that anything he might say would be used as evidence against him. He was searched, and letters were found upon him addressed to Harold Wilson and Frederick Buck. One of the two letters was torn in two by Buck, before the officers could prevent it. The prisoner then admitted having accompanied the girl, Bernice Steele, to 517 Romaine Street, on the morning of December 13th, and left her place at three o'clock, running like h——l carrying his hat in his hand. His explanation for running was that he was afraid he would get shot.

In summing up the case, Crown Attorney Wood, thought it was well established that Buck had been in the locality on the night. It was also a fact that the key to the dining room had been returned to complainant by the girl, Bernice Steele, with whom Buck appeared to have been keeping company. He considered that the fact of the footprints conforming with the prisoner's shoes, and that he was associating with the girl at the unseemly hour of three o'clock would indicate that he was the man who had tried to enter the house.

Mr. Gordon, however, thought Buck's reason for running was undoubtedly because of the fear that he would be caught in an uncompromising position. Mr. Gordon thought Mrs. Feeley was suffering from a super-nervousness over the affair. There was not sufficient evidence submitted to the court, said Mr. Gordon, to prove that Buck was the man who tried to enter the house.

Magistrate Dumble said that it was undoubtedly proven that Buck was a blackguard. The evidence however, was not strong enough to justify him in finding him actually guilty of entering the house, although a very fair conclusion might be drawn.

The prisoner was discharged.

THE STORY OF THE STAR

Given by Junior Choir At Park St. Baptist Church

The auditorium of the Park street Baptist Church was filled to overflowing last night, with a few in the gallery to hear the Junior Choir of the church, under the capable leadership of Mr. Harry Hill, assisted by Miss Ethel Hill, rehearse Ida Reed Smith's beautiful Christmas Cantata, with music by Professor Towne "The Story of the Star."

To say that it was a success, is simply to tell the unvarnished truth without any frills whatsoever, there was not one single mistake in the whole performance, and considering the disadvantage Mr. Hill and his Junior Choir were under, by virtue of the Taylor and Hatch special services, the staging of the Cantata was certainly more than could have been expected.

To single out any one would be very unbecoming, for all did well, from the six little tots of the primary class up to the big folks.

Some of the oldest members of the church were heard to remark—"The best we ever had."

During the evening Santa Claus made an unexpected visit and brought in presents and candies for the children.

The Park street Sunday School is manned by one of the best staffs of teachers in the city, and with Mr. W. H. Moore as superintendent, expect to accomplish great things for the school.

By special request from the large audience the Cantata will be repeated next Sunday evening. Many who were unable to be present will have an opportunity of hearing this beautiful Christmas Cantata.

Mrs. Riddiford was presented during the evening with a magnificent electric sewing lamp, by the members of the Ladies' Helping-Hand Bible Class, as a mark of their esteem. The evening closed with prayer.

DEVELOPMENT OF C.P.R. LANDS

Mr. J. S. Dennis, assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and head of the Department of Natural Resources, has made a startling announcement in respect to the future policy of the C.P.R. in connection with the development of the unsold land in the West of which the railway company has still seven millions of acres for the advent of the settler. The C.P.R has definitely decided not to sell any more land to speculators, but will offer it to bona fide settlers from North America, the British Isles and Northern Europe.

At the beginning of this year, the Natural Resources Department sprung another surprise on the farming community, in the shape of loans to American farmers to the extent of $2,000 which could be expended in the improvement of the farm and the erection of farm buildings. Those who were able to participate in this magnificent offer were farmers who had a little capital to buy land and who possessed a little stock. The idea was again successful in inducing the best of the American farmers who were paying high land rents to trek to Western Canada.

By the new terms which the company have decided to offer the great tracts of fertile land which lies near or in close proximity to the company's lines in the West and within hail of established towns, settlers will have the privilege of paying the amount of the purchase price of the land in twenty years instead of ten as heretofore, which will give them an opportunity of getting on to their feet at the commencement. The payments of course, carry the usual six per cent. interest as in the past. Furthermore, there will be an additional attraction in the form of a loan of $2,000 from the company, also payable in twenty years with interest at six per cent. which the farmer may use in improvement of his land or in the erection of buildings, and the only security the company has is the land itself, which guarantees the confidence of the company in the fertility of the soil and in the ability of the farmer who takes advantage of this unique offer. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is pursuing this policy for the development of the Canadian West, and this scheme will not be simply confined to the British Isles or the United States, but will be open to all who will actually settle on the land or to experienced agriculturalists.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 21, were 1250 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 350 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale consisted of 750 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 150 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady, owing to the fact that the supply was small, but it was quite ample to fill all requirements, as butchers and packers in most cases bought sufficient stock last week to provide for the holiday trade, consequently the demand was somewhat limited and trade on the whole was rather slow.

The offerings of sheep and lambs was small and the tone firm, at unchanged prices. Demand was good. The trade in calves was quiet. In hogs the feeling was firm with a good demand from packers and an active trade was done in the line at last week's prices.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 to $6.75; medium, $5.50 to $6.50; common, $4.25 to $4.70; canners, $2.50 to $3; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $4.75 to $5; bulls, $3.50 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; common and medium, each, $50 to $80; springers, $56 to $65.

WINTER TOURIST TRIPS

Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern, luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With one change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the Sunny South or the Pacific Coast, where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides, it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes, via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line, making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m., January 6th, via Detroit, for Palm Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

R. A. Rose, City Passenger and Ticket Agent. Phone 259.

Underground Stream Bursts.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 24—Hundreds of workmen engaged in constructing the Moutdor tunnel through the Jura Mountains, between Italy and France, had a narrow escape from death yesterday when the pickaxe of one of the workmen opened a powerful subterranean stream.

The laborers fled before the greater mass of water which spurted up into the tunnel at the rate of 150 cubic feet a second, flooding it and the neighboring villages. The damage done by the water is heavy. There were no casualties.

New Shipping Regulations.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—The Canadian Board of Steamboat Inspection has had under advisement the new regulations adopted by the British Board of Trade as a result of the Titanic disaster.

It's report is expected in a few days when the department will summon a conference of the shipping interests to express their views upon the recommendations.

An international conference has also been suggested, and if this is held Canada will send representatives.

Bring your suburbs closer in

THE value of city real estate is directly proportionate to its travel-distance from the business centre.

There's a difference between "travel-distance," and the number of miles "as the crow flies." One lot may be only a half-mile from the city hall, on a muddy, unpaved back street, and be worth less than another lot of equal size two miles farther out, but easily accessible by street car or well-paved streets.

Well-paved streets not only increase the value of property immediately adjacent to them—but also that of land in all the territory for which they carry traffic. And since the value of land in the business centre is dependent upon comparison with that farther out, these same streets enhance business-property values quite as much.

You can't actually move a piece of real estate. But you can, for all practical purposes, bring every lot closer in by paving with Concrete

Realty values are not based upon temporary conditions. Nor can the advantages of good streets be considered in establishing realty values, if the street improvements are temporary. Such temporary improvements are more liabilities than assets, because they are always needing repairs and must ultimately be entirely replaced.

Concrete is the only economical road-material that is also permanent. Its first cost—in many cases little higher than that of good macadam—is its final cost; for the expense of maintenance is practically nothing.

Windsor
Ontario

was one of the first Canadian cities to use Concrete for street paving. Prior to 1908, 20,000 square yards of concrete pavement had been laid. This quantity has been increased every year since then. The cost—for a "two-course" pavement, consisting of Concrete foundation and wearing surface of Cement Mortar—has varied from 90 cents to $1.15 per square yard. At the same time the cost of macadam was about $1.10 per square yard.

To use a poorer material than concrete because it's cheaper, is most extravagant economy, because the expense of keeping cheaper pavement in decent condition soon mounts up to far more than the total cost of a concrete road.

We have gathered all the facts about Concrete pavements. They will interest every citizen who appreciates the value of good streets and roads enough to use his influence on behalf of them.

We will send this information to you, without cost or obligation.

PETES MADE GOOD SHOWING AGAINST COLLEGIANS; WERE ONLY TWO BEHIND

Teams Were Tied at the Half and Locals Went Ahead After the Rest - Final Score 5-3.

Senior Intermediate and Junior O. H. A. players made a remarkably good showing against Ottawa College in an exhibition game of hockey at Brock Street rink last night, and if the local players don't make a few dents in the hockey map this season, a whole lot of people will miss their guess.

The score at the first period stood 2-2; at the finish it was 5-3, but the fans were quite satisfied. They came and saw the blue and white boys make a splendid showing, in what was an unequal struggle. The visitors having had ice at their disposal were away in front in condition. For several of the locals, it was the first skate of the season, while the majority went into the game with but one hour's practice, that of the previous Saturday.

Yet the Collegians strengthened by the presence of Frank Heffernan had to work their heads off to overcome a one goal lead in the second half and win out by a brace. They were able to finish strong, while the locals were all in and didn't have the goods. And the Capital City lads had one of the best goal tenders in the business in Leo. Derocher. On the form shown last season and in last night's fray, Derocher leads 'em all. If Leonidas had a guilty conscience throughout that exciting battle, he had everything possible.

Heffernan is authority for the statement that Pete Spratt is some spiller and should be able to land a job on any respectable bowling alley. They had a bunch of fun themselves and the fans had their share. Spratt saved several tallies by his effective defense work, besides going out with the rubber and assisting the line. Working with him was Bradshaw, who, while not in any condition to go through a hard game, gave promise of something better. Percy Bond also had a workout in the defence. Boswell started in the nets and was followed by Dwyer.

On the line Kelly, Coughlin and Mason played the entire game, Park at centre giving way to Ross at half time, and the latter being relieved by Armstrong. There isn't any doubt whatever that a fast forward line can be selected to figure on the senior line-up. Mason, a new man, caught the fancy of the crowd. In many cases the players, apparently, had the idea that they owned the puck and the rubber factories, and suspended operations. A few practices, however, will see a change.

The Ottawa line was very fast but not so speedy as might be expected. With another week's practice, such a game would be a light lunch for the locals. Mason scored the first goal for Peterborough on a nice rush, and some fast work, in which he beat the Ottawa defence and landed the rubber past Derocher. Jerry Coughlin took the next from a scrimmage at the goal, and the third, in the second half, after Mason worked the disc out from behind the nets.

The teams as they first appeared on the ice lined up as follows:

Peterborough—Goal, Boswell; point, Spratt; cover, Bradshaw; Rover, Mason; centre, Park; left, Kelly; right, Coughlin.

NOTES.

Over one thousand people witnessed the game last night. What will the attendance be at a real game?

It was a hard contest for both teams; one of those games where it is hard to show your class.

Judging from his work last night, Joe Dwyer is not handicapped by stage fright. All teams look alike to Joseph.

The fans were anything but glad when an offside was called on the first goal, netted by Mason.

The first senior game for Peterborough scheduled for December 30, has been moved forward to January 3.

Jack Thirabeck was again on the job with a fine sheet of ice.

Ingratitude.

When Lord B. died a person met an old man who was one of his most intimate friends. He was pale, confused, awe stricken. Every one was trying to console him, but in vain.

"His loss," he exclaimed, "does not affect me so much as his horrible ingratitude. Would you believe it? He died without leaving me anything in his will—I, who have dined with him at his own house three times a week for thirty years!"—Life.

Sad Case

Son—I came across a very sad case this morning, father. I pitied the man with all my heart. Father—What was it, my son? I am pleased to know you show so much sympathy for the poor. Son—There was a deaf and dumb man begging in the High street who had an impediment in his speech. Father (crossly)—Impossible. Do not expect me to believe such nonsense. Son—It is the truth, father—he had a finger off.

Body Thrown From Train.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 24.—Alexander McGill, special agent for the Mobile & Ohio Railway at Tuscaloosa, Ala., was shot to death early Sunday morning in the baggage car of a Mobile & Ohio passenger train and his body thrown from the train on to a bridge over Glypsie Creek, where it remained hanging between the cross ties until discovered by a searching party, according to information received by officials of the Mobile & Ohio here yesterday.

Napoleon Jones, a porter on the train, was arrested and charged with the crime.

"Dear me, what has she done?"

THE DIGNIFIED MAN.

Pity, oh, pity the dignified man,
Who never can act as the rest of us can!
You and I, if we care to, can run half a block,
But if he should try it 'twould give us a shock.
For him all frivolity's under the ban.
Pity, oh, pity the dignified man!

Pity, oh, pity the dignified one,
Who cannot unbend for a bit of mild fun.
Who has to be stately and sober and staid
And stiff as a drum major out on parade,
Who looks like a picture of George Washington.
Pity, oh, pity the dignified one!

Pity, oh, pity the dignified gent,
Who cannot indulge in undue merriment!
Whenever I see him I'm tempted, I own,
To give him a poke in vest pocket zone
To see if his marbleness cannot be bent.
Pity, oh, pity the dignified gent!

Pity, oh, pity the dignified chap,
Who looks so ridiculous in a mishap!
He slips in the mud; and it giveth delight;
His tie climbs his neck, and we laugh at the sight—
Things for which you and I wouldn't care half a rap.
Pity, oh, pity the dignified chap!

Then pity, oh, pity the dignified man,
Who's made of a clay that's the stiffest hardpan.
Poor fellow, he feels he is always on view
And cannot slouch even a minute or two!
In his nightshirt he must be a vision to scan.
Pity, oh, pity the dignified man!

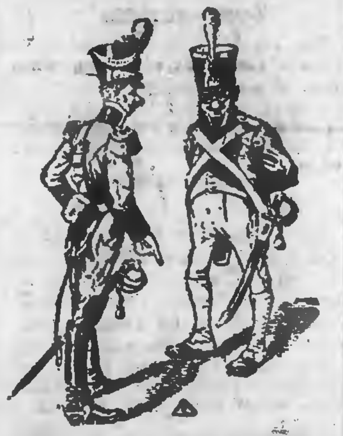
A Shorter Way.



"How far is it to Neustadt, captain?"

"Fourteen kilometers in an air line, colonel."

"H'm! There must be a shorter way across the fields, don't you think?"—Lustige Blatter.

He Read the Signs.

One morning two young women entered the Saltville grocery and after some discussion bought a pound of dates, two pounds of ginger snaps and two pounds of crackers.

"Stopping at Miss Gray's?" inquired the clerk as he tied up the bundles.

"Yes," said one of the young women, with evident surprise.

"Came about yesterday forenoon?" said the clerk.

"How did you know?" asked the other young woman curiously.

"Um—well, I can most generally tell," said the clerk without glancing at the objects of his mind reading as he twitched a knot in the string. "You see, it's pretty drizzly and muddy today, and I knew there wouldn't anybody's boarders but Miss Gray's feel the need of coming out here such weather, and long as you didn't come till today I knew for sure you couldn't have been here more'n one day. Three meals is about the average."—Youth's Companion.

His Quarter.

"I approach you in a worthy cause, Mr. Titewad. We want to raise $100,000; a prominent philanthropist offers to contribute a quarter of it."

"Oh, well," said Mr. Titewad hastily, "I don't mind giving another quarter. Can you change a half?"—Housekeeper.

Easily Influenced.

Patience—You say Peggy is very much influenced by her surroundings?

Patrice—Oh, my, yes. Why, when Will has his arm around her she's influenced by Will, and when Jack has his arm about her she's influenced by Jack.—Yonkers Statesman.

Incentive.

"Does your husband object to your taking part in politics?" asked Mrs. Crossgrain.

"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Baring Banners.

"Then where's the fun in doing so?"—Washington Star.

Well Named.

"Why do you call this new tire of yours the Mexican?" asked Slathers. "Is it made of Mexican rubber?"

"Oh, no!" said the inventor. "I call it that because it is capable of innumerable revolutions without wearing out."—Judge.

His Raiment.

Lady (to returned missionary)—And how was the king of the savages clothed?

Missionary—H'm—principally with authority, madam, and not much of that.—McCall's Magazine.

Some Reason.

"Why do you think that Carl wants to marry me solely for my money?"

"Oh, he must have some reason!"—Fliegende Blatter.

His Legacy.

"What did your uncle leave you in his will?" "Three guardians, a lot of advice and a little money."—Detroit Free Press.

LEADERS KILLED.

Turkish Force Suffers Heavily In Battle With the Greeks.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—The Morning Post yesterday publishes authoritative Greek account of the recent fighting at Epirus, according to which Ali Riza Pasha, the Turkish commander at Janina, and his chief of staff, Djavid Pasha, both were killed and the whole Turkish artillery in the Sangoni Pass fighting were captured by the Greeks. The despatch says that the expedition against Goritza, which was commanded by the Greek crown prince, experienced tremendous difficulties owing to the bad roads and the mountainous country and that it was extremely hard to obtain supplies.

A special despatch from Athens says the Greek army, advancing on Janina has suffered a check and that reinforcements have been sent out.

U. S. Don't Want Mylius.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Edouard F. Mylius, the Englishman, convicted in London of libeling King George V. and sentenced to serve a year in prison, was ordered deported yesterday by the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island. Mylius was held to be an undesirable alien and probably will return on the vessel which brought him here.

Mylius published a sensational story to the effect that the English sovereign had contracted a morganatic marriage in Malta in 1890. The story was disproved in an action for libel brought against him by the Solicitor-General of England. He was sentenced to a year's imprisonment, his term expiring Dec. 7, 1911.

Beauty Five Centuries Ago.

They have dug up an old beauty book in Italy, published 500 years ago, which laid down the following rules of the game:

"To be beautiful," says the work, "the women must have the following: Three white things—skin, hands and teeth. Three black things—eyes, eyelashes and eyebrows. Three pink things—lips, gums and nails. Three long things—life, hands and hair. Three short things—teeth, ears and tongue. Three wide things—forehead, shoulders and intelligence. Three narrow things—waist, mouth and ankle. Three delicate things—fingers, lips and mind. Three round things—arm, leg and dowry."

Things haven't changed so much in five centuries, have they? Or, let us say, that woman's beauty is immortal and immutable.—Albany Times-Union.

A Thoughtful French Wife.

Weary of life, a farmer went out to his barn and hanged himself. A little later his wife, entering the barn to feed some animals, saw her husband swinging from the rafters. Arguing that if, as it was natural to think, her husband intended to commit suicide he would be exasperated by the frustration of his intention, she left the body as it was and went on with the work of the farm. Several hours later in the evening, when her daughter came back from the fields, the woman told her what had happened. Mother and daughter deliberated for some time as to what ought to be done and finally decided to inform the mayor. When that official came in haste and cut down the body life had been extinct for several hours.—London Telegraph.

WORRIES OF 1912 BOARD OF WORKS ARE NOW OVER

Eleven Tenders for Supplying Stone Are Received, and Dealt With.

The farewell session of the Board of Works for 1912 was held last evening when several matters on fyle were disposed of. Eleven tenders for the contract of supplying stone to the corporation were considered. After some discussion it was moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Mayor Bradburn, that the purchasing of the stone be left with City Engineer Hay, Ald. Buller and Street Commissioner Evans, with power to act.

SOME MORE POLES.

The Bell Telephone Company requested permission by letter to erect three more poles for the purpose of giving telephone connection to prospective subscribers. The desired permission was readily granted.

GAS MAIN.

A letter from the Peterborough Light and Power Company, asking for permission to lay a gas main to give service to the DeLaval Company was also considered. The new industry will require the use of gas by February, 1913. The request of Mr. Munro was accordingly granted. The latter also asked permission to renew the gas main on Brock street.

A long letter was with difficulty deciphered by Ald. Buller, written by hand, complaining of a cut in the roadway on the hill at the foot of Sophia street, and asking to have it repaired.

The complainant was W. H. Sutton.

HUNTER STREET GATES.

Ald. Duffus brought up the advisability of building gates at the Hunter street crossing for the protection of the public. The Mayor was heartily in sympathy with any such action, contending that it was a decided necessity. No action, however, was taken.

THE CHIPMAN ACCOUNT.

Willis Chipman again prodded the memory of the Board by a letter reminding them of his account against the city for professional services. The committee, however, did not open any discussion on the matter, preferring to have it stand over till a later meeting when more time was available.

Those present were Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Buller, chairman; Ald. Duffus, Anderson, Johnston, Gillespie, Graham, City Engineer Hay, and Street Commissioner Evans.

WATER COMMISSIONERS REFUSE A SETTLEMENT

Are Prepared to Fight Claim of McDougall Iron Works Company—Pump Unsatisfactory.

City Solicitor Hall, with the authority of the Water Commissioners will notify the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Company to go ahead with issuing a writ against the city and that they are prepared to accept service of the same. The writ, if it is served, will be in connection with a pumping unit at the Peterborough Water Works installed by the Company, but which is alleged by the Commissioners not to be operating satisfactorily. The McDougall Company contend however that in installing the pumping apparatus, they fulfilled all the requirements of their contract and unless settlement is forthcoming they notified the Commissioner of their intention to take legal action.

CRESSMAN'S LOSS.

In connection with the breaking of the water main on George Street, resulting in Mr. A. W. Cressman's store cellar being inundated, it is understood the latter will ask for damages from the Commissioners to reimburse him for the loss sustained to stock in the cellar.

CHARGE OF SELLING LIQUOR TO INDIAN IS DISMISSED

No Evidence That Defendent Sam Long, or His Bartender, Knew Loft to be a Prohibited Indian.

Magistrate D. W. Dumble has given the following judgment in the case of Thompson vs. Long. Mr. J. H. Haverson, of Toronto, appeared for the defendants in the case:—

THMOFSON VS. LONG.

This information is laid under Revised Statutes of Canada Ch. 81, Sec. 13, called an Act respecting Indians.

The defendant is charged with having on the 24th of October, 1912, unlawfully supplied to Newton Loft, an Indian, an intoxicant, contrary to the Statute, etc.

The word "Indian" under the Statute means "any male person of Indian blood reputed to belong to a particular band."

The man Loft is undoubtedly of Indian blood and according to the evidence he is a "band Indian" drawing money from the Government. By his own negligence he has not got his money of late and in consequence he told a number of persons that he was no longer an "Indian" as he did not get his interest money.

The bar-tender who supplied him with lager beer on which he got drunk has known him for years, having worked beside him. Loft told him he was not a band Indian. The Indian has been in the habit of going to Longs for his liquor. A number of years ago his wife, also an Indian, went to Mr. Long and told him not to give her husband "too much liquor," but did not tell him that her husband was a band Indian—Loft lived in Peterborough 6 or 7 years, working and earning his living like a white man, and dressing and living in all respects as a white man. All Indians other than treaty Indians, and non-treaty Indians reputed to belong to an irregular band or one who follows the Indian mode of life, are as free to buy liquor as a white man. The question here is, does Loft come under the class who are prohibited by the Statute.

The onus of proof is on the prosecution and not on the party selling the liquor.

It was not proved that this man Loft was reputed to be an Indian, and so far as the evidence goes he was not living the mode of life of an Indian, but that of a white man, and he himself had to a number of persons denied that he was a treaty Indian.

The word "reputed" here means that by common repute this man Loft was known as that kind of Indian to whom liquor may not be sold with impunity. His mode of life for years and his own statement would leave the impression that he was enjoying the white man's privilege of getting drunk, as he undoubtedly did in this case and in consequence of which he lost his leg by being run over by a car which was being shunted.

I must give effect to the word "reputed" and as there was no evidence that Long or his bar-tender had ever heard that Loft was a prohibited Indian or had knowledge that he was, I dismiss the charge.

D. W. DUMBLE, P. M.

PASSENGERS HAD PREPARED TO DIE WHEN RESCUED

Seventy-Five Persons on Board the Steamer Turrialba Were in Imminent Danger off Atlantic City When Liner Went Ashore.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The 57 passengers and 18 of the crew of the United Fruit Co.'s steamship Turrialba, ashore since Tuesday morning at Brigantine Shoals, nine miles north of Atlantic City, N.J., arrived here last night on board the U. S. revenue cutter Seneca.

The cutter had stood by the stranded vessel all Tuesday night and at nine o'clock yesterday morning passengers, part of the crew and the baggage and mail were safely transferred, and the Seneca started on its Christmas journey to this port. The sea was smooth and the weather fine when the transfer was made and the passengers experienced little discomfort. A Christman dinner was provided by the officers of the Seneca.

According to reports brought here, the Turrialba lies with propeller damaged, stern post cracked and rudder missing. With good weather the vessel will be saved, it is expected, though her cargo of bananas may have to be tossed overboard.

According to stories told by passengers upon reaching here last night, many of them prepared for death by drowning after the Turrialba, steaming through a snowstorm on her way from Jamaica, West Indies, to New York, grounded on the Jersey sands in the early hours of Tuesday.

"We were reconciled to our fate," narrated Police Inspector Edward Hughes of this city, returning with his wife from a trip in search of health.

"We talked about the Titanic, and we can now appreciate something of what the poor passengers on that ill-fated ship experienced.

"Everyone prayed when the storm was at its height, and those men had wives, well—you can think it over yourself, young man," he said to a reporter.

According to passengers, the lifeboats were lowered at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and those on board prepared to enter them, but the steamer was heaving so heavily that the passengers were unable to stand. A while later the Seneca hove in sight and a small boat with seven men came alongside. After a conference it was decided not to attempt to transfer until the water became smoother.

Tuesday night was passed in comparative comfort and early yesterday the transfer began with five boats, two from the Seneca, one from the Turrialba and two from a nearby life-saving station. The transhipment was made without mishap on a comparatively smooth sea, women and children going first, the male passengers second, the Government mail sacks next, and hand baggage and members of the crew last. The trip up the coast in the Seneca was made without notable incident, and the Turrialba's passengers were landed in time to eat, if they desired, a belated Christmas dinner in New York.

Crew Saved, Steamer Abandoned.

WILMINGTON, Dec. 26.—The tug Columbia, Savannah to Norfolk, arrived here yesterday with Capt. A Carrod and 26 members of the crew of the British steamer Alcazar, 2,000 tons, bound from Port au Paix, Hayti, with a cargo of logwood for Chester, Pa. The Alcazar was driven ashore last Monday during the severe gale, 15 miles off Cape Lookout. The Columbia, attracted to the Alcazar by signals of distress, succeeded in pulling the vessel afloat, but the Alcazar listed so she was left adrift.

After arrival of the Columbia here with the crew, the revenue cutter Seminole proceeded in search of the derelict, but has not yet reported.

Crew of Six Men Lost.

ST. PIERRE, Miq., Dec. 26.—The crew of the British schooner Aldine, numbering probably six men, are believed to have perished in Tuesday's gale. At daybreak yesterday the wreck of the vessel was found on the north side of St. Pierre roads. There was no trace of her crew. Kerosene barrels and other remnants were picked up on shore.

The Aldine was bound from Boston for this port. She was a three-masted vessel of 112 tons, owned by A. V. Conroy of Lunenburg, N.S.

LISBON IS DISTURBED

Rioting Follows Return of Conservative Leader.

LISBON (via the frontier), Dec. 26.—The political situation arising out of the deadlock of the Conservatives and Democrats is rapidly developing. The Conservative element predominates in the Cabinet, while nearly half the members of the Portuguese Parliament are Democrats. Both parties are endeavoring to organise a coup d'etat.

The Conservative chief, Dr. Almeida, was hastily summoned back from Switzerland, and his arrival here was made the occasion of a monster demonstration on the part of the Conservatives. The Democrats replied with an equally imposing counter-demonstration.

The Government, alarmed at the possibility of trouble, turned out all available police and troops. As soon as the steamer, aboard which Almeida was a passenger, was docked there was a tremendous uproar of cheers and groans, and the Democrats made a determined rush with the object of capturing the leader of the rival party.

A regular riot ensued. Dr. Almeida was extricated from his perilous position by cavalry, which charged through the mob, and he was sent to his home in an automobile under military escort. The baffled Democrats paraded the streets for many hours. The troops are kept constantly under arms, as important happenings are likely at any moment.

The President of the Republic has asked the Premier to pardon the Archbishop of Braga and the Bishops of Portalagra and Lamegro, who were condemned last February to three years' banishment from their dioceses, and to grant amnesty to political prisoners, or at least the relax the severity of their imprisonment, but the Premier has replied that the moment is not favorable for the granting of pardons. Improvements in the prisons, he added, have already been decided upon and will be shortly carried into effect.

Pittsburg Fireman Overcome.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 26.—Six firemen were overcome by smoke and damage, approximating $100,000, was done yesterday morning when an eight-storey building, occupied as the city warehouse of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., was destroyed by fire. Crossed wires were given as the cause.

MAN FATTENED FOR THE TABLE

But Made His Escape From the Cannibals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26.—Guy de Villepion, a former teacher at a local academy, who arrived here Tuesday from the west coast of South America, told a tale of having been fattened for a feast by cannibals while attempting to cross from Ciudad to Buenos Ayres. He escaped after many adventures and found his way to Callao.

"They were a strange people," he said, "and appeared to be half man and half ape. I have no doubt that they meant to eat me. I was mystified by all their kindness until I saw it was all directed to the end of getting me fat. Then I thought I had better leave, and I did."

Just Missed It.

PANAMA, Dec. 26.—Fifteen minutes after President Taft had passed on his way to the ball in his honor last night at the National Theatre, a kiosk near the station on Central avenue, was blown up with dynamite while the street was still lined with police.

One man was badly injured. Several arrests were made.

The mayor and the reception committee hurried from the ball to the scene of the dynamiting.

Railway May Sell Steamers.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 26.—Unless the Interstate Commerce Commission authorizes the holding of the steamboat properties of the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Co. every steamboat line now controlled by the railroad will be sold probably within the coming year, according to a statement yesterday by President Mellen.

Invited To Congress.

BUFFALO, Dec. 26.—One hundred and twenty-five thousand school children of Buffalo and vicinity are to sign a mammoth invitation to be sent to the heads of nearly half a hundred countries all over the globe, requesting them for the sake of their little cousins in those lands to send as many delegates as possible to the fourth international congress of school hygiene, which meets here next August.

Among those countries to which the invitation will be sent are England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Spain, Finland, Roumania, Servia, Greece, Portugal, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, China, Japan, Corea, India, Canada, Brazil, Argentina, Chile and Ecuador.

NOW READY FOR THE JURY

Ironworkers' Case Drawing to a Close at Last.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 26. — The cases of the forty labor union officials accused of promoting the McNamara dynamiting plots in the ironworkers' strike against employers of non-union labor, will go to the jury within 36 hours, or possibly sooner.

At the close of all argument to night or on Friday morning Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson will instruct the jury. It is understood that the court's outline of the law as to what testimony shall be applied to certain defendants will require about an hour.

The jurors then will retire to deliberate as to the men who, headed by Frank M. Ryan, were brought here three months ago from cities scattered from Boston to Los Angeles to figure as defendants in what is said to be the most important trial of its kind ever held in a Federal court.

The jury, to be asked to return a separate verdict for each defendant, is composed entirely of farmers or merchants from rural districts of Indiana.

The fact that the jury must vote on each defendant after considering the testimony, the court holds applicable to him, is the basis for a belief that verdicts will not be returned in less than a day. There are 26 counts against each defendant, 25 of which provide a maximum penalty of 18 months' imprisonment and one which provides a maximum imprisonment of two years. The Government contends that the penalties for the offences charged are cumulative in the discretion of the court, or a total possible penalty of 39 1-2 years.

HOW CHRISTMAS WAS OBSERVED

Governor-General Spent Quiet Day at Rideau Hall.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—Christmas Day was spent quietly in the capital. At Government House none of the time-honored customs associated with the day were neglected. Christmas eve was marked by the distribution of gifts by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught to the public works employes, 40 in number, engaged about the grounds of the vice-regal residence. The members of the personal staff, servants and others were not forgotten. His Royal Highness personally wishing every member of the staff a "Merry Christmas," while they were also presented with gifts.

One-Third Left Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—According to railway officials, one-third the population of Toronto was out of the city on Christmas Day. To make up for this thousands of visitors from outside points spent the day here.

Although the number of Torontonians who left the cty amounted to about one hundred thousand persons, it is stated on good authority that from twenty-five to fifty thousand visitors from out of the city came into Toronto to spend Christmas Day with relatives and friends. A large proportion of these came from the Canadian west, but a great many also came in from various points in Ontario.

Unexpected Christmas Boxes.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 26.—If Chas. D. Brown and Lulu M. Pierce had tried to name the persons least likely to send them Christmas gifts, it is regarded as doubtful that their imaginations would have roved erratic enough to have hit the truth.

Chas. D. Brown, who arrested and furnished evidence against George Riley, now serving a five-year sentence, received a handsome prison-made cane from the convict. The woman, Pierce, in jail on a charge of bigamy, was the recipient of gifts from both of her husbands.

Sullivan's Dinner.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Congressman "Big Tim" Sullivan, beloved of the Bowery derelict, gave his customary Christmas dinner to 5,000 homeless men. When they had broken fast with food such as most of them had not tasted in months, pipes and tobacco were given, together with a ticket which will bring each man shoes and socks on Feb. 6. "Big Tim" himself spent Christmas ill in bed in a sanitarium.

HEAVY SNOW IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—A blanket of snow, ranging from two feet in the south to scarcely a trace in the north, made Christmas in New England a white one for the first time in three years. The weather, however, was a repetition of the Indian summer conditions which prevailed last year, for it was clear, calm and warm throughout the day.

The snowfall averaged more than two feet, and telegraph and telephone service was interrupted, and all the inland roads were blocked.

McBride and Navy League.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Accepting the invitation of the British Navy League to become one of the life vice-presidents, Premier Bride, B.C., says he considers it a pleasure and a duty to do what is possible towards strengthening the Empires defences, and the splendid manner in which Premier Borden's naval policy has been greeted in the Motherland, he adds, is a source of great gratification to Canadians.

FAMOUS OLD TURKISH CITY WHICH IS BEING BESIEGED BY THE GREEKS.

JANINA

The above photograph of the city of Janina, which is now being besieged by the Greeks, shows one of the Turkish strongholds as it looks to-day. It was over this city that the Greek army aviator, Lieutenant Moutoussis, from his machine and accompanied by a comrade, flew over the city and literally [illegible] bombs on the place.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY ON HIS WAY FROM CAMP

Canadian Press Despatch

North Bay, Dec. 26— A badly battered body of a man found in the snow by teamsters hauling supplies to Canadian Northern camps from Chapleau, Christmas Eve, has been identified as that of Charles Elson, subcontractor of Foley Brothers on the Canadian Northern. With over three hundred dollars on him, Elson left the camp some days ago with three others to walk twenty-five miles to Nemegos Station on the C. P. R. to take a train for a trip to his old home in Sweden. The condition of the snow around where the body was found, indicated that Elson had been done to death after a desperate struggle. As the money is missing, it is believed robbery was the motive for the murder. Police are now endevoring to locate men who left the camp with him.

HOLD UP IN CENTRE OF CITY

Young Man Relieved of His Money at Point of Gun

Canadian Press Despatch.

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 25— P. Timble, a young man from Moose Jaw was held up at the point of a gun in the centre of this city at seven o'clock last night, and relieved of eighty dollars in cash and bills of sale for fifteen hundred dollars not negotiable. The robber made a complete getaway.

NO CLUE TO THE ROBBERS

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 26.—William Tisdale of Toronto, general passenger agent of the Grand Trunk Railway, came here Tuesday night and held a conference yesterday with Harry M. Morgan, in charge of the Grand Trunk ticket office in the Ellicott Square, in which two clerks were held up at the point of a revolver on Monday. He said the robbery was just a break in luck, and that he thought it nothing strange, as ticket offices in different parts of the country are being held up and robbed.

Turkish Officers Called To Front.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—A news agency despatch from Constantinople early yesterday reported that all officers on leave from the Tchatalja lines had been recalled to their regiments. The order was for their appearance within twenty-four hours.

PLOT TO KILL KING VICTOR

ROME, Dec. 26.—The examination of Henry Dalferro, a young anarchist who recently attempted to commit suicide rather than carry out a mission imposed on him by the anarchists to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel, was held yesterday. It revealed the existence of a deep laid plot to kill the king. Five other anarchists have been arrested for alleged complicity in the plot.

Liner Couldn't Land Passengers.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 26.—The White Star steamer Arabic for Liverpool arrived off here late yesterday afternoon, but was unable to land passengers because of rough weather and proceeded for Liverpool.

Autos Seized.

WINDSOR, Dec. 26.—U. S. customs officers have seized two automobiles, one said to be the property of Victor Clemens, manager of the Walkerville branch of the Fisher Body Co. of Detroit, and the other belonging to Arthur E. Annis, proprietor of a Detroit cafe.

The machine said to be owned by Clemens was held up by the inspectors at the ferry dock when articles of merchandise were found in it.

In the Annis auto six bottles of liquor were found. Annis declared that the goods were given to him by a friend in Windsor as a Christmas present.

Unless the Government relents both machines will be sold at public auction.

YOUNG MAN FOUND DEAD IN YARD OF STATION

He Had Gone With a Dozen Companions to Lindsay and After Returning With Boisterous Party Got Into a Fight in Which He Was Evidently Kicked to Death.

BEAVERTON, Dec. 26.—Helped off by quarreling companions from the Lindsay train Tuesday night, and found huddled behind the water tank in the station yard, dead, Ernie Reilly's mysterious death gave this town a tragic Christmas tale yesterday.

The young man, with a dozen companions, had gone to Lindsay from this place, which is a local option town, and their return on the Grand Trunk train which reached here at 9.45 p.m., was boisterous in the extreme. Reilly was assisted from the train by a couple of his companions and a brakeman. A little group, Reilly among them, hung around the station platform until the train pulled out, and then scattered. This was the last seen or heard of him until, at eight o'clock yesterday morning, a G.T.R. sectionman came across his body behind the watertank 25 yards away from the station.

Deep cuts on the head and face, a broken arm and wrist, and [illegible] bruises told plainly of rough and brutal treatment. The police say he was kicked to death. The man's overcoat, undercoat and vest were missing, one sleeve of his shirt was ripped off and the remainder of the clothing badly torn.

Those who examined the body say the man had died but a very short while before being found, and he probably lay there dying, a hundred feet from help, throughout the frosty night. Those at the station heard neither the noise of fight or appeals for assistance. People enjoying Christmas Eve in the nearest house, 50 yards distant, knew nothing of what was going on; crews of trains that passed and stopped there during the night were unaware of anything uncommon.

The local police have several of Reilly's train companions under surveillance, but nothing exciting has developed. An inquest has been called by the coroner for Friday morning. The young man, who was 23 years old, lived and has several relatives here.

LITTLE KINGDOM WILL NOT YIELD TO AUSTRIAN DEMANDS

Europe is Concerned Over Failure of Austria to Withdraw Troops Which Have Been Mobolized — She is Willing to Let Montenegro Have Scutari if Latter Gives up Mt. Loweher.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The expedition with which the Turkish Government has decided upon counter peace proposals leads to the assumption that they will be equally wide from what are likely to be the eventual terms of the peace treaty as were the demands of the allies, and that there is still a prolonged process of bargaining to be gone through before the conference is ended.

Austria's failure to demobilize, however, is a greater source of disquietude to all concerned than the task of arranging peace. This is [illegible] especially the case with the Montenegrin delegates, who yesterday were considerably excited over the rumor that now that Austria has obtained what she wants from Servia, she wishes either to prevent Montenegro from taking Scutari, by incorporating it in Albania, or to make the Montenegrin occupation of Scutari the price of Austrian occupation of Mount Lowehen. This mount, which rises to a height of about 5,500 feet almost perpendicularly, dominates the Gulf of Cattaro, the great Austrian naval stronghold in the Adriatic. But now Montenegro with its batteries on Mount Lowehen commands the gulf.

M. Miyuskovitch has declared to all the ambassadors that Montenegro would rather be exterminated than yield Lowehen or renounce Scutari. He said: "It naturally is absurd to speak of declaring war against Austria, but if Vienna had any such pretensions, she would have to wipe out every soul in Montenegro. I myself would be there, sword in hand, and I would sell my life dearly."

Moreover, it is not believed that Russia would ever permit the annihilation of the small kingdom, which for centuries has represented the Slav stronghold on the Adriatic shores, and in this connection additional attention is drawn to the fact that Russia is taking means to prevent her continual war preparations from becoming known.

Several of the peace delegates left London for Christmas. Those who remained spent the day quietly at their hotels or with friends.

Terms Not Acceptable.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 26.—The Porte yesterday telegraphed to Rechad Pasha at London counter peace proposals as decided by the Council of Ministers. The exact nature of the proposals has not been revealed, but the official view of the situation is still hopeful.

The Turkish press is unanimous in declaring the allies' conditions are not acceptable and that the Turkish delegates were not sent to London to commit suicide.

The Porte has repeated to the powers the demand made a month ago for a consular inquiry respecting the atrocities alleged to have been committed by the allies in the occupied territories.

Several marines from the United States converted yacht Scorpion had an altercation yesterday with some persons in a public building, ending in blows.

One of the men involved was Senator Sola, the military attache of the Spanish Legation.

The Bulgarian general, Ivanoff, arrived in Constantinople recently. He has had several interviews with Kiamil Pasha, the grand visier.

WOODROW WILSON HAS THE GRIP

PRINCETOWN, N.J., Dec 26.—President-elect Wilson spent most of Christmas Day in bed suffering from a slight attack of grip. He caught cold on Monday, it was learned yesterday, and his automobile ride to and from Trenton Tuesday added to his indisposition. He turned his holiday, therefore, into a day of rest and while other folks were busy celebrating in traditional Christmas fashion, he remained quietly in his room, sleeping a good part of the time.

La Libre Parole Burned Out.

QUEBEC, Dec. 26.—La Libre Parole, a weekly paper owned by Senator Choquette, was completely destroyed by fire here yesterday morning. How the fire originated is unknown, but it is supposed to have been caused by an electric wire. The loss is about $15,000, with an insurance of $8,000. The paper will suspend publication for a few weeks until a settlement is made with the underwriters.

RIVAL TO THE "STEEL TRUST"

Plant to be Built in New South Wales.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A formidable rival to the so-called "Steel Trust" is to be created in New South Wales, where a steel-making plant is to be built at a cost of $5,000,000. The information is conveyed in a report just received by this Government from American Consul-General John P. Bray at Sydney, who says that $50,000 already has been spent in preliminary work. The mills will be erected near Newcastle, and they will be extended as the needs of Australia grow.

"The amount of money to be expended will be unlimited," Mr. Bray declares in his report, "because the company will be spending money all the time."

The Broken Hill Proprietary Co. is said to be behind the project, which eventually is [illegible] to control absolutely the Australian market.

WENT FROM CHRISTMAS DINNER TO HIS DEATH

Man Was Killed When Explosion Occured in Stable —Tramp is Wanted.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Galt, Dec. 26.—After partaking of Christmas dinner at his home in Carlyle, near Freelton, yesterday, Frank Reilly, who makes a living by blasting stumps, went to the stable. A few minutes later he was found dead and horribly mangled by explosives, the cause for which has not been explained. He stored explosives in the stable and by some means they were discharged.

So far as is known nobody was in the stable at the time, but a tramp who had dinner at the house is being looked for. A cow, horse, pig and chickens in the stable were not hurt. The cow was taken out of the stable as the building burned, while the horse released itself when the explosion occurred. The detonation was heard for miles around and while all the windows in a house one hundred yards away were shattered, Reilly's home, much closer to the scene, was unharmed.

Was It an Unlucky Number?

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Giles Ellwood, fresh from his native city of the progressive west, bounced out of his hotel bed and ran to the window. A clatter of hoofs on the asphalt, the clang of gongs, the swift rushing of electric vehicles, the glitter of arc lights on red and nickel, trailing plumes of black and white smoke, and the fire engines disappeared up the avenue.

The westerner sat down on the edge of the bed and yawned sleepily. At home in his own city a fire was first announced by the ringing of alarm bells that respectable citizens might be informed of the coming spectacle and be on hand to witness the conflagration. Inside his vest pocket was the list of box numbers at which he was in the habit of glancing when the bells in the towers brayed forth the alarms.

Here in New York it was different. The silent alarm system might have its advantages, but it certainly deprived interested strangers from witnessing that much advertised attraction—a three alarm Gotham fire.

Then, again, at home if he was without his trusty alarm card, all he had to do was to telephone to the central telephone office and ask where the fire was. Did he dare do that in New York? Yet possibly a three alarm fire was eating up dollars within a half dozen blocks of his hotel.

He snapped on the electric light, looked at his watch, saw that it was 2 o'clock and went to the telephone. There were two of these, one that connected with the hotel switchboard and the other a long distance instrument. He glanced at them and chose the hotel telephone.

"Number?" came in such sweet reply that Ellwood reddened with sudden excitement.

"Er—I don't want anybody—that is, will you please tell me where the fire is?" he stammered.

"Why, it is in the hotel here around on the Broadway side. There is no danger; it is under control now," said the voice sweetly, though rather wearily.

"Thanks, very much," said Elwood earnestly, and he reluctantly hung up the receiver.

He tumbled into bed, dazedly aware that something strange had happened. He could scarcely define the feeling that prompted him to earnestly go over in his mind his yearly income and wonder for the first time if he could afford to marry on it. It was the first time he had taken that into consideration.

Ellwood laughed at his own folly and fell asleep, feeling very light hearted over nothing in particular. When morning came and with it the business he had prescribed for the day he could not drive from his recollection the voice he had heard in the night. He made up his mind to talk with her again if possible.

After breakfast he hobnobbed with the clerk and professed a desire to see the switchboard of the house telephone service.

A double row of straight backed figures with becoming black straps over their varicolored heads rewarded his curiosity. Then it was that he recollected that his particular voice must be on the night shift, for he had spoken with her at 2 o'clock that morning. He determined to wander hotelward in the wee sma' hours of the next morning.

Night came and with it the coveted opportunity to enter into some communication with the voice that had attracted him. He looked aimlessly from the window and wished for another fire. But fires are not made to order, so he took down the receiver, and his mouth settled into the lines of determination that had been graven on his face.

"Number?" came her adorable voice.

"Oh—can you tell me where the fire is?" he asked frantically.

"Fire? I didn't know there was one," she said rather wearily.

"Neither did I," blurted Ellwood. "I thought there might be one, you know."

"Oh!" she said crisply and cut the connection.

Ellwood leaned back in his chair, his hand over his heart. He was frankly worried. "I don't know but what I've got heart trouble," he muttered dubiously. "Can't be my dinner, for I ate carefully, and nothing but heart trouble could cause such shortness of breath and palpitation." He would call the house physician and have his heart examined at once.

His order was received and answered, and presently the doctor came to his room. He was a tall, fair, rawboned individual who scanned the face of his patient with a searching glance. "Good evening—or, rather, morning!" he said affably. "You are in need of a doctor?"

Ellwood sank down on the couch and placed a hand weakly on his heart. "It's here," he said. "I'm afraid it's my heart."

The doctor came over and sat beside him, and, taking one strong brown hand in his delicate white one, he felt for the pulse.

"What have you been eating?" he asked bluntly.

"Nothing much," returned Ellwood impatiently, "not one indigestible crumb today."

"Been drinking anything?" queried the other.

"No, siree," returned Ellwood. "I cut out that years ago."

The doctor was watching his face curiously, and a faint smile curved his thin lips.

"Who is she?" he asked quietly, and Ellwood had the grace to redden to his ears.

"I don't know," he said shortly.

"Find out and I'll guarantee a cure," assured the physician as he replaced his stethoscope in its case and tucked his fee in his pocket. "My advice to you is to keep as quiet as possible, eat carefully, continue to drink nothing and do your best to win that young [illegible]"

The door closed after his form, and Ellwood threw himself down on the sofa and laughed silently, though happily. "By Jove!" he muttered. "It's going some to fall in love like that. What's that?"

That was the same clatter of hoofs and ringing of gongs he had heard the previous night. Ellwood flung himself into some clothes and slipped his overcoat over all. Then he dashed to the telephone and heard her voice once more.

"There is a fire now," he said urgently. "Will you please tell me where it is?"

There was a little silence and then a startled cry. "Why, it's in Ninety-eighth street. That's where I live. Oh, dear!" she ended in a little sob.

Ellwood thought rapidly.

"Can't you call them up and find out? Haven't your folks got a telephone?" he demanded.

"We just moved in today, and it isn't installed. Oh, dear!" Her voice was very low and sweet, and Ellwood could fancy he saw her wringing little white hands in helpless agony.

"Wait a little while. Don't you worry. I'm going to the fire, and I'll inquire about your people," he reassured her. "I'll have to have your name—just the last one, you know."

"Lane," she said gratefully, "and thank you so much, Mr. Ellwood."

"I'll let you know as soon as I find out," he said and was gone. In the street he jumped on a car and was borne northward to where a red glare shone against the sky. As he neared the scene the picture resolved itself into a flaming apartment house, streets crowded with pedestrians and onlookers, a fire line drawn sharply about the building and a horde of police.

Ellwood paused in a doorway and outlined a plan of action. How could he get inside the fire lines? He couldn't. Inquiring for the Lanes among the excited people who had been driven from their homes was much like searching for a needle in a haystack.

He noticed all at once that he was standing in the doorway of another apartment house, and he glanced hastily at the names over the letter boxes. There it was—Lane—the most beautiful name in the world. The Lanes were safe. She would be delighted. He took the number of the building and hastened to the nearest subway station and was dashed down to his hotel. He rushed into the office and spoke to the clerk.

"May I speak to Miss Lane, one of the telephone operators, on a matter of importance?" he stammered under that young man's polite stare.

"Against the rules," said the clerk.

"It really is important—I will guarantee that," urged Ellwood.

The clerk hesitated and, then relenting, sent Ellwood to the chief operator, who proved to be a good natured individual.

"Lane?" he queried. "Oh, that's operator No. 13." He picked up a receiver and spoke into the transmitter, "Send No. 13 to me at once."

"Unlucky number, eh?" he grinned at Ellwood.

"Oh, I don't know! Sometimes thirteen's a lucky number. It is for me," remarked Ellwood, with an enigmatic smile.

Just then the door opened and she came, deathly pale and trembling with anticipation of some ill news. She was all that Ellwood had dreamed—dark, petite and demurely lovely, with the sweetest contralto voice. Her brown eyes sought his face anxiously.

"It's all right," he assured her. "I've been up there and found the place where you live. The fire is across the street. I took the number of your house—1183. That right?"

"Oh, yes, and thank you so much, Mr. Ellwood," she breathed relievedly. "It was very good of you to take the trouble."

The chief operator was across the room intent on official business, and Ellwood had a brief instant in which to look down into the brown eyes that were rapidly reducing his incipient heart disease into a chronic ailment.

"I'd like to know you better, Miss Lane. I wonder if I presented credentials would your mother permit me to call."

"I think she might," said No. 13 gently as the soft color flowed back into her cheeks. "I will ask her. Of course you are not a stranger to the hotel people, Mr. Ellwood. Oh, I must go. Good night."

Ellwood held her little hand for the fraction of an instant, and she was gone. He floated down the corridor in an ecstasy of delight. Life was a radiant, beautiful thing.

The hotel physician brushed against him as he passed. "Feeling better?" he asked.

Ellwood nodded happily. "Fine as a fiddle, and yet my case is incurable," he said.

"Wait until you've been married as long as I have," croaked the doctor pessimistically as he hurried away.

"I don't believe a word of it," asserted Ellwood jubilantly. "It couldn't be in my—in our case."

Catarrhal Deafness

Successfully Treated By

Catarrhozone

Deafness is not so common as blindness, yet thousands are more or less afflicted by it, and their comfort seriously interfered with.

Catarrhal deafness manifests itself but slowly, yet it must be acknowledged that the great majority of those who become totally deaf might have averted this unfortunate condition if they had treated the catarrhal inflammation at its beginning.

The only remedy that can be safely employed for all forms of catarrhal deafness is Catarrhozone. You simply charge the air you breathe with this healing, soothing agent, and by forcing it gently through the ears destroy the germ life which keeps up the inflammation, and at the same time by the soothing, healing action it heals the inflamed surfaces of the middle ear.

CATARRHOZONE, to those who are just a little deaf, and are growing increasingly deaf, is an agent capable of affording the utmost satisfaction, and its use is attended without danger, and as the treatment can be carried on at home no person threatened with the affliction of deafness should postpone one moment in beginning its use.

From every part of the Dominion glowing accounts of the beneficial action it exerts upon catarrhal conditions of the middle ear have been sent in, and you will be resorting to the only method of cure, and the simplest method too, if you try Catarrhozone. Dealers everywhere sell it, 25c, 50c, and $1.00, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

SILHOUETTE FAD.

Even In Furniture Black and White Effects Are Smart.

The attractive and dainty black and white silhouette decoration now becoming popular here had its inspiration in Europe, where it became a widespread fad. By some it is held to be a development of the black and white decoration vogue, which the Hoffman school created; by others to be a revival of Biedermeier style, and it must be admitted that this last influence is most marked. Some of the screens are essentially in Biedermeier style, combining characters in profile with natural history subjects or with the purely fantastic most admirably.

The decoration consists of stencil-like black or black and white figures on a white background. The figures are clearly and sharply cut, standing out distinctly in the strong contrast of the dead black and white give the foliage and other delicate lines an effect that is most dainty. Very decorative variations are obtained by the use of colors—soft dark greens, blues, crimsons, maroons, grays or browns. These are used on white backgrounds in two tones of the same color or with contrasting colors, giving unlimited possibilities to silhouette work even in the hands of the amateur decorator. In fact, home talent is oftenest employed in this art, and possibly this fact is not a little responsible for its increasing popularity. The personal touch is given at times by putting the profiles of members of the family, of certain known individuals or of historic characters on some of the figures. Favorite fairy stories, sports and nursery tales are used in decorating the nursery. One's favorite pastime—golf, riding, fishing, whatever it may be—can be artistically incorporated into the silhouette frieze for one's pet room.

While in America the fashion has thus far been confined to wall, picture, curtain and screen decoration. A form of furniture is promised in the near future in black and in natural maple paneled with silhouette decorations.

A FOOTBALL MYSTERY

Story of the Gridiron

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Aunt Augusta, it's time you were married. You must be thirty years old."

"I shall not be married, Ethel, dear. If I were to have a husband I would have had one a dozen years ago."

"A romance! Why, aunty, I never knew you had one. You are such a precise, prim little body. Was he as gentle a man as you are a woman?"

"Not at all. Persons of opposite makeup are more apt to mate than those who are similar. My lover was a young giant in strength. He once carried me over a stream of water deep enough to cover him to his waist and with a current so swift that few men could have kept their feet in it unburdened. I repaid him by coaching him for an examination."

"You coached him! Why, aunty, I didn't know you went to college."

"I didn't take the college course, but I lived here in this college town and followed Arthur through his studies."

"On purpose to help him?"

"Yes, but I enjoyed it."

"Tell me all about your romance. Did he jilt you?"

"No; he died. But I wouldn't like to tell you about it, because there was a mystery concerning his death—something uncanny. Though it was twelve years ago, I can't to this day talk about it without being appalled as I was then."

There was a brief silence, after which the lady continued:

"Nevertheless there is one person, and only one, for whom I shall make the effort. I shall give you, my dearest niece, the story or all I know of it, and when I have told it to you I shall never speak of it again."

"Oh, aunty!" The girl put her arm about the speaker.

"Arthur and I attended the high school together," the lady began, "and it was the oppositeness of our makeup that drew us together. Arthur was not a dull scholar, but was born with a special leaning to athletic sports. He knew all the ways of making a baseball do what he wished it to do, was a splendid tennis player and had won a championship at golf.

"But it was on the football field that he won his most brilliant triumphs. He so distinguished himself at this while in the high school that representatives from different colleges came to see him play, and the year before he went to the university athletic managers from Harvard, Yale, Princeton and other colleges bid against one another to get him for their respective colleges that he might become a member of the university team, some of them offering to pay his way through college if he would join them.

"These big, strong fellows are apt to have some weakness. Arthur's weak point was an inability to decide small things. In this he relied upon me. He asked me which, if any, of the propositions he should accept, and I, wishing to keep him near me, told him I thought he'd better enter our own college here. Besides, my father was a professor here, and I was interested in the college. I didn't wish him to accept any pecuniary assistance for playing athletic games, and our university, being one of the smaller ones, could pay nothing.

"So Arthur stayed with us, and it was well he did, for I was enabled to help him through. He had the greatest admiration for my ability to solve some mathematical problem or comprehend a logical sequence, while I loved and admired him for his manly strength. What drew me to him most was his unconsciousness of the value of that strength which I prized so highly. But it is natural for weak woman to admire physical strength in man.

"Having Arthur here, we took an interest in athletics that we had never taken before, and, since he was devoted to football and would add greatly to the chances of any team he played with, our boys became interested in entering the field in the annual game with the big colleges. While Arthur was in college John Spangler was here and was made captain of the football team. Having a tower of strength in Arthur, Spangler succeeded in making up a fine team, especially the one that entered for the annual game against the other colleges, for the autumn previous to Arthur's graduation.

"Arthur ordinarily was lazy. It required something very exciting to cause him to use his strength, but when thoroughly aroused he was like a charging elephant. Captain Spangler was constantly coming to me bewailing the fact that he couldn't get his main man to be regular at practice and when he did practice it seemed impossible to wake him up to his work. Many a time I was obliged to get several girls together and go out on to the practice field in order that by my presence I might inspire Arthur to do good work.

"One thing of great importance was kept from me. Spangler knew it and should have told me, but he felt sure that if he did tell me the team would be deprived of Arthur's assistance in the game. And without Arthur the team would have no chance for winning the annual game. What they concealed from me for fear of losing him and what he concealed from me because he knew it would throw me into infinite distress was that he had shown symptoms of a weak heart. Indeed, a doctor had warned him that any great exertion or excitement might cause him to drop dead.

"I can never think or speak of my efforts to encourage Arthur to win the game for his college without suffering if any one who knew of his weakness had told me of it Arthur might have been alive today. I don't blame him, but I do blame them.

"Arthur carried his team through all the games preliminary to the one for the championship successfully, and when the two colleges which were to play the final game went out on to the gridiron they were our college and Yale. There had been enough honor in our having achieved such a position without this meeting, for no one expected that we could beat Yale. Indeed, it was partly luck that had enabled us to beat Princeton, which gave us the right to play the game for the championship. A presentiment of evil came over me, from whence I knew not, and I wished our team would give Yale the game without a contest.

"The afternoon, late in November that the game was played was bright and the air crisp, just the conditions for a trial of physical strength and skill. When our boys went out on to the field a great shout went from the [illegible] all sympathized with a college comprising but a thousand students matched against one comprising several thousand. I could see Arthur, standing a head above his fellows. Indeed, before the kickoff he came very near where I sat and waved his hand to me. He looked as well as I had ever seen him, and when I smiled at him I could see that it affected him like some invigorating draft.

"While the ball was in play at a critical moment something—a piece of timber, I believe—broke in the stand where I was sitting. For a moment it caused some commotion among those sitting on the boards. The teams were fighting for the ball just below us, and Arthur hearing the crack or seeing the stir, thinking I was in danger, turned his attention to me. Seeing him standing regardless of his work, I arose in my seat and waved to him. This turned him back to the game just in time.

"Our team was certainly a wonder for so small a college and from the very beginning gave its opponents all they could do to prevent our boys from scoring, to say nothing of scoring themselves. Indeed, neither side scored during the early part of the struggle. But just before the first rest Yale made a touchdown. Soon after this heavy, wintry clouds changed the face of the day, and since the game had begun at a late hour it was difficult for the spectators to see what was going on on the field. A fierce tussle was in progress for the ball when everything suddenly stopped. I knew that an accident had occurred and was quite sure some one was being carried off the gridiron. But so many persons intervened between me and those removing him that I could see little of what was taking place.

"A chill, whether from the overhanging clouds or the accident, seemed to sweep across the field like a breeze from an iceberg. Nothing was done for some minutes. Then the game recommenced. But by this time it was so dark that it was impossible for us spectators to see what was happening on the gridiron. One gigantic form I could discern, which I took to be Arthur's in the thick of the fight, and whenever he threw himself against his opponents they gave way. I remarked to a girl sitting beside me that Arthur was doing herculean feats. She gave me a singular look, a look I shall never forget.

"'Don't you see him?' I asked. 'Isn't that big man driving through those fellows Arthur?'

"She gave me another of those looks, but made no reply.

"At that moment our boys made a touchdown and kicked a goal, and some one cried, 'The only game ever won by so small a college against so large a one!' Then everybody arose, and the throng poured out of the inclosure.

"I couldn't understand why I was looked at so strangely by all who knew me. If I spoke to any of them I was answered in monosyllables. What did it mean? One thing I missed. I expected to hear persons enthusiastically giving Arthur credit for having by his prowess turned the scale in favor of our college. His name was not mentioned by my friends, who surrounded me and seemed to be forming a sort of guard about me to keep me from the others. When I got home I went up to my room to lay aside my wraps. Then my mother came in. I saw that something awful had happened.

"It was Arthur who was carried off the field. During a scrimmage he was seen to fall and lie still, his face white as a sheet. The play was stopped. A physician put his hand on Arthur's heart, and it was found to have stopped beating."

The speaker paused, and her niece asked:

"Who was the large figure in the game you thought was Arthur after he had fallen?"

"I don't know. I was the only person present, so far as I could learn, who saw him. I believed that he was Arthur in spirit and that he remained on the field to help his comrades in the flesh. But that was some years ago. Now I don't know what to think about it. Yet with my own eyes I saw him, and I knew that had it not been for him his team would not have performed the remarkable work of winning against the college that I have always considered stands highest of all American universities in athletics."

"Aunty, I can understand why you do not marry."

Pantheon and Parthenon.

The Parthenon, or what is left of it, stands upon the Acropolis of Athens. The most famous building on earth was erected under the administration of Pericles about B.C. 442. Its present ruinous condition was caused by the explosion of a bomb during the war between the Venetians and Turks in 1687. The Pantheon at Rome was built by Agrippa in B.C. 27 and unlike the more beautiful temple at Athens, is still in a fair state of preservation. The Pantheon is, of course, well worth seeing both for its own sake and on account of its historic interest, but it does not hold the fame belonging to the incomparable building on the Acropolis.

Antarctic Titbits.

People with delicate appetites would not care to depend on the fare which is provided by antarctic animals. Dr. Lienville, a French traveler, states that the birds of the polar regions taste like duck which has been thoroughly steeped in cod liver oil. The seal gives the idea of boiled beef. It is insipid, with a marked flavor of fish. The various species of whales are of diverse value. Europeans find it impossible to swallow the jubarte, though the Japanese eat it willingly. The rorqual is very good for twenty-four hours. Its meat is pale and oily, recalling veal. The fin whale is exquisite, like veal of the first quality.

The Donjon.

The donjon, or keep, of the castle was a tower within, much stronger than the rest of the structure and designed as a last resort for the garrison when the walls and other portions of the fortification had fallen into the hands of the enemy. The donjon was generally provided with a secret exit, a tunnel being constructed, often many hundreds of yards in length, leading to some concealed outlet through which the besieged could receive succor or, in time of necessity, escape.

Points for Mothers

The Rights of Others.

How many of you mothers forget that the older children should be considered as much and as carefully guarded as the little ones that are not so very far past babyhood?

Haven't you, times without number, made Tommy or Susie give up to the smaller children just to avoid a cry? Haven't you allowed Master Tom to be interrupted by a small brother or sister when he is trying to get his lessons or busy making something that to him is quite as important as any work that you yourself have planned to do?

Do you think this is fair to the older children? Do you think Master Tom can possibly recite a perfect lesson in history, for instance, when baby brother has been allowed to clamber over his lap demanding to be shown the pictures in the book while he is trying to study?

After awhile Tom's patience gives out and he pushes baby away and tells him to play with something else, but repeated efforts to keep the younger child away proving futile, there is a scene, and the little fellow begins to cry. Nine times out of ten the mother will take baby up in her lap and soothe him while she scolds brother Tom for being a big ruffian and blames him for making baby cry when the poor boy is only trying to do his best school work.

Any little girl of ten or twelve will be perfectly willing to help her mother with the care of the younger children. She will cheerfully lend a hand at dressing, undressing, feeding, bathing and the general care of the smaller children, but mother should not expect her to rush home after school every day and take baby brother for a walk. Neither should she allow the little children to interrupt Susie and her small guests when they are "visiting" with one another.

Little children do not mean to be tyrannical and would not be if mothers would only teach them from the time they are able to understand anything that they must respect the rights of others. Let them understand beyond a shadow of a doubt that they must not expect the older ones to yield to them the moment they express a wish. After awhile, if other babies appear, they in turn will be a greater help to mother and more kindly disposed toward the newcomer.

It requires a vast amount of tact and forethought to adjust the places of the children as they should be. Often the beginning of tyranny is established when the claims of the wee baby take up all the mother's time and the older children are neglected.

In discussing this very subject an eminent writer on the care of children and herself a mother says: "In the ideal home a system of mutual helpfulness reaching around the circle binds the household together in perfect harmony. The little ones have an undoubted claim on the caresses, the care and loving protection of those who are older. This being admitted, it is for the parents to see that the older ones are also immune from interruptions that hinder them from proceeding with the work they are daily obliged to do."

The Child and Pets.

Don't you often feel sorry for the house pet when the house baby begins to notice it? Poor pussy, if pussy it be, is subjected to loving hugs that squeeze together its anatomy in most unnatural fashion or is picked up by its waist—as its mother never thought of doing—and then, after the eager little fingers have mauled and pulled it, rubbing its fur the wrong way or holding it with choking grasp about the throat, pussy is dropped with nerve shocking suddenness as a new toy attracts baby's attention. The Teddy bear has been a boon to many an overhandled kitten, no doubt, but small children always love the living creatures until taught by scratches that wound the spirit as well as the tender flesh that, while Teddy Bear impassively endures all things, kitty possesses a spirit of resentment that makes it dangerous to show too much affection.

It may be all right in poetry to rave over a Grecian nose, but in every day life the nose to admire is the nose that is kept out of other people's business.

THE CASE OF ISMAY

Public interest in the Titanic disaster has revived somewhat with the announcement that J. Bruce Ismay, the managing director of the White Star line, has retired. At the time of the great accident one of the American newspapers, taking advantage of public feeling against Ismay for saving his life, when so many of the women and children on the Titanic went down, described him as J. Brute Ismay. That was very unfair, but it had its effect. The question is whether a man in the peculiar situation Ismay was, should rather than leave himself open to suspicion of using his position to ensure his own safety, go down with his ship, as the captain and engineer must go down with the ship, or be the last to leave.

Ismay does not stand high in public esteem, for the circumstantial evidence of the case was against him. But candidly, if a man were to imagine himself in Ismay's position at the time the lifeboats were leaving the ship, what does he think he would do? If there was no one on deck to get in the boat in which Ismay climbed, should Ismay have declined the opportunity of being saved? The ethics of his actions at the moment, hinge on this. As the boat was leaving, and no one else was ready to get in, should he, because of his official connection with the White Star line, still decline to go? It is hardly right to say that he should. Any man, no matter what his official position, has a right to save himself providing that by so doing, he does not deprive any women or children of the preference, and does not endanger the safety of others. A man of heroic spirit might sacrifice himself for others, but is there any call for needless sacrifice? Let us be fair in our judgment of the man, for though accounts differ as to important details, it does not seem true that any woman or child or man aboard the ship was denied an opportunity to get into the lifeboat that Ismay might have the preference.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION

The old question of vaccination is being fought out in Calgary. The Alberta health act states that on and after January 1, 1913, no pupil shall be admitted to any school unless and until he or she produces evidence of successful vaccination. The Trades and Labor Council and other bodies have protested against the application of any such rigid rule of compulsory vaccination, on the ground that the merits of vaccination are still so much a subject of medical controversy, the acceptation of it still so largely a matter of personal conscience, that the law is both autocratic and an interference with just personal liberty.

The new Ontario Health Act contains a provision making it compulsory to vaccinate all infants within three months of birth, but it is not enforced, nor recognised by the people or profession. The Act also confers powers on the medical officers of health, or the local boards of health, to enforce compulsory vaccination if in the case of a smallpox epidemic there seems to be warrant for it. Ordinarily in the conduct of the schools, there is no consideration of vaccination. Only when smallpox develops locally, and there is danger of its communication through the gathering of children in school, are the requirements of the act enforced. At such a time, the local board of health may order general compulsory vaccination, indeed it is subject to penalties if it fails in the carrying out of the act when an epidemic becomes serious. But at the same time, there is no effort in Ontario to enforce vaccination except when there is some indication of immediate danger, some prospective epidemic that makes the taking of radical steps almost imperative.

The Ontario way of dealing with the question is the right one. If the provisions of the Ontario Health Act were rigidly enforced, the people of this province would rise en masse against the medical autocracy that would make of them serfs similar to the Russian peasantry. In England some years ago, they had a compulsory vaccination act, but so strong was the protest against the invasion of personal liberty, especially when there was no prospect of an epidemic, that the House of Commons was eventually compelled to revise the legislation, inserting the conscience clause that enabled anyone objecting to vaccination on principle to escape it. Now the compulsory vaccination act is practically a dead letter.

The Alberta act would deny the use of the public schools to all unvaccinated children. The mass of statistics that have been gathered for and against vaccination, by the controversialists, seem to favor the immunisation, but there is still sufficient evidence in rebuttal to warrant the law in leaving a loophole of escape for non-believers, especially when there is no real or prospective necessity for such health-endangering injections.

FAVOR THE BORDEN PLAN

The consensus of opinion in Britain and the other countries of the Empire, outside of Canada, is very much in favor of the Borden plan of giving aid to the naval defence of the Empire. From whatever ground it may be regarded by Canadians, from the standpoint of expense, of patriotism, of self-interest, there is much more to warrant the giving of three Dreadnoughts to the British forces in the North Sea, than there is in the establishment of a local separate navy, especially under conditions very unsuitable to real sea efficiency. The Borden program is to give three of the largest battleships afloat to British naval strength in the North sea, strengthening the defences of the heart of the Empire against Germany, the only real menace to it to-day. Then the Borden Government will proceed to formulate a permanent naval policy, which will not be that of another contribution, since the Premier has announced that the present intended contribution is not to be a precedent for others. The policy of periodical or regular contributions of either ships or money is not going to be repeated. Of course this does not mean that if any real crisis again faced the British naval defences, there would be a bar against Canada giving more ships or money. But if such an emergency arose, it would be dealt with by the Canadian Government at that time, on its own merits, and irrespective of what Canada has done before. Therefore the permanent Canadian policy will embody something quite different from the emergency contribution, and that probably means that something in the nature of a Canadian navy will be formed.

The case ought to be fairly plain to the average man, who does not as a rule follow politics closely, nor help on the gray hairs by figuring out how Canadian autonomy can be saved if we are to give three ships to the British naval forces in the North Sea. The average man will know that there is nothing in the cry about Canada being ruled by Downing street, or leaving its defence to Downing street, in the giving of three Dreadnoughts. The Mother Country is in need of this aid. The Empire ought to have stronger central naval forces. It is all very well to argue that Britain can leave the defence of the outlying seas to the British Dominions on those seas, and concentrate her ships in the Home waters. But for the effective superiority of its North Sea forces, Britain does not want the older and slower and more lightly-armed ships that it feels safe in placing on the outer stations. On the North Sea it wants the fastest, largest and most powerful ships, ships such as Canada proposes to give. Then with the other ships of the Pre-dreadnought type on the other stations, it will have the pick of the whole fleet in compact form, ready for instant action, and per ship, presenting the highest efficiency and fighting power man has yet devised. Surely the case is complete for the giving of the Dreadnoughts to Britain, rather than the building after many long years of preparation of a small fleet in Canada—a fleet that would be of no effective use in aiding the common defences of the Empire at all, once the central force was smashed by the enemy. Where Canada wants to protect itself first of all is in the North Sea, for that, under the menace of the German naval expansion, is where the storm will break first, and where it is most important that the defences of the Empire shall be strongest.

TAX REFORM

The way Sir James Whitney flattened out the tax-reformers at the meeting of the Special Committee on Assessment resembled the action of the juggernaut car of India. The tax-reform movement was squelched where the squeeze is felt most. It can be said with the utmost assurance that there is no demand even from tax faddists for single tax in Ontario. That would be a radical departure quite unpopular. In England even Lloyd George and Premier Asquith have been in the forefront of the ranks of decriers of the Henry George doctrine. They propose land reform—that is to say, freeing the land, but Henry George will have to wait for a few years before his tax theory finds much acceptance. But what might well be tried in Ontario and in other places as well is a graduated system of taxing improvements less than land. Land should be taxed full value, but improvements one-half. The trouble with taxation now is that the system of assessing is wrong. The oath an assessor takes to assess land fairly and honestly, on its full value, is practically held in contempt by any average assessor who to-day makes his rounds jacking up assessments on small foundation as if the main object of life with him was the increase of property income by the municipality. If improvements, such as a new coat of paint, a new veranda or any such comparatively trifling addition to a house, were not infrequently used as excuses for jumping up the assessment, there would be less demand for tax reform.

That a large degree of exemption of improvement tax would not be a benefit, but rather detriment to the community, ought to be rather clear. The municipality must raise from its taxation, chiefly on real estate, enough money to conduct the municipal services. If the burden of taxation be shifted from improvements, it must be put on the land. But if, as the tax reformers urge, the effect of the partial exemption is to force land-owners to build, so as to increase the productive value of their property, is that building likely to exceed the reasonable limits of the municipal growth? It is a mistake to imagine that all land is held by speculators who should be penalised. If the population of a town is 8,000 how many new dwellings will there be tenants for? Yet the policy of forcing vacant land-owners to build is supposed to cure many evils. The result of a broad application of the policy would rather be to lower the scale of rents, benefit the occupant of high-price property and transfer the burden to the small owner—very frequently the workingman who has just accumulated enough money to be able to invest a surplus in some property.

PRESENTATIONS MADE AT SALEM

Special Correspondence.

Salem, Dec. 26.—On Monday, Dec. 23rd, about thirty of the young people of Salem Sunday School, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Sargent taking them completely by surprise, and presented them with an address and presentation as a token of their appreciation for their services.

After the young people gathered and they had had some music, Mr. James Grattan stepped forward and read the following address, and Mr. Roy Webster presented the beautiful presents:

To Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Sargent,

Dear Friends,—We, the members of the Salem Sunday School, have met in your home to-night to spend with you a few hours of this festive season and to express our Christmas greeting.

It is with much pleasure and gratification that we re-count the steps of progress which, with God's blessing, our school has taken while under your faithful superintendency.

We wish to thank you most sincerely for the able service you have rendered in conducting our school, and for the cheerfulness with which you have sacrificed the oftentimes much needed hour of rest, in order that we might prosper in our work. In token of our appreciation we ask you to accept this watch fob.

To Mrs. Sargent we present this ring, whose golden circlet is to us emblematic of your increasing helpfulness, not only as president of our organization, but as a willing and efficient promoter of good in all branches of our Sunday School work.

We join with heart and voice in conveying to you both, the good old wish—"A Merry, Merry Christmas," and may the best that Heaven and earth affords, be yours throughout the coming year.

Signed on behalf of the S. S.,

JAMES L. GRATTAN,
ARNOLD R. WEBSTER,
CLARA ARMSTRONG,
SADIE JOHNSTON.

At the close of this address Mr. Sargent suitably replied.

The evening was spent in games and music, and refreshments were served. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close with hearty greetings of the season.

May young married men raise volunteers for the service of their country and the old bachelors only be pressed.

May we always look forward to better things, but never be discontented with the present.

Here's to matrimony—the high sea for which no compass has yet been invented.

ST. GEORGE'S ANGLICAN CHURCH

New Name For the South End Mission

Mr. J. Price, the incumbent of what has heretofore been known as the South End Mission, informed the Review this morning that the church has been Christened St. George, the Bishop having given his consent to that name. The name will undoubtedly cause great satisfaction to the English community in that part of the city, which is very strong. Churchmen in this city will be pleased to hear that the Right Rev. Bishop Reeve will be the preacher next Sunday evening at St. George's church.

Presentation of Silverware By School Pupils

Special Correspondence.

A meeting in the interests of the of the local option campaign was held in the Methodist Church here on Monday evening, December 16. The following speakers were present Mr. Richard Lees, I. P. S., and Mr Cowan, of Peterborough; the local clergy, and Mr. Magee, of Toronto. Music was furnished by the combined choirs of the Methodist and Presbyterina Church. We think had any person been present who was in favor of the liquor traffic and hearing the subject so well explinaed would think seriously of the matter before casting their vote on January 6th

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. W. Lean, who has been very ill is on the mend.

Mr. Magee, of Toronto has been holding picture shoes in connection with the local optioncampaign, in and around the village during the past week.

Miss Waterman left on Saturday to spend the Christmas vacation at her home in Bensfort.

The prize awarded for regular attendance for the 1912, at the Anstruther Sunday school, was won by Freddie Mann.

At the closing of the school at S.S. No. 2 Anstruther, Mrs. W. Staples was presented with a handsome silver butter knife in a satin lined box by her pupils. The presentation was made by Miss Iva Windsor and contained a card signed on behalf of the school by Iva Windsor and contained a card signed on behalf of the school by Iva Windsor, Whitten Younge, Fred. Mann and Walter Tucker.

HYDRO ELECTRIC MEETING TO BE HELD NEXT WEEK

An Opportunity to Learn Something About the Future of Electric Power in This Locality

To a Review reporter, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., said this morning that the meeting to be held on January 2, at which Hon. Adam Beck and Mr. G. C. Wilson, M.P., are to speak on Hydro Electric will probably be an opportunity to learn something about the future of electric power in this part of the province.

"The application of electric power to all the ordinary uses of life, is the aim of the immediate future," he said. "It is not too much to say that electric power will be the motive power that will take the place of human elements to a very large extent.

"Wonderful as has been the development of electric power for manufacturing purposes, it is still more wonderful what can be done in this way for farm interests. It will not be long before the farmer will be able to do 95 per cent of his work by simply pressing a button. 'You will remember," said Mr. Burnham" that it is not many years ago when the loss of electricity in carriage was so great that it could only be carried a short distance. Now it can be transmitted almost any distance and handled with perfect safety and that is here out numerous water powers will come in. As a great statesman once said "water is now literally worth its weight in gold.'

THE NAVAL QUESTION

"What about the naval question!" the reporter asked.

"Well I can only say" replied Mr. Burnham. "if the people of this country have got to waste their money in warlike preparations, the best way to do it is by co-operation and not by a complete independent navla outfit as proposed by Sir Wilfrid.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier's scheme would cost hundreds of millions of dollars and would be like each ward in the City of Peterborough, having a complete set of civic officials, police force, fire brigade, etc., instead of joining together to have one. Moreover, the more you have, the more likely there is to be a mix-up and it is only by co-operating on the most extended scale that peace can be assured. Therefore, to refuse to co-operate is, in my humble opinion, little less than madness."

IS CHARGED WITH STABBING

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—Frank Jesniwiski was arrested yesterday for wounding John Cohen, 69 Niagara street. Cohen was stabbed in the chin with a pocket-knife. He was taken to the Western Hospital. Seven stitches were required to close the wound. The two men quarrelled in the house, and when a third man attempted to stop the encounter Jesniwiski is alleged to have used the knife.

CHRISTMAS VISIT ON HIS BICYCLE

Mr. John Hawkins Wheeled to Hiawatha and Return

It was fine weather for cycling yesterday so Mr. John Hawkins, a machinist at the Wm. Hamilton Co., wheeled to his farm at Hiawatha to spend Christmas Day. He returned today, making the trip in 1.40, with the report that the roads are in excellent condition.

May the feeling heart possess the fortune which the miser abuses.

Year's Crop Figures.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The International Institute of Agriculture at Rome has reported to the Department of Agriculture on the year's crop figures. According to the Institute the production in Germany was: Wheat, 160,227,000; rye, 456,508,000; oats, 596,999,000, and barley, 159,927,000 bushels. Austria produced in wheat, 69,640,000; rye, 177,114,000; oats, 167,423,000, and barley, 77,524,000 bushels.

In ten European countries and Canada the production of sugar beets was 106 per cent. of last year's production, but although the production of cotton is estimated by the Institute to be more than nine million pounds in the U. S., India, Japan and Egypt, this amount is nearly four per cent. less than last year's crop.

Steamers Not Badly Damaged.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26.—The British steamships Merion and Oceano, which were in collision Tuesday night in Delaware Bay, reached Philadelphia yesterday, apparently not badly damaged. The Merion, carrying passengers as well as freight, left here Tuesday for Liverpool.

The passengers showed but little excitement after the collision, and nearly all of them were asleep in their berths when the steamship arrived back in port. They probably will be sent to Europe on a boat sailing from New York.

SOUTH BURLEIGH

Special Correspondence.

Burleigh, Dec. 26.—A very enthusiastic and successful temperance meeting, in the interests of Local Option in the township of Burleigh, was held on the 17th in Eden church.

The chairman of the meeting was Mr H McIlmoyl, one of the present Council, and the speakers of the evening were Mr. Cowan and Mr. Lees of Peterborough.

The evils of the liquor traffic were told in stirring words to the largest audience ever assembled in the neighborhood, and listened to with deep attention. Between the speeches the Apsley choir gave some good selections and one of their number, Miss Ella Brown, a solo, all appropriate to the subject. At the close of the meeting the ladies gave a lunch of tea, coffee and cake to all.

On Friday evening, the 20th, the Rev. W. D. Magee, representing the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance spoke in the church, illustrating his address with stereopticon views and addressed another meeting in the lower school house on that evening. Both the meetings were well attended, and our pastor, Rev. Mr. Prosser, who has been un- Rev. Mr. Prosser, who has been untiring in his efforts for the temperance cause, acted as chairman.

To the honest fellow that loves his recreation at night and his business in the morning.

SUCCESSFUL AT HOME OF OMEMEE HIGH SCHOOL

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, Dec. 26.—The Presbyterian Sunday School held its annual Christmas tree and entertainment in the basement of the church on Thursday evening. There was a splendid and lengthy program given by the scholars, refreshments were served and the concluding part was the distribution of gifts from the tree by a very live and real Santa Claus, whose presence created wonderful excitement among the little folk and whose bestowal of gifts brought much joy to the wee tots.

The public schools closed for the Christmas vacation on Friday afternoon with a grand combination program which called forth many favorable comments from the parents and friends of the children assembled. At the conclusion, speeches were delivered by the Revs. D. H. Currie and P. B. Thornton and the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. H. Lamb was in Toronto on Friday attending a business meeting.

Mr. R. A. Barron, principal of Gravenhurst High School, returned home for the holidays, on Friday evening.

The Presbyterians have announced a first class entertainment for New Year's Night in Coronation Hall. St. Andrew's Choir of Lindsay, comprising 30 voices, under the leadership of their director and organist, Mr. F. W. Robinson, with the assistance of other vocalists, will be heard in solos, duets, choruses and in the high class musical production "The Prince of Peace." Dr. Mason, M. P. P., will take the chair.

On Wednesday evening, the Choral Society held their concert in Coronation Hall and a good program was presented to a moderately filled house.

Miss P. Perkins, teacher of the primary grade, has reconsidered her resignation and will return here for duty after the holidays which she is spending at her home at Gravenhurst.

Miss Annie Thompson, teacher, of Toronto, is holidaying with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Thompson, of Sturgeon street.

Mr. J. J. Lamb and Miss Lamb went up to Toronto on Tuesday to spend the Christmas with friends in that city.

Mr. Clifford Mulligan, of Toronto, is the guest of his parents, Reeve and Mrs. Mulligan.

The Misses Bertha, Nora and Jessie Nichols, who have been teaching in different parts of Ontario, are holidaying at their home in Omemee.

Miss N. Thurston, teacher of the intermediate class in the public school, has gone to Lindsay to holiday at her home.

Miss Morden, principal of our High School left, on Saturday, to spend the vacation at her home at Niagara Falls. Miss Davidson, assistant teacher of the High School, is holidaying at her home in Toronto.

Miss H. Bartley, of Lindsay, ex-assistant of our High School, called on friends in town and attended the High School "At Home" on Friday evening.

Omemee High School held a very successful "At Home" on Friday evening in their capacious and handhandsomely decorated rooms in the upper storey of the school building. The entertainment was divided into three parts, the first was the rendering of a very classy and interesting program of songs, recitations, readings, wand and club exercises by the pupils and their friends. The many trite and humorous local hits—given in delicate taste — brought forth loud and prolonged rounds of applause. The second part was a promenade to the lively music of an orchestra ensconced in a corner of the corridor. This tended to increase the sociability of the people present who were in splendid form for the closing number of refreshments and toasts. Mr. Fred Corneil was in the chair and called on Mr. W. H. Curry to propose the toast of "Canada," to which Miss Davidson replied. Miss Bradley proposed the toast of "The Former Graduates" and this was responded to by a graduate, Rev. P. B. Thornton. Mr. G. W. McLean proposed the toast of of "Education" and Miss Morden replied to it. Master Willie Barron proposed the toast of "The Ladies" and Miss Margaret McCaffrey replied. "The King" was honored in the singing of the National Anthem and "Our Country" in O, Canada. The function was a unique affair in the history of our High School and its success depended on the untiring energy of the staff and pupils who were sub-divided into various committees. Many of the old boys and girls were present, a complete list of which is almost impossible; herewith we append a few:—Messrs. G. Shield, P. B. Thornton, T Shield, H Hart, F Evans, A McQuade, R Laidley, H Fee, A Jones, A Hoast, H Veals B Skuce, M Earle, W Fee, E Jones. Misses L. Burke, G Grandy, L Fee, A and L Parsons, C. Balfour, E McCrea, E McQuade, N Ford, —. Blaylock, J McConnell, N Nichols. Mesdames R Cornwall, White, F G Sandy, R J Mulligan.

Nominations for Village Council will be held on 30th inst., in the evening. Polling day will be the 6th January, if necessary.

INTRUDED ON WEDDING.

Stepfather Fatally Kills Woman and Is Mortally Wounded.

TAYLORVILLE, Ills., Dec. 26.—John Belder, a carpenter, armed with a revolver, intruded upon a wedding party at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Edna Fisher, last night, shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Fisher, fired a number of ineffective shots at his wife, at the bridal couple and at policemen who were summoned to the house, and was himself mortally wounded by one of the police officers. Mrs. Fisher, a woman of 68, will die, it is feared. The wedding ceremony was conducted after the excitement occasioned by the shooting had subsided.

The wedding which Belder's attack interrupted was that of his step-daughter, Elsie Bates, to Ora Redfern.

When the police reached the scene Belder came to the door and fired five ineffective shots at the officers. One officer returned the fire with a shotgun and another with his revolver. Belder retreated to the rear of the house and later was found with a bullet wound near the heart, but heavily armed and preparing to resist arrest. Capture was effected by a stratagem, and Belder was taken to a hospital.

TONNAGE INCREASED.

Soo Freight Traffic For the Year Is Best In History.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Dec. 26.—An increase in nearly every branch of traffic through the Soo locks and canal is shown by the annual report of lake commerce given out at the canal office yesterday. An increase of 13,000,000 tons of registered freight and nearly 20,000,000 tons of unregistered freight is shown as compared with last year.

Passenger traffic was smaller than in 1911, the total being 66,000, as against 79,000 last year. A slight decrease also is shown in the tonnage of flour, iron ore and building stone.

Wheat shipments amounted to 114,000,000 bushels, an increase of 17,000,000 bushels over 1911. Other grains show increases of from 25 to 50 per cent.

This year's tonnage is the largest on record

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Fashionable summer resorts in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, and even winter resorts in Florida, Alabama and California are to be the subjects of operations of a syndicate of Chicago negroes under the name of the "Lincoln Athletic and Social Club." CORNER GEORGE AND HUNTER STREETS

JEWELL—MILBURN.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Bouskel, 473 King St., by the Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints' Church, when Stella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jewell, of Rosmount, was united in marriage to Mr. William Milburn, of Peterborough. The bride looked charming in a beautiful dress of white silk voil, with satin and pearl trimmings, and wore a bridal veil, with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white roses, with streamers of tulle and satin ribbon. While Mendelssohn's wedding march was being played by Miss Murduff, her uncle, Mr. Aaron Bouskel, escorted her down the stairs, where she was met by her father, who led her to a very pretty arch of evergreens and flowers, underneath which they were married. Miss Iva Bouskel, niece of the bride, who was maid of honor, looked very pretty in a blue silk marquisette dress, trimmed with satin ribbon, and tiny rose buds, and carried a bouquet of pink roses, tied with pink ribbon. After the ceremony congratulations were showered upon the bride and groom, after which the guests to the number of 50 adjourned to the dining room, which was prettily decorated with evergreens and flowers, where they partook of a sumptuous wedding dejeuner. The groom's gift to the pianist and maid of honor was a very pretty necklace and pendant, set with amethysts, and to the bride a set of furs. A very pleasant evening was spent in cards and dancing, after which, amid showers of confetti, the happy couple left for their home, 271 William St.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Tieney, Cobourg; Mrs. John Lytle, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. Richard McBride, of Rosmount; Miss Nellie and Miss Ethel Jewell, of Roseneath, and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Milburn and Master Tom Milburn, Toronto.

BARTON—MOSS.

At the home of her father, Mr. J. H. Moss, 135 Lansdowne street, Miss Maggie Moss was united in marriage yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, to Mr. Albert Barton, by the Rev. J. N. Clarry.

There were no attendants. Guests were present from Galt, Sault Ste. Marie and Grande Pre., N.S.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton left for a trip to Montreal and other eastern points, and will not return till the latter part of next month. Mrs. Barton will be at home at their residence Fradetta Ave., after February 1st.

GILBERT—HUNTER

The prettiest of house weddings of the season was that celebrated on the afternoon of Christmas Day, 1912, at the residence of Mr. W. A. Hunter, 299 Boswell Avenue. His daughter, Mary Ethel Hunter was united in marriage to Thomas Percival ("Percy") Gilbert, son of Mr. Alfred Gilbert, 270 Sherbrooke Street. The drawing room of the residence was beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens. The bride, escorted by her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding march, performed by the bride's cousin, Miss Alice Hunter, of Lakefield. The contracting parties took their stand under an evergreen arch, from which was suspended a floral bell, and Rev. Jas. Rollins of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church performed the ceremony in the presence of the two families. The bride, who was attended by her sister, Ada Lillian, in pink silk and, carrying the ring in a basket of pink carnations, was charming in a princess gown of ivory satin en train, trimmed with white roses, with veil of Brussels net, arrayed mob cap style. She carried bride roses. After the ceremony dainty buffet refreshments were served, and the happy couple were escorted to the station, where under the usual shower of rice and confetti, they took train for Toronto and the west. The bride's going-away gown was of pan tweed; Persian lamb furs and ermine toque, with seal crown.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert will take residence for the winter, at 270 Sherbrooke street, and in the spring will probably remove to Fairmount, Saskatchewan.

Both the young people are deservedly popular and highly esteemed, as shown by the large array of elegant wedding presents; and a very large circle of friends unite in congratulations and good wishes.

GUNN—BUTLER.

On Tuesday, Dec. 24th, St. John's church, Peterborough was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, when Miss Ethelynd Jean Butler, of Midland, second youngest daughter of the late Joseph Butler, and of Mrs. Butler, Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. John Alexander Gunn, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Davidson, and during the signing of the register, the beautiful bells of St. John's chimed the wedding march, Blest be the Tie that Binds, and other appropriate selections. The bride wore a tailored suit of navy blue serge with waist of ecru silk lace and hat of white silk beaver, daintily trimmed with pink roses and black velvet ribbon. She also wore a beautiful set of mink furs, the gift of the groom and carried a bouquet of pink and cream Marcheniel roses. After the ceremony the bride and groom assembled at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. S. McIlmoyle, to partake of a dainty wedding breakfast, after which they departed for points. On their return the happy couple will reside at their home No 1 Moss Park Place, Toronto.

THEATRICAL

BILLY THE KID

Berkeley Haswell "Billy the Kid," and Company were greeted by two large audiences at the Grand Opera House yesterday, and judging from the enthusiastic applause, the performance was greatly enjoyed. One of the strongest supporters of Billy was Con. Hanley, an Irishman, and his contributions on the violin in the barroom of the Broken Heart, made a big hit.

The Union Jack was conspicuous throughout both performances. The company purchased two large flags from J. J. Turner & Sons, for use in the Canadian tour and at the evening performance the theatre management presented Mr. Haswell with a small flag. Mr. Haswell gracefully acknowledged the gift. He referred to the kindness extended to the company by Canadian audiences, and said that next to the United States, his native land, he would like to live in Canada.

SANTA CLAUS AT S. A. TEMPLE

BRIGHT SERVICES AT ST. JOHNS'

The services at 8 and 11 in St. John's were attended by large congregations, and the choral matins and eucharist were specially bright. Over forty choristers attended and led the singing of the grand Christmas hymns most effectively. The anthem, 'While Shepherds Watched', was beautifully given during the offertory. The Christmas musical program of choruses and carols will be sung after evensong on Sunday next.

May we have virtue for a guide, fortune for an attendant.

MERRY TIME AT THE HOME

Entertainment and Christmas Tree Christmas Eve

Christmas at the Protestant Home was pleasantly ushered in on Tuesday by an entertainment and Christmas tree. Mrs. Roger, President of the Board, assisted by several other members, and Miss Lancaster, Superintendent, had made great preparations, and with the assistance of kind friends, a very pleasant two hours were spent by the old folk. St. John's choir boys, directed by Mr. R. J. Devey, gave a program of carols and hymns, and Mrs. Devey also contributed a humorous selection. Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. H. J. Keith gave short addresses, and the pleasant event concluded by a hearty vote of thanks to all who had contributed.

POLICE COURT

Three Fines of $5.75 Were Imposed

Three arrests were made yesterday, the party in each case having been gathered in while carrying an over-supply of intoxicating liquid. The three were brought before Magistrate Dumble this morning and admitted the charges.

Robert Ryan was arrested while kicking up a shindy around Innis' barn on Simcoe street, indulging in obscene behavior and profane language. In answer to Chief Thompson's question as to where and when he bought his supply of drink, Ryan said he purchased a bottle the day before Christmas.

He was fined $5.75, which he paid forthwith.

William Warburton with extreme forethought also laid in a supply for the holiday. It cost him $5.75. The latter asked for time to procure the money, but His Worship said, "no not one hour; you did it deliberately and wilfully, and you must take the consequences."

Fred Johnston, the third and last had his Christmas cheer also put by for the day, and by tarrying too long, finds himself the poorer by $5.75.

MERCHANTS HAD GOOD BUSINESS

General satisfaction is expressed by the great majority of merchants at the outcome of the Christmas trade. The comment "the best we've had" is freely made. The request of early shopping did not pass unanswered.

RESULT OF THE COURT OF APPEAL

Two Hundred and Sixty Two Names Were Added

The Court of Appeal completed its work on Tuesday night. The names actually added were 262 of which 116 were put on by the temperance people and 146 by the liquor interests. An official of the Temperance Daily said to day:

"A fact of importance is that of the 146 names added by the advocates of an open bar, only 24 are owners or tenants, while of the 116 added on the local option side over 100 are names of owners and tenants."

BOTH ALLIES AND TURKS DETERMINED NOT TO YIELD

Turkish Delegates to Peace Conference are Vehement in their Declaration That They Cannot Surrender Territories Where Invasion is Still Resisted---Talk of Ottoman Envoys Laughable Say Allies.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Both the Turks and the Balkan allies are standing by their guns on the peace terms. Both declare that it is impossible to recede from their positions.

Nevertheless, those who think they know what is going on behind the scenes still believe that the probabilities of the conclusion of peace are greater than of the resumption of the conflict.

The exchange of cipher despatches between the administration at Constantinople and Rechad Pasha continues, but the chief of the Turkish plenipotentiaries declines to divulge the nature of the reply which he will present to the allies to-morrow when the conference reassembles at St. James' Palace.

It is understood that this will be as already outlined, with the additional promise that Turkey will apply to the European territories remaining to her the reforms which Count Von Berchthold, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, proposed before the war.

"While I cannot discuss the reply of the Ottoman Government," says Rechad Pasha last night, "nothing prevents me from saying that the terms the allies have proposed are simply absurd. They have produced this impression wherever heard, even outside of Turkish circles. It was never known that after the conclusion of an armistice one belligerent party could ask the other to cede territories bravely defended and still resisting with heroism.

"Why should we do this, especially when the Bulgarians had three reverses at our hands just before the armistice, while the Greeks, who continued to fight, were defeated both on land around Janina and at sea off the Dardanelles?

"Turkey was induced to accept an armistice only on the advice of the powers, in order to avoid useless carnage on both sides. The same humanitarian considerations led the Ottoman Government to ask for the revictualing of the besieged towns, and might induce the Government to yield certain conditions for the sake of peace. But there is a limit which the allies have far surpassed."

The allies, on the other hand, assert that the armistice was arranged to give Turkey an opportunity of making peace terms without suffering further losses in the field, and they characterize Turkey's talk of keeping Adrianople, Janina and Scutari and regaining Saloniki as simply laughable. Gen. Danglis, the Greek chief of general staff, said:

"Let them come and take Saloniki if they can. Even the dust of our ancient heroes would rise up to defend our rights."

The most optimistic of the Turkish military party profess confidence that the Bulgarians will never be able to force the Tchatalja lines, but that, on the contrary, with her present powerful army, Turkey will free Adrianople in a fortnight, and, adding that garrison to the main body, will take the offensive toward Philippopolis and Saloniki.

THREE LITTLE TOTS PERISH IN FIRE

With Parents and Neighbors Powerless to Save Them the Children of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Curran of Edwards Station Are Burned to Death.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—While Mr. and rs. Andrew Curran of Edwards Sta-on, Carleton County, were in the sta-e in preparation for a journey to ttawa Christmas morning, their ouse caught fire and their three chil-ren, who were in bed, were burned death. The parents were unable aid their children in any manner.

The fire started at 5 a.m. and the use and contents were completely estroyed. Although Mr. and Mrs. urran made repeated attempts to eak through the flames and rescue children, they could not do so ithout losing their own lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Curran arose early cause they were to drive into Ot-wa to take Christmas dinner with rs. Curran's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Johnson. They started a fire in kitchen stove and then went to the barn to do the chores and get the horses ready for the drive to the city. The children were left sleeping in their beds.

They had been in the stable about fifteen minutes when Mrs. Curran came out and saw the house in flames. Without waiting to call her husband she ran to the door and tried to get in, but already the fire had got such a start that she could not pass the flames at the door.

Mrs. Curran then ran back to call her husband, and after putting a ladder to an upper window they both tried to get in to the children that way, but again the flames drove them back. At this time neighbors had arrived, and they, too, made attempts to enter the house without result.

In her first effort to enter the door of the house, Mrs. Curran went so far that she badly burned herself.

LIBERAL LEADER SPEAKS TO LOCAL OPTION MEN

e Supports Province--Wide Measure and Local Option Too.

AYR, Dec. 27.—"Some may believe the abolition of the bar by means local option who do not believe in province-wide measure. Others may lieve in the latter and not in the rmer. I respect the opinions of both ese classes of men, but personally believe in curtailing the evils of the quor traffic both by a province-wide easure and by local options, and erefore I am glad to assist in pro-ting the passage of the local option law."

This was one of the statements ade here last night by N. W. Rowell, .C., M.P.P., during the course of a eech delivered at the request of the cal option committee.

"The time has come," continued r. Rowell, "when the people of this ovince, with intelligent conviction d full heartfelt enthusiasm, should vote themselves to the great task of cial reform, and towards improving e social and industrial conditions der which the mass of men live and bor. By almost unanimous consent e licensed bar is one of the greatest rriers in the way of genuine social form. It is a social and economic ste. It impairs the industrial effi-ncy of the worker. It increases the t of production to the manufactur-, owing to the irregularity of work. diminishes the business of the legi-mate merchant. NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A cable from Delhi, India, says: Lord Hardinge's condition was considerably improved yesterday, there being no fever and the pain was considerably relieved. The physicians say it will be three weeks before the viceroy can resume active direction of affairs, as the result of the injuries he received at the hands of a bomb-thrower Monday.

The police, who have made many arrests but have not obtained evidence that any of the suspected persons threw the bomb, say that Lord Hardinge's order that the Durbar procession proceed after the explosion gave the assassin an opportunity to escape.

LET MR. GRAHAM SAY THE WORD IF HE WILL

TO THE EDITOR.

The Buckhorn Bridge bungle is beginning to get on the people's nerves. The Examiner attacks me constantly as one of those to blame for not carrying out the alleged arrangement for relieving the county. All those on the present Government's side of the case affirm that if Hon. G. P. Graham would have acknowledged a legal OR MORAL liability, Mr. Cochrane would have carried it out. I will pay $50.00 to any charity the Examiner may name if Hon. G. P. Graham will say that the late Government was legally or morally liable in this matter. This offer to remain open for two weeks. If the Examiner accepts, it is to say so, and in equal terms. This will close out the mud-slinging on both sides, I hope.

MEN WHO WERE WITH REILLY ARE UNDER SURVEILLANCE

Inspector Greer, Who is Working on the Case, Has Some Evidence.

BEAVERTON, Ont., Dec. 27.—The inquest into the death of Ernest Reilly of this place, whose body was found near a water tank in the railway yard Christmas morning, will be opened here to-day by Coroner McLean of Orillia. Inspector Greer of the provincial police, who arrived here yesterday, believes that he has already unearthed facts which may lead to the solution of the mystery which surrounds the death.

At the inquest will be heard the evidence of George Walton, who got off the Lindsay train with Reilly, and was at the water tank with him, but who says that he does not know why he went to the tank, what happened at the tank or how he subsequently reached his home. No arrests have been made, but those who were with Reilly on his trip to Lindsay are being kept under watch.

Yesterday Reilly's coat, vest and overcoat, which were missing when the body was found, were discovered near the spot where the body was found, turned inside out. It is not thought that robbery was the object of the crime, if crime it was, as Reilly was known seldom to have money.

Col. Farwell of Whitby, county crown attorney, will conduct the examination for the crown at the inquest to-day.

BAD STORM IN FRANCE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Many fishing vessels have been lost in the English Channel and the Bay of Biscay and harbors along the French coast are crowded with vessels seeking refuge.

GUELPH OFFICIALS ARE CHARGED WITH GRAFTING

Sensational Charges Presented in Petition to Council Include Condemnation of Work of Chief of Police, Medical Health Officer, Sanitary Inspector and County Officers.

OTHER CHARGES FAILED

GUELPH, Dec. 27.—At a special meeting of the City Council held last night sensational charges were made by a number of citizens against the chief of police, the medical health officer, and sanitary inspector of the city and against the officials of the County of Wellington who have charge of the administration of justice.

The petition, referring to the administration of justice, reads as follows:

"Mayor and Council: Whereas the inefficiency of the administration of criminal law has for a long time been a matter of public knowledge and has become a serious scandal, specific instances of which include: Refusals to receive complaints against the criminal law; pressure from officials brought to bear upon citizens to compound criminal offences; refusals of the crown officers to prosecute offenders charged with crimes, even when they have admitted their guilt; release without bail and without any attempt to exact bail of such persons, both before and after conviction; favoritism and partiality and general disregard of the fundamental principles of law; and whereas in addition to these and other specific charges, it is well known that there is general laxity and inefficiency in the administration of criminal justice in this county; and whereas citizens have sometimes succeeded in getting their cases before the local courts by appealing at great expense and trouble to the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto, although even the directions given by that Department have not always been followed."

The petitioners asked that the council "ask the Attorney-General for Ontario to investigate conditions in the County of Wellington and City of Guelph in connection with the administration of justice, and to take such steps as will justify a restoration of public confidence therein."

The charge against Col. Clark, sanitary inspector, has already been investigated by the Board of Health, whose resolution after two sessions was one exonerating Col. Clark of all charges of wrong-doing made by Major Mereweather, his associate inspector, and censuring Major Mereweather for being indiscreet. The whole of these charges simmered down to $4.50, which by mistake was charged to "removing dead animals" instead of "cleaning closets."

The council decided to hold a special meeting on the afternoon of Tuesday, Dec. 31, when the charges will be fully dealt with. In the meantime all the papers will be handed over to the city solicitor for his opinion. The petition was sparsely signed.

WHITNEY PROMISES THAT RIGHT WILL BE DONE BY ALL

Be-lingual Deputation makes Protest Against Regulation Seventeen.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Dec. 27.—Premier Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy and Hon. J. O. Reaume, received a bi-lingual delegation representing two hundred and forty school boards at Parliament buildings this morning, to protest against regulation No. 17, regarding the teaching of the French language in Separate Schools.

Hon. R. A. Pyne and Hon. J. S. Duff, also assisted. The deputation numbered about eighty.

Mr. Genest, of Ottawa, asked for the withdrawal of regulation No. 17, which was promulgated without proper authority and was directly opposed to regulation fifteen, and contrary to the spirit if not letter, of the British North American Act. Regulation seventeen would be detrimental to education generally. He maintained also that the training of teachers for English-French Separate Schools should be under teachers of their own religion.

Mr. Guibard and Dr. Freeland, both of Ottawa, were other speakers. Dr. Freeland said the Irish people sympathized with the French because the Irish had been robbed of their language and he objected to regulation seventeen also because it delayed the education of Irish children.

Mr. Genest and Dr. Freeland both attacked the regulation limiting the teaching of French to one hour, and Mr. Genest maintained if this discretion was allowed, inspectors might even restrict each division of a school to five minutes daily instruction in French.

Sir James said that religion played no part in the question and Dr. Freeland said the purpose must be to anglicize the children.

To this the Premier retorted that the opinion showed too much ignorance of the question to deserve a reply. Sir James maintained throughout that the Government had no intention of doing away with with the French language and that French-Canadians would receive absolute justice. He promised the deputation careful consideration of their request and that right would be done by all.

HOW WILL LOCAL OPTION AFFECT THE HOTEL ACCOMMODATION?

When Local Option carries in Peterborough will it affect hotel accommodation. Yes, it will, but for the better. In considering this question it is necessary to bear in mind that a bar room is not a hotel. It is not even a necessary part of the accommodation of a hotel. When one comes to think seriously of the matter, it is impossible to find any good reason why a bar room should be in a hotel any more than in a boarding house or a dry goods store. What then is the effect of closing the hotel bar. In such towns as Owen Sound, Galt, Bowmanville, Midland and Orillia, where there have been no bar rooms for some years, it is now the universal testimony of the travelling public that the accommodation has improved. The proprietors are now giving their attention to the legitimate business of keeping hotel rather than to that of dispensing drinks, with the result that their houses are cleaner, quieter, more comfortable and more respectable.

WHAT ABOUT RATES.

Within the past three years hotel rates in Peterborough have increased by about 50 per cent. Had local option gone into operation then it would have been blamed for this increase. It didn't go into effect there but the increase in rates has taken place just the same. In none of the towns where the hotels are without bars has there been an greater increase in hotel rates than in Peterborough where we still have the bars.

Forty-seven "dry" towns and villages in Ontario were asked recently, "Have you good hotel accommodation? To this 41 mayors and reeves answered "Yes," four "No," and two "Fair." In sixteen of the first it is better than under license, and some of those who answered "No" say that it is better than it was under license. One experienced traveller Mr. C. [illegible] Pascoe, says, "the hotel accommodation in local option towns is from 25 to 30 per cent better now than it was under the old license system. As soon as local option gets into operation one notices directly the absence of the rough element caused by drunkenness in the hotel. There is absolutely no question about this."

Another commercial traveller, Mr. J. W. Charles, traveller for one of the large Ontario wholesale grocers, is one of the best known men on the road in Western Ontario. Mr. Charles says: "Every three weeks I cover 51 towns in Western Ontario, and of these 38 are dry. In each case, with perhaps one or two exceptions the hotel accommodation in these dry towns is better than before the local otpion by-law came into force. In no place, without exception, are conditions any worse."

To substantiate this, Mr. Charles gives some specific instances: "I would like to take you to Southampton," he says "so you could see how pleased the boys are to get into this town. The Commercial Hotel provides particularly good accommodation. Another case is Creemore. Here in the Mansion House, I believe we travellers find the best accommodation that can be got in any town of its size in Canada.

"At the Queen's Hotel in Orangeville, conditions are very much better than they were before the by-law came into force. At Flesherton the Munshaw House has always given good accommodation and still continues to do so, though its bar has been cut off. In Durham and Bolton conditions have greatly improved for the travellers' comfort since the towns became dry."

"Then again," said Mr. Charles, "I want to speak particularly of Owen Sound and to say a good word for the Seldon House. This is one of the bright spots on the road for us. It is a delight to go there. I knew the town well under the old license conditions, and it is certainly much improved since local option came into force."

SUNDAY'S MEETING

On Sunday afternoon in the Peterborough Opera House, at half-past three, several commercial travellers will tell the people of Peterborough the facts about the hotels in Local Option towns and the rates they charge. The fact is Peterborough has nothing to fear on the score of hotel accommodation from the passing of the local option by-law.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Floral Booth a Novel Feature For Church Bazaar.

CHILDREN DANCE AT FAIR.

No Matter How Elaborate Your Fall Blouse May Be, You Must Call It a Shirt—White Satin the Favorite Material to Use For This Garment.

My Dear Elsa—I think I can supply you with a beautiful new idea to carry out in the bazaar you are getting up for the benefit of your country church. In the fall you will have lots of autumn flowers, so a floral fortune telling booth will be quite within your resources.

The setting that you will need for the flower fortune booth is a tent or arbor or a screened off section among the trees, lined with greenery. Simple paper muslin stretched from tree to tree will answer the purpose charmingly and cost but a trifle. A bower of vines should form an approach, and the entrance may be screened so that no one may look in upon the venturesome person who is consulting her fate.

Within the bower there should be a long table showing all along its length little boxes or trays filled with damp sand, covered over with moss and stuck with tiny sprays of autumn flowers. In the center should be a very large bowl filled with scented water.

Fortune telling patrons have the choice of three ways in which their future may be revealed and character read. There is the fortune of single blossoms, there is the fortune of bunches of flowers, and there is the fortune of the scented water. Of course in all three instances the method of telling the fortune is the same, but the appearance of the work is changed, and there are lots of people who will want their fate foretold all three ways.

Your fortune teller will have to learn by heart the meaning of every flower, grass and leaf that she is using, which knowledge may be found in most books on floral lore or else—which is the clumsier but safer way—to tie small notes to the stems of the different kinds of flowers and consult these. She must be glib of tongue and be able to make the interpretations sound convincing and mysterious.

The patron picks out from the assortment any flower that appeals to him and hands it to the fortune teller. If he chooses a bouquet he has the second method and a little more variety in the telling. In the fortune of scented water the fortune teller takes from a boxful of dried petals a handful of different kinds and sets them afloat on the water in the big bowl, at the same time fanning them so well as to scatter them over the surface. When the water has been sufficiently disturbed to cause a good deal of commotion among the petals and to mix them thoroughly she stops fanning and allows them to come to rest. Those that stop on the side near the one awaiting his fate are the ones which foretell his future.

Your fortune teller may be gowned in a rustic fashion, but I think an eastern costume is more effective, but if you have any trouble in getting the eastern garb, why, have the girl wear a simple unbound robe of some thin white material with a crown of autumn leaves on her flowing hair.

A pretty side play at the fair is to have a group of small children give a dance in front of the booth at regular intervals. This attracts the crowd. These youngsters should be dressed as elves and fairies or representing different flowers.

Now I know you want a hint or two about the autumn styles. My dear Elsa, as you value your reputation as a modish woman, don't call your blouse a blouse, no matter how elaborate it may be, but speak of it as a shirt, and a white satin "shirt" is the correct thing to wear with your new fall tailor made, and veil it with chiffon if you would be exactly up to the minute. This chiffon overshirt is always laid in tucks or plaits. Gathers are completely out of fashion. But the plaits are not narrow pin affairs, either. They are one, two or even three inches broad, three of these broad plaits set close together often covering the space between armhole and front opening.

The plaits are stitched all the way down and are not intended to add fullness across the bust. This is effected by a clever slanting cut, which seems to be the secret of the French blouse maker. The shirts, of course, have long sleeves and a long shoulder line. The top of the shirt and upper sleeve are cut kimono fashion, and a diamond shaped gusset is inserted underneath where the arm joins the shoulder. Then the long straight sleeve is attached to the upper kimono sleeve, and its lower edge is slashed and fastened with hooks and eyes, so that the fit around the wrist is trim and neat.

These satin waists are exquisitely dainty, but they soil mighty soon, and the average laundress does not do them up with any credit to her skill. This is the way I wash my new shirts: I lay it in soft water and suds of pure white soap. Now, don't rub the satin, but souse it up and down in several cool waters after the first immersion. Iron the shirt when almost dry with a not too hot iron, using a bit of thin muslin between the satin and the iron. So only will you save the luster and texture of a white satin shirt.

I have just seen an ad. in the paper offering at one of the big shops a bargain in white satin, so I'll bid you adieu and risk my life in the bargain crowd. Yours devotedly, MABEL.

DONKEYS IN INDIA

They Are Hired In Droves at Three Cents a Day.

Donkeys, donkeys, donkeys — and still more donkeys—coming through our garden gate. What was the meaning of it? Grey donkeys, white donkeys, a few large donkeys, many small donkeys, any and every kind of donkey, possessing one attribute in common—that of a lean and hungry look. Did I say, one attribute?—no, there was another. They were all laden in the same way. Each had what for a better word I will call panniers made of coarse sacking, or string bags, containing a few stones.

"What is the meaning of it?" I asked my husband. I was newly "out" from home, and hadn't become accustomed to Indian ways. Consequently things were constantly occurring which to the residents were quite ordinary, but to me were most extraordinary.

Had a tiger suddenly walked in at the garden gate, or a leopard, I should not have been so surprised, though considerably alarmed. But then I knew tigers were found in India, and I didn't know that donkeys were in the habit of roving around in companies and battalions. Hence, my surprise at this sudden visitation of forty or fifty of them.

At length appeared a ragged, lean, brown figure—the man in charge. His garment consisted of a dirty loin cloth, a ragged waistcoat and, as apology for a turban, a piece of rag twisted round his head. By dint of much gentle persuasion, aided by a stout stick, he managed to eject them from the garden.

My husband told me the stones or "kankar" were to be used for road making.

"But what a queer way of carrying them," I said. "Why don't they get a cart and carry one big load, instead of so many small ones?"

"Because it is cheaper, my dear."

"Cheaper?" I said.

"Yes, cheaper."

"All those donkeys?"

"Yes, a bullock cart (we don't use horses for carting purposes here, you know) would cost four or five shillings per day, but these donkeys cost only three cents each a day, or if they are not required for the whole day but merely a few hours, they may be hired at the rate of one cent per journey per donkey."

Thus we live and learn.

Quite Deaf.

When a defendant in Edgware police court said that he wished to call his mother as a witness the court officer observed that she had been in court all the time and had heard the evidence.

The Mother (from the rear of the court)—Yes, but I'm stone deaf and can't hear a word. The Clerk (in a whisper)—Quite deaf? The Mother—Yes.

Smartly Done.

A gentleman alighted from a well-appointed brougham at the door of a silversmith's shop in London recently, and purchased a considerable quantity of plate, in payment of which he tendered a one-hundred-pound note and received a small balance.

He carried the plate away with him in the brougham, and shortly afterwards a policeman called at the shop to say that he had heard of the purchase, and to inform the silversmith that the note tendered in payment was a bad one.

He was glad to add, however, that the thief had been apprehended, and requested him to attend at the police station at a certain hour in the afternoon to identify the prisoner.

He told the silversmith that it would be necessary for him to give up the bad note to facilitate the preliminary inquiries, and this the latter did, obtaining a formal receipt.

On going to the police station the unfortunate shopkeeper found that he had been hoaxed. The "gentleman" and the "policeman" were both members of the light-fingered fraternity, and the note was a good one.

Maps and Charts.

Anaximander, of Miletus is generally supposed to have been the originator of geographical and celestial charts, about 570 B.C. Modern sea charts were brought to England by Bartholomew Columbus to illustrate his brother's theory of a western continent. This was about the year 1489. The first tolerably accurate map of England was drawn by George Lilly, who died in 1559. Gerard Mercator published an atlas of maps in 1595, but it is only within the last fifty years or so that we have had really scientific charts of the earth's surface. It was, of course, impossible to have had such maps in the olden time.

A Vile Slander.

One of the curiosities of the British House of Commons, very rarely seen, was Erle Drax, for many years member for a Dorsetshire borough. Once at a general election on the day previous to the nomination he put out the following address to his constituents: "Electors of Wareham! I understand that some evil-disposed person has been circulating a report that I wish my tenants and other persons dependent upon me to vote according to their conscience. This is a dastardly lie, calculated to injure me. I have no wish of the sort. I wish and I intend that these persons shall vote for me."

"Scribbler must have unusual powers of imagination."

"Yes; otherwise he would not regard most of his writings as poetry."—Buffalo Express.

Too Dark.

Skipper—Did you see that light?

Lookout—No; it's so dark I can't see a thing.—Harvard Lampoon.

SOME COIN VALUES

Twenty-Five Dollars Is the Price of a Silver Halfpenny.

A coin, like a book, need not be of value merely because it is old and worn. Let collectors bear this fact in mind, and they will be spared many disappointments.

Hopes beyond number have been dashed to the ground by old Georgian coppers, the scratched, rubbed, and defaced condition of which appeal strongly to the novice's imagination. True, some of these are "catalogued" at over twenty-five cents each; yet, in the condition in which one usually finds them, they would hardly realize more than a few cents apiece.

Silver pennies, again, of the reign of Henry II.—seven hundred and fifty years old—average in worth a mere twenty-five to fifty cents. Another bitter disappointment for the novice, who cannot understand why a brother collector, who knows his business, has bought a King John silver halfpenny for $25, and is chuckling over the bargain.

Yet the contrast between the value of many of the earlier British coins is even more startling. Mercian pennies of the period of Burgred—over a thousand years old—do not fetch more than $1.25, but a penny belonging to the next reign—Coelwulf II.—twenty years later, may easily be worth a hundred times this sum. One particularly fine specimen was sold recently for $405.

The fact of the matter is that, although a great many old coins are valuable because of their rarity, a number of others are extremely common.

An instance of bad judgment, which shows how greatly old coins can deteriorate in value, occurred some time ago in connection with a Canterbury penny of the eight century. This coin was bought for the large sum of $500, and no doubt the purchaser enjoyed showing his prize and boasting about the price he had paid. He could have invested his money better, however, for when the coin was resold it only realized $105.

On the other hand, many valuable coins are purchased for mere songs. There are a number of simple folk who sell old coins in a haphazard kind of fashion, without knowing anything about their actual value. Cute dealers and keen collectors love pottering about their musty shops. Sometimes they pay special visits to remote districts, poking around for the priceless, overlooked gems which will repay their railway fares, with a big bit over.

A certain collector, however—one of our foremost English actor-managers—goes to work in a more generous, if less business-like manner. When on tour in the provincial towns, he visits the "local fossils," searching for old coins at ridiculously low prices. Afterwards, he resells them in London for their proper value, and sends half his profit to the delighted and astonished provincial ignoramus.

I have often been asked to give the value of a coin, and have been considered a very poor expert because of my equivocal answer. It is, nevertheless, quite impossible to be definite about the selling value of a coin unless one knows (1) the exact state of preservation, (2) the issue, and (3) the conditions under which it is to be sold.

Take a Queen Elizabeth shilling, for instance. What is it worth? Well, I must know whether it is hammered or milled. If the former, it may fetch from fifty cents to $1.25; if the latter, from $1.50 to $3.75. Then, is the writing clear and defined, or is it badly worn? Has the coin a hole in it? And so on.

Perhaps someone tells me that he has a friend who lately sold one for $5.

"I know," I reply wearily. "One Elizabeth shilling in perfect mint condition fetched $77.50."

So an Elizabeth shilling, undescribed, may be worth from fifty cents to $77.50. But what novice will respect the connoisseur who tells him so?

Began Life as Scarecrow.

There are many ways of starting in life. David Jackson, an inmate of Tooting Home, London, who has just celebrated his 104th birthday, earned his first wages, at the tender age of eight, as a scarecrow. Jackson is very nearly the oldest inhabitant of the metropolis, having been born in 1808 near Lynn. After giving up service in the fields he was apprenticed to the merchant marine, obtained a captain's certificate, and ultimately saved enough money to purchase his own vessel. But the ship was lost, and Jackson found himself practically destitute. He went to London in 1860, and for 23 years was engaged by a firm of window-blind manufacturers. He continued to do odd jobs till within two days of his 99th birthday, when he was induced to enter the Wandsworth Workhouse. Thence he was transferred to the Tooting Home. He has a very retentive memory, and can remember the peace being proclaimed after Waterloo. He also recollects the great rejoicings there were on that occasion, and says that "some of the women nearly went mad."

First Spectacles.

The earliest known pair of real spectacles was made by Salvino d'Armato, of Florence, in the 14th century. Of course, there had been "snow spectacles" from time immemorial, and Roger Bacon knew of magnifying lenses. But the earliest glasses for correcting the vision are comparatively modern. Drawings in the Ratisbon manuscript of 1600 show the comfortable style of huge circular lenses mounted in rings of black horn, not unlike the dark rims of gutta percha used to-day.

No Better.

Billicus — There is honor among thieves.

Cynicus—Nonsense! They are just as bad as other people.

Queer, but Correct.

Professor Bradner Matthews, in his quality of philologist, said one day in New York:

"The past participle, 'gotten,' has gone out in England, though it still lingers on with us. In England, however, 'gotten' is almost as obsolete as 'putten.'

"In some parts of Cumberland the villagers still use 'gotten' and 'putten,' and a pupil teacher once told me of a lesson on these past participles wherein she gave her pupils an exercise to write on the blackboard.

"In the midst of the exercise an urchin began to laugh. She asked him why he was laughing and he answered:

"'Joe's put putten where he should have putten put.'"

Saved by Knowledge.

In the cotton picking season in Texas a negro who had gone into the country to work returned very much disgusted.

"Didn' yo' git no offahs ter pick no cotton?" asked a friend.

"Sech as dey was. White man done offered me one-third o' wat Ah could pick. Ah done tuk a look at de field an' saw dat when it wah all picked it wouldn't amount ter one-third. So Ah done lit out for home."

"Yoall was in luck not ter git fooled none."

"Yassuh. Ah done went ter school an' studied rifentick when Ah was young."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CANAL EXTENSIONS

It has been intimated to Hon. Frank Cochrane that the estimates for the year will include $3,000,000 for the start of the Georgian Bay canal. Thus another great Canadian understanding will be commenced, and during the next few years carried to completion. It is very satisfactory to note that the building of the canal will be carried on by the Government and that the private interests seeking a monopoly to obtain the power rights, will have no opportunity. These capitalists are an English caterie, who would derive great subsidiary advantages from a franchise to construct the canal, but Canada has had enough experience of the disadvantages of corporation operation of transportation utilities and the granting of more concessions of this nature would be heartily condemned. In the supplementary estimates of last year a sum of $200,000 was included for the Welland Canal survey and plan preparation. The diversion of the Welland Canal will cost $50,000,000 and will take about three or four years to complete. The Georgian Bay Canal cost will total about $100,000,000. The action of the Borden Government in relation to the construction of the two new great waterways should lend encouragement to the promoters of the Trent Canal enlargement. The Trent Canal extension and deepening is of less national consequence than the Welland or Georgian Bay canal work but it is still a matter of great importance to Central Ontario and cannot be overlooked. In pursuing an energetic policy of canal enlargement, the Government is laying one of the greatest and most solid foundations of national prosperity.

A POWER INVESTIGATION

The recent investigation into the accounts of the Hydro-Electric Commission in Toronto has shown that they are in proper shape, and also that the city service is making money. It might reasonably be doubted if City Auditor Sterling, whose reports of the Commission's books led to the suspicion that perhaps some of the figures were manipulated to make the affairs of the Commission look more prosperous than they were, was so utterly in the wrong in his auditing as the newly hired accountants made out. But it seems well assured at the same time, that the affairs of the Toronto Commission made out are prospering, like the affairs of the Provincial Commission. The recent reductions made by the Ontario Commission to the municipalities will probably be passed along by the local commissions to the consumers, this being the beauty of a power-at-cost system. If the Commission were reducing the price of power to private companies, the public consumers of those companies would not share in the benefits. The benefits of the reduction would go to swell the profits of the shareholders. If Peterborough were taking power from the Hydro-Electric Commission, Peterborough consumers would get the power at cost—the cost depending on the quantity used. The whole objection to the various alternatives proposed by the Electric Power Co. in its offer to sell out its local companies to the city was that each one contemplated the retention of its power monopoly. Very fair terms were offered the city if it would yield the right of operating a public power service, and thus introducing competition. Apparently the Electric Power Co. cared nothing about disposing of its local Power and Light Companies, as long as it could keep the Hydro-Electric out. The series of power meetings to be held in Peterborough will put the matter clearly before the voters, and there is no reason to doubt that the by-law to raise $120,000 for the local distributing plant, conditional upon the fulfilment of the Commission's undertaking will receive a handsome majority.

AUSTRALIA AND CANADA

Some of the Liberal newspapers quote the Australian naval defence scheme as a reason why Canada should follow the Laurier naval policy. The Australians have engaged for the construction of a fleet of their own, with the creation of suitable naval bases, and have left alone the idea of a contribution to the strength of the Imperial navy. New Zealand has contributed a battleship, but has also gone in for local defence. As stated in the Round Table the Australian naval idea includes close co-operation with New Zealand in all matters which affect naval defence, including command, construction, armaments and finance and arrangements with Canada, South Africa, and the Government of India for co-operation for naval defence of mutual interests, including the construction of ships by those other Dominions.

This is very good for Australia, but the case of Australia does not apply with equal force to the case of Canada. Australia and New Zealand are islands, isolated in the South Pacific, exposed to attack possibly by Japan or other Oriental power if the opportunity offered. Australia is peculiarly dependent upon sea defence locally for its safety. Canada is not. If we admit that the Munroe Doctrine is any safeguard for Canada, which most Canadians will deny, no European nation would have access to Canadian territory. If there was any absorbing to be done, the United States would attend to that itself. But though Canadian defence needs might warrant Canada in providing more ultimate safeguards in the shape of small local fleets, Canada's comparative nearness to the European war zone makes this country much more dependent upon the supremacy of British squadrons in those European waters, and less dependent on its own local resources of defence. There is a distinctly threatening outlook for the position of British naval power in the next two or three years if the over-seas Dominions do not come to the aid of the Motherland. What an inspiring spectacle it would be, as an object lesson to all the world, and Germany in particular if in the day of her approaching peril, Britain were to receive substantial naval contributions from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India, what an impression this galaxy of Dominions, all but one self-governing and autonomus could create by united action to strengthen the central and common defence of the Empire. Canada's gift of Dreadnoughts to the Mother Country will help largely to create anew that feeling of Imperial solidarity which means so much to the future of British domination in the world. Should Canada shrink from her proud position at the head of these sons and daughters of the Motherland, shrink into a nation of petty squabblers over the necessity doing nothing for Britain, but something quite inadequate and inefficient for ourselves.

A LIBEL ON PETERBOROUGH

The following appears in a local contemporary:

"To judge from that mob-attack on the Brantford police station, Brantford, like [illegible] greatest need of a stronger police force."

This is a libel on Peterborough and its police force. This is an orderly city, as the residents well know, and the policemen, we believe, do their duty intelligently. The press despatches attribute the trouble in Brantford to too much police zeal.

TRENT CANAL

The total expenditure to date on the Trent Valley Canal (including the Newmarket Canal,) according to a Government report just issued is $11,302,045.89, of which $309,371.31 was spent prior to Confederation. Some 57,290 tons were moved on the Trent Canal during the year, an increase of 11,027 tons. The products of the forest accounted for 31,342 tons of the total moved. During 1912, $1,746,095.48 were spent.

A MODERN RALEIGH

He was a stalwart young citizen, she a charming young woman. They were under an awning. The rain had ceased, but the street was muddy. He did not look like Sir Walter Raleigh nor did she look like Queen Elizabeth But probably Q. E. never looked prettier.

"Wuxtry poipers!" shouted a newsboy.

"Say, kid," he said, "are you too busy to earn a half dollar?"

"Well, Bo," replied the boy, "do I look like a cheap edition of Mr. Rocke-by-baby? Show me de mun."

"Well, boy, take your papers, spread 'em out from curb to car track. Cover the mud with 'em. Get busy!"

He paid the astonished boy. The car came. He bowed in courtly manner to the queen. She blushed and said:

"Oh, Billy, you foolish boy!" But she walked over the papered path as proudly as Q. E. could have done.

Then, like Q. E., she sentenced him for life. He is her meal ticket now.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Speed Mania.

Mr. Newcar (about to start on his [illegible] motorcar, to his chauffeur)—Now, William, I want it thoroughly understood I will not have fast driving. Always keep well under the legal limit, not as close to it as you can. Ten miles an hour is fast enough for me. What I want is comfort, not excitement. Do you understand?

Three days later. "Er—er—William, I must be back to the house by 7 o'clock. This road seems very straight and wide. I think you might go just a little faster without danger?"

Two days later. "William, this dust is very unpleasant. If you could pass that car ahead—it seems to be going rather slowly."

Next day. "Put on a little more speed, William. There's no use in being a crank. This road is too good to lose the chance."

A week later. "Open her up, William. There are no police within five miles, I'll bet, and if there are who cares? I'm out for fun. Let her rip. Let her rip. This is no steam roller. Let's have some speed."—Philadelphia Ledger.

EVA BOOTH

Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army forces in the United States of America, will visit Toronto on January 19th, and address two meetings in the Massey Hall.

Miss Booth, it will be remembered, was in charge of the work of the Salvation Army in Canada some years ago.

She was born on Christmas Day, and her father, the late general, often referred to her as his Christmas box.

Some Butchers' Names.

A butcher who had some spare time made a study of the New York telephone directory for butchers whose names are out of the ordinary or fit the business. Sam Frankerfurter has a shop at 219 East Seventh street and A. Weiner is at 1443 avenue A. John Now is on Third avenue and Frank Then on Amsterdam avenue. If they formed a partnership Now & Then would sound familiar. Wing Sang is in the poultry business and A. Fox is a game dealer. Louis Rich is on Third avenue and John Richer is in the Bronx. Emil Half is on Amsterdam avenue. George Idler hustles in a market on Webster avenue. John Grab is taking things easy in his shop on Second avenue. Max Warm is on East Houston street. Max Lent of Norfolk street never keeps it. Joseph Hug of West Fifteenth street should be a favorite with the women. For the finish how about Julius Goodby of avenue A?—Butchers' Advocate.

CATAMOUNT KILLED.

A Genuine Mountain Lion Is Taken Near Galt.

GALT, Dec. 27.—A huge cat-like animal was killed on the bush farm of Joseph Sauder, Puslinch Township, by Aaron Ziegler. It was discovered that some marauding creature was stealing meat hung up in the kitchen, and a burrow under the building was accidentally disclosed, extending 100 yards back to a swamp. At the entrance to the burrow a deal-fall was set and worked to a charm. The captive animal was despatched with a crowbar. It proved to be larger than a lynx, and is pronounced by Herbert Wales, Galt, taxidermist, a genuine catamount or mountain lion. It weighed 38 pounds and measured 5 feet 4 inches from nose to the tail tip.

A Young's Point man, named Harvey Kearney, found drunk and arrested in a public place, was fined $5.75. Kearney asked for an opportunity to reform and asked to be let off.

"I'm not letting people off," replied Magistrate Dumble.

ENDANGERED LIFE.

An Otonabee man named James Sexsmith, was found guilty of being intoxicated while in charge of a horse and rig, thereby endangering the lives of pedestrians. He was allowed ten days in which to pay a fine of $5.75.

WORK ON THE N.T.R. IN QUEBEC

Mr. Harold Kenneally, who has been employed on the National Transcontinental Railway in Quebec, returned here yesterday to spend a few weeks' holidays with his parents. Mr. Kenneally reports that the construction is being pushed ahead with all possible rapidity so that the line he has been working on is now only 40 miles distant from the line which is being built from Cochrane. The work is difficult as there is much water and the country is hilly and rocky. The country is a haven for hunters and will, no doubt, some day become a great place for summering. Trains are running almost daily and small towns are springing up all along the line. Mr. Kenneally will return in a few weeks.

MUST NOT RIDE DOWN THE HILLS

Police Officers Will Arrest Youngsters Who Offend

Four juveniles who were using a bobs-leigh on Reid street hill this afternoon, were given a lecture by Chief Thompson and warned not to repeat the offence.

The Chief wishes to warn young people against the practice of sleigh-riding on the hills, either on the pavement or the road. Officers will be on the lookout and offenders brought before the Magistrate.

BOWMANVILLE TO SHARE IN McGILL ESTATE

Charles McGill, at one time manager of the Ontario Bank branch in Peterborough is one of the parties interested in a case which may result in the town of Bowmanville securing property worth $52,000.

James H. McGill, died in Washington, D. C. in May, 1908, leaving a wife, but no children. In his will he left all his personal estate, save a bequest of $3,000, to his wife absolutely, and after her death the real estate was to go to his native town of Bowmanville.

Mr. McGill died in 1910, and it was expected that the town would come into possession of property in Washington, D.C., valued at from $200,000 to $300,000, subject to a mortgage of $100,000. Two brothers of McGill, however, intervened.

Charles McGill and John McGill, next a kin of the deceased, claimed that the corporation of the town of Bowmanville was a foreign corporation and was incapable of taking and holding the Washington real estate. The town engaged counsel to protect its interests and there has been much litigation over the matter ever since. The affair was complicated by Charles McGill assigning his interest in the estate to his daughter Madeline, and the Royal Trust Company, the liquidator of the Ontario Bank, intervening as creditor of Charles McGill, claiming that the conveyance from father to daughter was void.

Propositions for settlement were made between the various parties at different times, but it was only recently that a basis acceptable to all the counsel was arranged. The plan is that the property is to be vested in the Washington Loan and Trust Company for disposal. Out of the proceeds the trust company is (1) To pay all costs incurred by the different counsel to date, to be fixed at $20,000, which sum is to cover the cost of the counsel for the town for the Royal Trust Company, for John McGill, for Miss McGill, and Charles McGill, both here and in the United States; (2) Pay such costs as the trust company may be entitled to, and (3) Pay to the town of Bowmanville 59 per cent of the next residue; (4) Pay to John McGill 23.5 per cent. of the net residue, and (5) Pay to the Royal Trust Company and Madeline McGill 17.5 per cent. of the net residue.

TOWN TO GET $52,000.

The town is to vote upon the proposition, and after all the delay it is expected that the voters will gladly approve of the settlement, whatever they may think of the town's right to the bequest. If the property sells at its estimated value, Bowmanville will receive about $52,000, a sum that would be welcomed by many larger municipalities.

BATTERED WAY TO SLAVE GIRLS

Inspector Find Four in Gambling House---As High as $4000 Offered For Women.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 27.—After threading a labyrinth of dark passageways, battering down two heavy doors and finding themselves blocked by an impassable steel barrier, Capt. Frank Ainsworth and a squad of United States immigration inspectors found four Chinese slave girls immured in an improvised prison, formerly used for a gambling house. The raiders were brought to a standstill by the steel door, but found a passageway entering through two secret panels, which led them to the room where the girls were concealed.

Loy Yee, a Chinese of local prominence, is a leader of the Lui Don Tong, which recently has had trouble with the Hop Sings, and the police believe the girls were being concealed not only from the inspectors, but from the watchmen of the rival tong. To prevent a threatened tong outbreak the Chinese district is being policed with unusual vigilance.

It was learned last night that since the recent raids the price of slave girls has risen and that as high as $4,000 apiece is being offered for women.

CURIOUS THINGS HAPPENED IN DUMMER TOWNSHIP

One Was a Series of Fires in One Day — Two Brothers Charged With Arson.

Before His Honor Judge Huycke this morning the two Dummer township boys, Robert Davis Hill and Russell Hill were placed on trial charged with maliciously firing a shanty and stable belonging to William Davis in Dummer.

By one o'clock all the evidence for the Crown was in, and the case adjourned until two thirty this afternoon.

A couple of the witnesses displayed evident reluctance in answering certain questions put to them by Crown Attorney Wood. Clarence Sampson, a young man who resides nearby the Hills, admitted seeing foot prints leading to and from the vicinity of the fire. Some of these tracks had been covered, and witness reluctantly admitted having obscured the trace of one foot-print himself by placing some twigs upon it. Mrs. Post, another neighbor, also covered some foot-prints.

An ordinary hammer produced in court, was identified as one which was in the burned shanty, and which was recovered at the home of the Hill boys.

Mrs. Post, in her evidence, said that curious things had happened in the township of Dummer lately, one of which was a series of three fires in one day.

Provincial Detective Miller and Constable Cochrane each said the two Hill boys when asked about the fires confessed ignorance of any fires having occurred. They explained the presence of the hammer by saying it had been found on the 8th line of Dummer in April last.

At 3.30 this afternoon Judge Huycke gave judgment of not guilty, and each of the accused was honorably acquitted. Mr. G. N. Gordon defended.

WINDMILLS OF HOLLAND.

Old-Fashioned Methods Still Prevail In Operating Them.

It is said that there are 10,000 windmills in Holland. The number is said, however, to be less than it was fifty years ago, for the Dutch have, in a measure, substituted steam and other forms of power for the capricious wind.

Whenever the wind changes in Holland hundreds of mill keepers come forth and laboriously turn the tops about by hand. They may be seen pushing and straining on the galleries surrounding the towers midway between the ground and the top or tugging at the spokes of a wheel on the ground.

Zaanland is especially the home of the windmill. It lies to the north and west of Amsterdam, and every town or village in this district begins or ends in "zaan."

Zaandijk, according to one traveler, perpetually reminds one of the old query, "Do you see anything green?" "Everything in Zaanlijk is green. Bridges, fences, doors, windows, walls, are green, ranging from the green of peas to that of apples, olives, grass, malachite, beryl, old bottles and verdigris.

In a little museum of this place there are shown many models of windmills, among which is that of the first windmill erected in Zaandam. It stood in the water, and when it was desired to turn the sails toward the wind the miller was obliged to get into his boat and, taking a line, tow the whole structure around until it was in a working position again. Later on the mill was set on a post and the whole turned about this as an axis, in the same manner that one revolves bookshelves. Then another method was devised. The entire edifice was turned about from the bottom like a monitor's turrent. Finally the comparatively modern type was adopted, that of a cap holding the axle and sails with a cogwheel and spindle inside and easily moved from below by a hand wheel or windlass to secure the proper frontage at will.

Clams' Eggs.

The clam's eggs are carried by the mother on her gills. When there are fish in the water with them the mother clams discharge the eggs which soon hatch, but if there are no fish they carry the eggs until they decay. The reason of this strange behavior is this: When the eggs are set free in the water they soon hatch and the little ones swim about until they find some fish to which to attach themselves. They live for a time on the mucus of the fish and then drop off, sink to the bottom and form burrows for themselves. This curious semi-parasitic life is no doubt a reversion to the habit of some ancient ancestor.

Lizards' Tails.

Certain lizards are remarkable for the fragility of their tails, although this weakness is not always the drawback that may be imagined. The diamond tailed gecko, for instance, frequently owes its existence to the readiness with which its caudal appendage can be snapped off. This reptile, which will perch upon a rock head downward and tail in the air, is liable to be preyed upon by hawks. One of these formidable birds will swoop down upon a lizard and seize what it takes to be the head, but is really the tail. The brittle tail snaps off, and the gecko wriggles away, not much the worse, to grow another.

ABOUT THE DIVER AND HIS CLOTHES

When clothed in the ordinary diver's suit topped with the heavy brass helmet a diver is helpless. The air that is pumped down to him fills not only the helmet, but the entire suit, puffing it out to such an extent that heavy weights are required to keep the man down. The work that he can do is limited. One of the annoyances that he has to endure is the fact that he cannot reach inside of suit to ease any discomfort. A diver once discovered a June bug in his helmet when he was down under water, and he was obliged to endure all the torture of having the insect crawl over his face without any possible means of reaching it to destroy it or even brush it away. Recently, however, a French inventor devised a diver's outfit which dispenses with everything but an abbreviated form of helmet. Air is pumped to the diver in the usual way, through a pipe which is attached to his helmet at the back of the neck.

"More Bacon."

Many years ago Congdon's tavern in Wickford, Rhode Island, was famous for its good cheer, and in "Early Rhode Island" W. B. Weeden has an entertaining tale of John Randolph of Roanoke, who was once a visitor at the inn.

Mr. Randolph was on his way to Newport and made his journey on horseback with his cousin Edmund, secretary of state under Washington. All the way from New York "ham and eggs" had been the universal fare. At Wickford Congdon said he would give them clams for supper. The eccentric John of Roanoke rubbed his hands in pleased expectation. Then appeared the host again, saying the tide was too high for clams, but they should have some capital quahaugs.

"Good heavens," exclaimed Randolph who did not know that the quahaug is a hard shelled variety of clam, "more bacon!"

A Hard Job.

"I see from your letterheads, Bilkins, that you are the assistant treasurer of that company of yours," said Witherbee. "Have you got so much money it takes two of you to look after it?"

"No," said Bilkins. "We have so little it takes two of us to find it."—Harper's.

HOT CAMPAIGN ON IN GALT

GALT, Dec. 27.—The local option campaign is becoming hotter and hotter. One of the most interesting features is a newspaper passage-at-arms between H. K. Cockin, conducting a repeal assault, and James R. Cavers, secretary of the defence forces.

Feeling is being stirred up more and more. It is said the repealers admit that they can't possibly poll more than a 50 per cent. vote when three-fifths is required, but yet they mean to fight to the last.

Illinois Dairies Bad.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 27.—Insanitary conditions were found to exist in 2,100 of the 4,700 dairies inspected by Dr. C. E. Crawford, chief dairy inspector of Illinois, according to his annual report, made public yesterday.

Conditions, however, were reported to be an improvement over the previous year.

Dairies supplying milk to Rockford and Waukegan were reported to be the most insanitary. Many typhoid cases were reported from these cities during the year.

LAKE CAPTAIN UNDER ARREST

SARNIA, Dec. 27.—The sheriff of Port Huron made a visit to Wallaceburg and arrested Clarence Johnson of that place, who is wanted in Marine City, Mich., for hold-up. The man robbed a clerk and held a party of citizens at the point of a revolver while he escaped. He crossed in a boat to Canada and made his way to Wallaceburg. The man is a lake captain, and has a wife and family and a mother living near Wallaceburg.

Raise $220,000 For Victorian Nurses.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—At a special meeting of the board of governors of the Victorian Order of Nurses, Miss Pelly, acting for Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, announced that the special fund which the duchess has been raising to enable the board to extend its activities, had grown to $220,000. This amount was formally handed over to the executive by Miss Pelly.

The board has not yet reached a decision as to the best means of extending the work, but has several proposals under consideration.

Counterfeiters Busy.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 27.—There has been remarkable activity of small coins counterfeiters during the past few weeks, attributed by secret service officials to the rush of Christmas season, when offenders expected to pass spurious money on the hurrying public. Most of the counterfeits were half dollars circulated in the east.

The Academy Shine.

The man who has the most highly polished shoes in Paris today is Paul Bourget. To one of his friends who was marveling not long ago at their incomparable brilliancy he communicated, under an oath of secrecy, this recipe:

"First you wash the shoe so-so with some water. Then you dry it and rub blacking cloth over it. Next you take a second cloth, softer than the first, and rub until the shine is perfection itself. Then with a sheep bone you rub for five minutes to fix the blacking, and that operation puts it in the proper condition to receive the polish, which you spread on with your thumb. All you have to do after that is to let it dry."

For your shoes to acquire the academy brilliancy you polish unceasingly and then polish them some more.—Paris Pele Mele.

Sugar as a Disinfectant.

A custom has grown up in parts of Europe of burning sugar in sickrooms and has been looked upon as an innocent superstition. Investigations, however, have proved the practice a beneficial and scientific one. Professor Trilbert of the Pasteur Institute at Paris demonstrated that burning sugar develops formic acetylene hydrogen, one of the most powerful antiseptic gases known. Five grains of sugar in several tests were burned under a glass bell with a capacity of ten quarts. After the vapor had cooled bacilli of typhus, tuberculosis, cholera, smallpox, etc., were placed in the bell in open glass tubes, and within half an hour all the microbes were dead.—Stoves and Hardware Reporter.

An Inspiring Experience.

A lady who must certainly have been related to the late Mrs. Partington recently returned from a seventy day tour of Europe.

To her friends she said with enthusiasm that of all the wonderful things that she had seen and heard she believed the thing she enjoyed most of all was hearing the French pheasants sing the mayonnaise.—Youth's Companion.

Haven't you said a thousand times you wouldn't stand certain things, and then stood them.

Dominion Alliance Allege Immoral Performance.

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.—Invading the Theatre Royal, High Constable St. Marie and two assistants yesterday afternoon formally placed the manager and the entire Moulin Rouge Burlesque Company, now playing at the theatre, under arrest.

That is to say, the high constable handed Manager McBrien a warrant made out by Mr. J. H. Roberts of the Dominion Alliance, alleging that an immoral performance is being given in the theatre.

Meanwhile the performances proceeded yesterday, the performers giving personal bail and will appear today.

Not Plot To Kill Taft.

PANAMA, Dec. 27.—An explosion, supposed to have been of dynamite, at 10.30 Wednesday evening, knocked over an ice cream booth at the corner of Central avenue and L street, some two miles away from the National Theatre, where at that hour President Taft was dancing at the ball given by President Perras of Panama. No plot is suspected by the members of the secret service.

Boy Drowned In Well.

KINGSTON, Dec. 27.—Christmas celebration was marred by a tragedy at a home in Camden East, when John Galbraith, aged 14, was drowned in a well near his father's home. The lad partook of Christmas dinner with the rest of the family and then went out. It is supposed that while drawing a pail of water he slipped on the ice surrounding the well and fell in.

~~WINTER TOURIST TRIPS~~

~~Are becoming more popular every year, largely owing to the increased transportation facilities and modern luxurious equipment, making the journey to Florida, Mexico, California and other resorts a pleasure instead of a hardship. With the change of cars you can travel from almost any point on the main lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System to your destination in the sunny South or the Pacific Coast where the flowers bloom and warm balmy breezes blow. Meals served in Dining Cars make it unnecessary to leave the train en route. Travel is an education, and it is delightful to get away from the every day grind, the monotonous or strenuous life to mingle with successful happy people, and besides it pays. Round trip tourist tickets are issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System at exceptionally low rates, giving choice of all the best routes ,via Detroit, Chicago, or Buffalo. Fast trains are run daily between these cities, carrying through coaches and electric-lighted Pullman Sleeping cars, via the only double track line making connections at these cities with through trains for the south, etc. A specially conducted party will leave Toronto by special train at 1.00 p.m. January 6th, via Detroit, for [illegible] Beach, Florida, and any one desiring to go should make berth reservations early at any Grand Trunk Ticket Office, or write [illegible] Duff ,District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.~~

THE FIDDLE DRILL

The "fiddle drill" is one of the oldest stonecutting tools in existence. It is said to antedate Greek sculpture and is in use today in about the same form as it was 2,000 years ago. As its name implies, its action resembles a fiddle. The drill is of two pieces. In one hand a carver holds the drill stock, which is like a carpenter's brace, except that it is straight instead of having a crank. In the other hand he holds the "bow," which is strung with a brass wire and which is given a turn around the drill stock. To use the drill the carver places the drill stock against his breast, holding it with his left hand, and with his right he draws the bow back and forth, fiddle fashion. This imparts a rotary motion to the drill stock, and the drill is ground to cut in either way it turns. The fiddle drill is used in the finest work, in crevices where the sculptor could not reach with his chisel and hammer without endangering the carving.

Tired of Joke Candidates.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 27.—Civic bodies here will petition the Legislature to require all candidates nominated at municipal elections to sign nomination papers. The practice of allowing anyone to nominate anybody else has given rise to about ten times as many candidates being nominated as go to the polls. For the board of education, unless the man nominated withdraws his name, goes on the ballot. This sometimes makes joke candidates.

A Lost Diamond.

Olive Schreiner, the author of "An African Farm," who was brought up in Africa, said that she and her brothers and sisters had as one of their playthings a bright stone that they called the candle stone. It was about the size of a walnut and would flash in a bright and singular way when held up to the light. Not until the children had grown up and the candle stone had been lost for years did any of them remember that it must really have been a huge diamond.

E. N. HINES is one of the road commissioners of Wayne County, Michigan, in charge of the highways leading from a prosperous farming district to the market in Detroit.

He has probably had more experience with concrete roads than any other road commissioner.

He told some of his experiences in an address in Chicago last May. He was road commissioner before he used concrete. He was not satisfied with macadam roads. In his own words:

"We decided that a change was not only desirable, but necessary; and we set out to find a more permanent and durable material which would approximate in initial cost that of a first class macadam.

"After thorough investigation, we decided that a concrete road would more nearly realize this ideal than other forms: The points considered as being in its favor were:

> "Comparatively low first cost; low maintenance cost; freedom from dirt; comparative noiselessness; ease of traction for vehicles of all descriptions; and the small crown necessary to get rid of surface water."

THAT was several years ago. Wayne County farmers were so pleased with those first concrete roads, that they later voted bonds and gave Mr. Hines and his fellow commissioners $2,000,000.00

for more Concrete Roads

Their reasons are not hard to find. In the same address Mr. Hines expressed them as follows:

> "I stand committed to the use of Concrete for country roads. I also believe concrete to be an ideal form of paving for village and city streets and alleys.
>
> "This is not a statement born of enthusiasm on the spur of the moment, but a cold-blooded dollar-and-cents view, based on results attained and arrived at after careful consideration of all the facts available and experiences undergone."

THIS is only one county's experience with concrete roads. But it is representative of the experiences of many others.

The sooner every town and county makes use of the information which these other communities have supplied, the sooner will its road fund be invested for permanent, satisfactory roads instead of being spent for roads that must soon be paid for, all over again, in the shape of annual repairs.

Will you use your influence for the purpose of hastening the adoption of this policy in your community? You know what good roads mean—to you and to your neighbors. If you have doubt of these claims, or if you desire more complete proof, let us send you the facts which we have gathered especially for that purpose. Just ask for "Good Roads Literature," and complete information will be sent free.

McGILL UNIVERSITY SEVEN TO PLAY HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Secretary Glover arranged to-day for the appearance at the Brock street rink next Monday night, of the McGill University Seven, which team meets St. Mike's at the Toronto Arena to-night.

Manager Morgan asks the following players to practice to-night at 7 o'clock sharp:

Wilson	Dwyer
Bond	Bradshaw
Weatherstone	Spratt
Mason	Ross
Armstrong	Park
Kelly	Giroux
Coughlin	Hall

LINE OF RESERVED CHAIRS ALONG THE WESTERN BOARDS

The Hockey Club Executive has a proposition for which the fans will be a deciding factor.

It is proposed to place 150 reserve chairs next to the boards, along the western section of the rink. These would be protected from behind by a wire netting, but not so as to interfere with the view of other spectators. Each of these seats would be reserved for 75 cents, one game, or for $5 with the privilege of taking a chair for all the games in the the first round for the senior, intermediate and junior series, a total of 10 games. Entrance could be made from the doors at the west side of the rink.

Applications for these reserved seats should be made at once to Secretary Glover.

COLLEGIANS AND CLEVELAND COULD NOT BREAK THE TIE

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 27.—Canada's colors were not lowered to the strong Cleveland A.C. Septet, who battled into overtime with the University of Ottawa hockey team here last night for supremacy.

The game ended in a 5 to 5 tie after one of the finest exhibitions of Canada's national winter sport ever witnessed here. At times the Canadians fairly swept down and overwhelmed their opponents. Ottawa scored four goals in rapid succession in the first period before the Americans broke into the point column at all. The teams played five minutes overtime without breaking the tie. Three thousand people saw the game.

HEFFERNAN LIKELY TO REMAIN WITH THE O. H. A.

Frank Heffernan left this morning for Toronto to jump into harness again with the Toronto R. and A.A. He was out practicing with the local teams last night. "Heff," as might be expected, has been approached by managers of professional clubs, who offered good inducements for his services. The latest offer comes from the Montreal Wanderers, but before leaving the city Frank intimated that he would likely stay with the O.H.A., for at least this season, providing his team remains intact.

RENFER BACK WITH OTTAWA

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Earl Renfer, the former Detroit and Toronto pitcher, who twirled for Ottawa in the Canadian League last summer, winning thirteen and losing four games, will be back next season. Manager Frank Shaughnessy announced last night that arrangements had been completed whereby Renfer would return.

NEW CARD GAME.

Invention of Hall Caine, the Noted Author, Has Caught On.

A new card game called "Manx," the supposed invention of Hall Caine, has just been introduced in the clubs and drawing rooms, and is said to be growing in popularity.

Its admirers declare that it possesses several advantages over hitherto popular card games, such as each player plays independently, may join the game at any stage, and play with one or ten contestants. Here is an outline of the way in which "Manx" is played:

The pack consists of sixty cards, and has two new court cards—"Billikin" and "Manx." The ace counts 1, the jack 11, the queen 12, the king 13, Billiken 14, Manx 15, and there are, of course, the ordinary cards ranging from 2 to 10.

The object of the game is to score by honors and by making multiples of five. Each player is dealt five cards, and as each plays a card in turn the numerical total increases according to the values of the cards.

Whenever "Manx" is played the figures revert to zero. The player who first scores 200 points wins. At the end of each hand the multiples made by each player, as well as the honors held by each, are counted and a fresh hand is dealt.

There are no trumps in Manx ordinary.

Scoring is done on a sheet of paper with a line drawn across the middle.

As in bridge, what is made in play is scored below the line. What is made in the hand, above. When a game of 200 is called the scores both below and above the line are added.

Every multiple of five scores 1.

A pair scores 1.

Two pairs score 3.

Three of a kind score 5.

A full house (three of a kind and pair) scores 8.

A straight or flush scores 10.

A straight flush scores 25.

A royal straight flush scores 50.

The first player who reaches 200 adds an extra 25 to his score, but the hand must be played out.

In the event of only two people playing, it is a good scheme to employ a double dummy.

Manx ordinary is a round game, but Manx is full of possibilities, and devotees of bridge will find that Manx Auction is the last word in scientific games.

Henry VIII.'s Flagship?

While excavating beside the Thames river at Woolwich, Eng., in connection with an extension of the borough electricity station, workmen have unearthed from the mud parts of a large wooden ship in a good state of preservation. From her size and construction the vessel is believed to be a man-of-war of Tudor times.

W. T. Vincent, president of the Woolwich Antiquarian Society, draws attention to the fact that it was in this neighborhood that the Harry Grace a Dieu, the first great battleship of the British navy, built by Henry VIII., met her fate by fire, as a contemporary record has it, "by carelessness of the mariners" in 1553. This vessel was built at the Royal Dockyard at Woolwich in 1512, and it was aboard her that Henry crossed to the Field of the Cloth of Gold.

The position in which the old vessel lies leads to the conclusion that she must have been run ashore in an ancient dock or creek, as she lies on an even keel just on a level with low water-mark, twenty feet below the surface of the wharf in which excavations were being made when the vessel was discovered.

A careful survey of the remains is being made by the London County Council.

Two or three years ago an ancient barge was found deep down in the Thames mud during the excavations for the London County Hall, and this was afterwards declared a fine relic of the Roman occupation, and now reposes in the London Museum.

Mother of Forty-Two.

The South African Times gives details of the remarkable matrimonial career of a Boer woman who has been married six times, and who at the age of 80 is called mother by 23 persons in addition to her own children, who number 19. The old lady's grandchildren number some 270. Married first at the age of 18, this woman was left a widow two years later with one child. Ten months later she married a widower who had three children, and eighteen months afterwards was again a widow, with four children claiming her care. At the age of 23 she married another widower, who had seven children. Five years elapsed between the death of the third husband and the marriage of the fourth, who brought eight children into the family, and added four more during the eleven years of married life. Another five years of widowhood preceded another span of eleven years of married life with the fifth husband, by whom the woman had 10 children. Two more years of widowhood, with 33 children, and the last matrimonial venture was made with another widower who had five children, and by whom she bare four more before he again left her a widow with 42 children.

New Zealand's Resources.

The timber trade of the Bay of Plenty, New Zealand, district has been for some time steadily increasing, and is now one of the most flourishing in the district. Rimu is the principal product, and is exported in large quantities to various parts of the Dominion with the demand, if anything, slightly in excess of the supply. The resources of the district are such that it will be twenty years before the back portions of the country will have to be exploited. To cope with the increase of trade, many of the mills are being enlarged and bigger plants are being installed.

A Profitable Calling.

In the west end of London there are scores of head waiters whose incomes range from $2,000 to $3,000 a year from tips alone.

Steam freight trucks are forbidden on the streets of Montreal.

BRIBERY.

I held her dainty hand.
She drew it not away.
I was elated much
Because she let it stay.

My arm went round her waist.
She didn't mind a bit.
I thought with her I'd made
One big, terrific hit.

I kissed her on the lips.
She looked at me and sighed.
I thought I had her won,
But now her actions lied!

For when I said "Good by!"
She slipped into my hand
Her card—

Home of Breakfast Foods.

Professor Zephaniah Hopper, hale and vigorous at eight-eight, said at the Philadedphia high school, where he has taught fifty years:

"My advice to the young is that they sow no wild oats. Wild oats in youth mean an old age sad and decrepit. And yet the way some people talk you'd think that wild oats were as essential a part of youth as domesticated oats are an essential part of Scotland.

"A friend of mine in Scotland said to a boy:

"'What do you have for breakfast hereabouts?'

"'Porridge,' was the answer.

"'And for dinner?'

"'Porridge.'

"'And for supper?'

"'Porridge.'

"'Goodness,' said my friend, 'porridge every day for every meal! Do you never have anything else?'

"'What else would you have?' said the boy."—Detroit Free Press.

A False Alarm.

Over the telephone a worried voice addressed the proprietor of a small hardware store in a west Kentucky town.

"Say," the speaker began, "I come in your place today and bought one of them dollar alarm clocks, and you set her for me to go off at 5 o'clock in the mornin'. D'ye remember?"

"Yes," said the hardware man. "I remember."

"Well," went on the other, "I've jest found out that I don't have to git up 5 o'clock in the mornin'."

"Glad to hear it," said the hardware man. "But what do you want me to do about it?"

"I want you," said the customer, "to tell me how to unalarm this clock."—Saturday Evening Post.

Her Fighting Clothes.

A certain matron alluded to a certain gown of hers as her "quarrel dress."

"I always wear it," she explains, "when I have had a quarrel with my husband."

The Dog's Kennel.

Damp is the greatest evil to which the dog confined outside the house in a kennel is liable. It will kill the strongest dog and must be carefully guarded against. If a dog is to keep in health, too, it is necessary that it should be able to enjoy plenty of sunlight, and the kennel should always be placed facing south, except in the hottest parts of the day in summer, when it should be moved into the shade.

"About as much 'value,'" said the editor, "as a legal opinion written by a poet."

SUFFRAGETTES STARTLED WHEN SPECTATOR USED GUN

Welcome to Pedestrians En Route to Albany Was Rather Boisterous.

STOCKPORT CENTRE, N.Y., Dec. 27.—The suffragette army, which is marching to Albany to carry a secret message to Governor-Elect Sulzer, reached here yesterday afternoon at one o'clock after a quick, easy march of five miles from Hudson.

The greetings received from the town folk of Stockport Centre were of rather an explosive and startling character. One enthusiastic citizen without the least warning exploded his shotgun within very close range of the marching pilgrims, causing every member of the band to jump in terror. "Surgeon" Dock narrowly escaped serious injury from a sky rocket which was set off to greet the arriving suffragettes. It took some time for the pilgrims to realize that the pyrotechnical display was meant as a friendly and hearty welcome.

Some of the marchers were in such fine physical trim that they spent the rest of the afternoon in coasting down nearby hills on sleds borrowed from the Stockport small boys.

Questioned yesterday on a march from New York to Washington to carry a message to President-elect Wilson, "Gen." Jones admitted that she was giving such a trip very serious consideration.

The pilgrims rested last night in a comfortable farm house here, and started early in the morning for Valatie, ten miles away.

BEAUTY AND THE BILLBOARD

A New England professor of economics composed recently some verses on sign boards that convulsed the city and helped to decide the municipality against advertising [illegible]. Except in a few isolated instances, however, business and public opinion in America have not clashed grievously over this subject. In France, consular reports say, a heavy tax is about to be levied on all sign boards which can be seen from any path, road or railway. All such advertisements set up, except those on house walls or other inclosures, are taxed at the rate of from one to ten dollars a square yard. If two, three or four advertisements are displayed together the tax will be doubled and tripled and quadrupled. The idea of billboard opponents is that while a law cannot prohibit the owner of land from erecting sign boards on his property, the community has the right to impose a tax high enough to limit the number of such advertisements.—System Magazine.

COL. BARTLETT PASSES AWAY

Was Prominent in Business Circles and Philanthropic Work

WINDSOR, Dec. 27.—Lt.-Col. Noble A. Bartlet, for several years commanding officer of the 21st Regiment, Essex Fusiliers, a member of a distinguished Windsor family, and a prominent figure in business circles and philanthropic work, died late yesterday afternoon at the family home, 97 Victoria avenue. He was born in Windsor in 1860, and spent his entire life in this city. At the time of his death he was the senior member of the law firm of Bartlet, Bartlet & Bartlet.

As a member of the Liberal party, Col. Bartlet took an active part in all political campaigns in recent years, and was also deeply interested in municipal affairs. Before the end of the second term as commanding officer of the Fusiliers, he retired with the rank of colonel, and was appointed brigadier of the western militia district, an office he held until the time of his death.

Mourned Dead "Sysonby."

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Frank Fissler, once stable boy to Sysonby, the great race horse, is dead.

He killed himself in his room yesterday morning. On the wall above his body when they found it was a picture of the racer. On a table nearby lay a bit of doggerel—the last thing Fissler had written—bemoaning Sysonby's death.

There were no letters or anything else explaining the suicide. He had cut his throat.

Planning Slav Empire?

PARIS, Dec. 27.—According to the Vienna correspondent of The Journal, a friend of Archduke Frank Ferdinand is authority for the disclosure of an ambitious plan which the archduke has conceived, and is now actively endeavoring to make effective.

If the plan is successful it is expected to have the effect of completely breaking up at one stroke the political forms and the system of alliances of the Europe of to-day.

NOW RESTS WITH JURY

Fate of Labor Officials Now Being Decided.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 27.—Whatever is to be the outcome of the three months' "dynamite conspiracy" trial, in which forty labor union officials are accused of complicity in the McNamara plots to destroy property, including the wrecking of The Los Angeles Times' building, where 21 persons were killed, now rests with the jury.

Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson, a few minutes after five o'clock last night, instructed the jury and ordered it to retire. The court then adjourned until 9.30 a.m. to-day, thus precluding the return of the verdicts before that time should they be found. All the verdicts, while separate as to each defendant, are to be returned at one time.

"How long will the jury be out?" was the question asked as the jurors filed out. A basis for a belief that verdicts would not be reached when court opens to-morrow, and that the jurors may require a much longer time was found in the court's instruction to "carefully weigh all the evidence in the case."

It has required almost twelve weeks to introduce the evidence.

The defendants who await the outcome include Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, of which John J. McNamara, the confessed dynamiter, was once secretary; various executive board members of that union; Herbert S. Hockin, accused as an accomplice of Ortie E. McManigal, another confessed dynamiter; Olav A. Tveitmoe, secretary of the California Building Trades Council; Eugene A. Clancy, San Francisco, and J. S. Munsey, Salt Lake City, Utah. The three last-named are charged with promoting the Los Angeles explosion.

ALLIES WILL NOT ACCEPT TURK'S COUNTER PROPOSALS

Conference is Adjourned Till Monday Afternoon With No Progress Made.

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Dec. 28.—Peace envoys met again this morning when Turkey's plenipotentiaries presented counter proposals of the Ottoman Government in reply to those offered by the allies. Balkan representatives found these entirely unacceptable. No progress was made after a discussion of one hour and a half, and the Turkish envoys said they must again communicate with Constantinople. At 12.30 o'clock the conference adjourned till Monday afternoon at four o'clock.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Turkey's reply to the demands made several days ago by the Balkan allies as a basis for peace in southeastern Europe will be delivered to-day to the peace conference in St. James' Palace. Interest, however, again has shifted from this phase of the situation and is centred to-day in the questions of what are the intentions of Austria with respect to the Balkans.

The peace delegates are prepared to consider the reply of the Ottoman Government and its counter-proposals, startling though the latter may be, as simply points for future negotiations. It is well known that Turkey has not the least hope of obtaining what she will demand, and also that she has no intention of resuming a war which may result in further disaster to her.

This aspect of the situation seems to receive confirmation from the fact that several attempts already have been made unofficially by members of the Turkish delegation to get the Montenegrin, Servian and Greek delegates to recede from the demand that Adrianople be surrendered, promising in return that Turkey will not object to their respective enlargement territorially. These advances and reports, emanating from Constantinople, that Bulgaria is negotiating terms direct with Turkey them, are considered to have as their basic purpose an attempt to divide the territory with the allies.

The representatives of the Balkan states, however, have resisted all the temptations placed in their way, and to-day present as united a front as they did the first day of the negotiations, and are [illegible] determined as ever to have their own way in concluding peace.

Instead of diminishing, excitement is growing among the Servian and Montenegrin delegations over what are considered Austria's plans in the Balkans. That the dual monarchy seems determined to carry out these plans is considered to be proven by the fact that she has not as yet begun to demobilize the big army she recently called to the colors. It is now considered certain that at the resumption of the ambassadorial conference Jan. 2, Austria will urge the representatives of Europe to make the territory of autonomous Albania as large as possible, including in it Prisrend, Djacova and even Scutari.

Air Line From Vancouver to Seattle.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 28.—An airship service between Vancouver and Victoria, and between Vancouver and Seattle, is the suggestion of R. F. E. Wickham of London, Eng., one of the youngest of England's birdmen, who is now in this city combining business and pleasure. He sees no insuperable obstacle to the inauguration of a regular service between these places, and thinks the novelty of such a trip would ensure a steady patronage, while aviation has advanced to a stage where he considers it not unduly dangerous.

THREE MILES IN THE DARK

Suffragettes Find the Going Harder Now

NIVERVILLE, N.Y., Dec. 28.—After a 14-mile walk from Stockport in a driving snowstorm, Gen. Rosalie Jones and her marching suffragettes, who are bearing a message to Governor-Elect Sulzer at Albany, decided to push on in the dark last evening for another three miles from Pine Tree Inn to Niverville. There it was decided to return to the inn for the night and the commissary car took them back. This morning they were driven to Niverville, and from there took up their walk again, hoping to cover the remaining twelve miles into Albany by early afternoon. The weather was very trying to the five marching pilgrims yesterday, changing in the morning from rain to a heavy snow. The roads for many miles were a foot deep with slush and snow.

Fifty women enthusiasts and a brass band will meet the tired army to-day at East Greenwood and escort them with much pomp and ceremony the remaining three miles into Albany.

The Seneca set out immediately from New London and the Acushnet was expected to go out from Woods Hole.

MONTEVIDEO, Dec. 28.—The Kosmos line steamer Amasis and the Prince line steamer Austrian Prince came into collision in the harbor here yesterday. The Aamsis was so badly damaged that she sank. She was bound from South American ports for Hamburg. The Austrian Prince had just arrived from New York.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY FLOODS IN ENGLAND'S STORM

Passengers on Steamer Had Trying Experience—Water Knee Deep in Cabins

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Dec. 28.—The great storm of the past two days has abated. Floods resulting therefrom have done tremendous damage. At Portsmouth the storm swept away the famous old Sallyport landing stage used by warships in Nelson's days. Three hundred passengers of the steamship Narrung, which arrived in the Thames to-day, had a terrible experience. Cabins were partly flooded and passengers sat many hours knee-deep in water. The vessel was crippled for a time and sent out wireless appeals for aid, but later she was got under control and arrived in the Thames with everything on deck carried away and with a heavy sick list.

REILLY DESERTED BY HIS FRIENDS DIED OF EXPOSURE

as Left Alone While Helplessly Intoxicated—Jury's Verdict.

BEAVERTON, Ont., Dec. 28.—That rnest Reily came to his death from lcoholism and exposure Christmas orning was the verdict found here 6.30 last night by Coroner McLean's ury, who based their finding upon e medical evidence given at the afrnoon sitting. A rider was added, wever, severely censuring those ho were with Reilly on Christmas ve for leaving him alone while helply intoxicated without notifying s family.

The inquest was opened at nine clock yesterday morning, and the hole day was occupied in hearing e evidence of various witnesses. il Cameron, section foreman, told seeing a number of men near the ter tank after the arrival of the in upon which Reilly and a num- of others returned from their trip [illegible] ly next morning.

He and Reilly been friends. He was so drunk he did not think that anyone ld have been placed in his charge. Home For Birthday.

STAUNTON, Va., Dec. 28.—Virginia welcomed home last night Governor Woodrow Wilson, President-elect of the U. S.

From the moment Mr. Wilson crossed the state line at Alexandria in the afternoon until nine o'clock last night when he reached the little parsonage here, where he was born just 56 years ago to-day, the reception given him was one of great enthusiasm, noisy demonstration and spectacular display.

TO RESERVE ONE MILE

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—The Canada Gazette to-day will publish an order-in-council reserving to the crown a strip of one mile on each side of the Hudson Bay Railway from the Pas to Nelson. This will provide the Government with townsites and sites for stations, yards, terminals, etc., and shut off the usual race among speculators for inside tips respecting townsites and divisional points.

The credit for this step is largely due, it is understood, to the Minister of Railways.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IMPROVED WHERE LOCAL OPTION IS IN FORCE

As it is expected that local option will carry in Peterborough on Jan. 6th, an effort has been made to find how it is likely to effect business. In many towns in Ontario the bar rooms have been closed for some years. Investigation shows that these places are now reaping a rich harvest in the shape of increased business prosperity. The universal testimony from practically all of them is that business never was so good, building operations never so brisk and the people generally never so contented and happy.

In Galt, a manufacturing town more like Peterborough, perhaps, than any other town in Ontario, the bar rooms were closed on May 1st, 1910. Since that time the town has made more rapid increase in population, and in industrial activity than ever in the same length of time in its previous history. This is the testimony of one who has lived there for 40 years and he adds that during the past year it has been impossible to find houses for people to live in, notwithstanding the fact that more houses were built than in any previous year. The assessment increased a million and a half in the year. The mayor of Galt, T. E. McLellan, writes regarding local option: "Galt is thriving. Greatest increase in population this year of any one year. Manufacturers busy, some working overtime."

Galt is a single illustration of what is true of all the local option towns. Owen Sound, as we were told by Mr. Flemming recently in the Opera House, in spite of the withdrawal of the C.P.R. from the town, is making astonishing progress. Orillia has made greater progress and her people have been more prosperous and contented during the five years they have had no bar rooms than during the whole of her previous history.

Police Magistrate Clark of Orillia, will tell us about conditions in Orillia to-morrow afternoon at half past three in the Opera House. Mayor H. A. Currie, of Collingwood, writes: "We have one of the most prosperous towns in Ontario." Mayor Buttery, of Strathroy, reports: "Our town is thriivng, has had no failures in two years." Mayor Pearson, of Newmarket, states: "Newmarket is thriving under local option. Important additions have been made to factories, churches, schools. The building trade best in history of town."

Examples might be multiplied, but let it suffice to say that practically without an exception the dry towns and villages are making more than average progress. Do you know any reason why this should not be the case in Peterborough? It is only reasonable to suppose that where all the earnings of the people go to build up legitimate business enterprises, more should be accomplished than when thousands of dollars are passed over the bars for that which adds nothing to the wealth or well being of the citizens, but tends to unfit them for efficient and progressive service?

To-morrow, Sunday afternoon, at half past three, a number of commercial travellers will tell the people of Peterborough how they find conditions in the towns they visit and in the evening some business men from West Toronto will describe how Local Option has benefitted their business in West Toronto. The fact is local option has helped business in every town where it is in force. Adv. 55.

SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH FAVORS BOARD OF LAYMEN

PRESIDENT-ELECT WILSON.
He is celebrating his 56th birthday at his home to-day.

Would Keep Compensation Out of the Courts—Expert Evidence Submitted.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—A special sitting of the Workmen's Compensation Commission was held yesterday in order to hear the expert testimony of P. T. Sherman of New York. Sir William Meredith, the commissioner, incidentally dealt with several other speakers.

During the day both political leaders sat for some time in the commissioner's court at the Parliament Buildings. In the morning Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., dropped in, while in the afternoon Sir James Whitney occupied a seat among the large audience. Both appeared much interested in the proceedings, which were well attended throughout the whole day.

He condemned the German system of compensation for workingmen, and said that to adopt it in this country would be to take a leap in the dark. It would be making the welfare of the people the playfield of impulsive experiment, and would entail a radical change in political principles and in social and industrial habits and customs.

"The whole problem before me is this," declared Sir William: "Can I propose a scheme, economically sound and workable, that will be equally just and acceptable to employers and employed? That is my whole consideration. Liability companies are a negligible quantity. Their concern is self, not public interest."

Mr. Sherman suggested a judge to administer the law.

"Any superiority in him because you call him a judge?" he queried abruptly. "A good business man can deal with questions of fact just as well."

Mr. Sherman argued that there was no use in creating additional machinery when the machinery of the courts was already in existence.

"You can trust a good, sound lay board as safely as twenty judges," was the candid verdict of the commissioner.

It was pointed out that the system of the courts enabled appeal.

"Why any appeal?" commented the adjudicator of many. "It's only another guess by another court.

THREE LIVES SAVED WHEN SLEIGH UPSET

Occupants Thrown Out When Horse Bolted Across Level Crossing.

PRESCOTT, Ont., Dec. 28—Only the overturning of the sleigh in which they were seated prevented Fred Steacy, of Algonquin, and two lady friends from meeting almost certain death Thursday night when the horse attached to it took fright at the approach of a Grand Trunk train and bolted towards a level crossing.

Steacy tried to pull the horse up, but it ran into the ditch, the sleigh capsizing and throwing its occupants out. The horse kept on and the locomotive hit the cutter, smashing it to bits. The horse, which was not hurt, has not yet been recovered.

UNION OFFICIALS DECLARED GUILTY

Only Two of the Forty Defendants Found Not Guilty

Canadian Press Despatch.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 28—Thirty eight Union Labor officials to-day were found "guilty" of complicity in the McNamara dynamite plots, including the wrecking of Los Angeles Times Building. Frank Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers was among those convicted.

He, with others was accused of using the union funds to destroy the property of contractors who refused to recognize the union. The following were found guilty, Frank M. Ryan, John T. Butler, Herbert S. Hockin, Olaf A. Tveitmoe, Eugenen A. Clancy, Phillip Colley, Michael J. Young, Frank J. Higgins, K. E. Munsey, Grant C. Walsh, Patrick F. Farrell, John H. Barry, Paul J. Morrin, Henry W. Legleiner, Chas. N. Bull, Wm. E. Reddin, Michael J. Cunnane, Richard H. Houlihan, Jas. Cooney, James A. Coughlin, Wm. Shupe, Edward Smythe, James E. Ray, Murray T. Pennell, Wm. C. Bernhardt, Wilford Bert Brown, Wm. J. McCain, Frank K. Painter, Peter J. Smith, George Anderson, Michael J. Hannon, Edward E. Phillips, Charles Wachtmeister, Frank J. Murphy, Fred. J. Mooney, Ernest G. Milwaukee and Daniel Buckley, Dav- W. Basey, Fred. Sherman and Hiram M. Kline. Herman G. Seiffert, enport, Iowa, were found not guilty The verdicts were brought in at ten o'clock.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 28.—Fifteen hours' deliberation by the jury in the "dynamite conspiracy" cases up to last night had failed to result in the return of any verdict.

Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson, after convening court to receive any reports from the jurors, ordered an adjournment until 9.30 a.m. to-day, with the understanding that the verdicts, should they be found, would not be returned until that time.

While Government officials expressed confidence that the jury would report to-day, attorneys for the defence stated it may require a longer time. There are twenty-six offences charged against each of the defendants and the jury, if it chooses, may ballot on each charge as to each defendant, making a total of 1,040 charges thus to be disposed of.

Twice yesterday the forty labor union officials, headed by Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers' Union, who are charged with complicity in the McNamara dynamite plots to destroy the property of "open shop" contractors, were assembled in the court room in expectation that their fate at the hands of the jury would be made known.

Crowds of women and other spectators who had been permitted in court or in the lobbies for the last three months were prevented by guards from even approaching the court room, so that only those who had business in connection with the trial, or were relatives of the defendants, were present. These included the wives and children of about 30 of the men on trial.

RELIGIOUS DIFFERENCES ENOUGH SAYS PREMIER

One Hundred Delegates Wait on Ontario Government to Ask Removal of Bilingual Regulations and Are Told That Matter Will be Considered.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—A delegation numbering about a hundred, waited on the Provincial Government yesterday to ask for the abolition of the bilingual school regulations. Sir James Whitney, at the conclusion of an hour's discussion made the following reply to the delegates:

"We will take into careful consideration all you have said. In this world we have got to give and take. Plain speaking is always best, and we have spoken plainly this morning. The Government wants to do what is right, and will do so as far as it understands the right. I wish you all a happy New Year."

Samuel Genest of Ottawa, who represented the French-Canadian element, Dr. Freeland of the Irish element, also of Ottawa, and the Premier, were the principal participants in the discussion. The point of the argument put up by Dr. Freeland and Mr. Genest was that clause 17 of the regulations promulgated by the Government, were ultra vires, because they conflicted with instructions which had not been cancelled, and that this clause was a violation of the B.N.A. Act, a violation of the principles of natural law and opposed to the policy which obtains everywhere in the British Empire. Clause 17 is the one which places a curb on the teaching of the French language as a language of instruction and communication in the bilingual schools, where formerly French was the chief language.

Sir James stated to the delegation that their real request to the Government was for racial schools. "There is a dual system of schools in this province now, the result of religious feeling," he remarked. "I am positive that the people of this province will not stand for a triple system; yet that is what you ask for, since you are asking for racial schools."

Dr. Freeland argued that the function of the Government was to educate, not to Anglicize. The regulations showed conclusively that the Government was bent upon Anglicizing the English-French schools. At this point the discussion waxed rather warm, Sir James taking objection to such a statement from the doctor.

Sir James scored some newspapers which, he said, were agitating the question of bilingualism, and in doing so fanning racial and religious strife. "I think I will just say a word or two. This Government is composed of mortals, and mortals sometimes make mistakes. But I will say now, and I have said it before, this Government, no matter how unjustly we are accused, will never depart one inch from the path of doing our duty and giving absolutely fair play to the French people in our midst. We will not be deterred despite the efforts of those who are trying to fan up something like racial and religious strife. I am not alluding to anybody present."

The Premier said that in 1911 an act was passed by the Legislature to ensure that English should be the language of instruction. The regulation was that up to the end of form one, instruction should be conducted in French when the pupil could not understand English. "It was the initial step, and it didn't look as if we were trying to deprive the children of their language," he continued. "How absurd it is to say that we are doing away with the French language when every French child attending our schools gets instruction in the French tongue. How can anybody who can read say that we are taking steps to do away with the French language?"

"I represent the Irish representatives," Dr. Freeland announced, in the course of his address. "We Irish were robbed of our language in Ireland, and we are in sympathy for that reason with the French-Canadians. We also object to the new regulations of the Department of Education because they involve more expense to us. We claim that instruction in English in English-French schools should be for one hour a day, and instruction in French should be for the rest if the day. This would reverse the present regulations."

Receipts Fall Off In 1912.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Fewer cattle by 261,298 have been received at the Chicago stock yards this year than in 1911, according to figures announced last night. Despite this fact, more money was paid for beef during 1912 than in 1911 by $3,282,735. The total paid out this year was $183,488,900.

Three reasons are given for the increased price of beef. The western states did not raise as many cattle as usual owing to drought, farmers turning the pastures into wheat fields and the demand for beef increased.

KNOW OF THE DOCTRINE.

—Dec. 29.—John 7:17.—

"If any man willeth to do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of Myself."—John 7:17.

TO-DAY the very word doctrine seems to be offensive to the majority of Christians. Each denomination realizes that its doctrines are undefendable. Hence by mutual consent Christians seem disposed to ignore doctrines, believing that, if after nineteen centuries they are thus confused, the matter never will be clear to anybody.

All this is a mistake; the doctrines of Christ, as presented by the great Teacher and His Apostles were a great Message, of which none of them were ashamed. The difficulty is that we gradually fell away from those doctrines into the spirit of bondage to human traditions and creeds. We need the doctrines of Christ and the Apostles to break down our creed fences, which have separated God's people into various denominational folds contrary to the Divine arrangement; for God has but one fold for all His "sheep" of this Age.

If as God's people we put away sectarianism and the creed spectacles of our forefathers, and go with sincere hearts to the Lord and His Word, we shall there find the "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father over all, and one Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," and one "Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven." (Eph 4:5, 6; Heb. 12:23.

The Doctrines of Christ.

What God's people need is to put away other gospels and take hold afresh on the Gospel of Christ. These other gospels are other messages of hope aside from the one which the Bible presents. Theosophy is one of these. Evolution is another. New Theology is another. These all hold out a different gospel from that which Jesus and the Apostles presented—the one given to us for our sanctification.

"Doctrines of Christ will break down our creed fences."

The doctrines of Christ are those presented in the Bible by Jesus and the Apostles. These doctrines relate to the Church and to the world, and God's blessing for each; to sin and its forgiveness; the terms of that forgiveness, the basis of that forgiveness—the death of Jesus—and the hope of that forgiveness, release from Divine condemnation, fellowship with God, and everlasting life through resurrection of the dead.

But some one will inquire, Why are the doctrines of Christ so misunderstood that six hundred denominations have resulted from the differences of theory respecting them. The explanation is that, shortly after the death of the Apostles, the Adversary sowed the seeds of false doctrines, using human lips and pens in his service, through pride and ambition. The darkness became so great that we speak of the period as the Dark Ages.

The various denominations of Christendom are evidences of honesty, perseverance and love of the truth, because our forefathers who made these creeds were each trying to get back into the true Light. They all made the mistake, however, of holding too much to the creeds and theories of the past. Let us not make the same mistake; let us cut loose from every authority outside the Word of God. We cannot acknowledge as inspired or authoritative the teachings of the "Fathers" of the early times, however conscientious they may have been, because we cannot recognize that there were any such authorized successors to the Apostles.

"Wise virgins will be able to understand the deep things of God."

God, who foretold through the Prophets this darkness, and who has blessed and guided His saintly children throughout it, has promised that with the end of this Age will come a great enlightenment upon His people, scattering all the darkness. We are in the dawning of this New Age, and therefore may see clearly the Divine character and Plan for human salvation.

Willeth to Do His Will.

To-day's study is a message from the Master's own lips. He gives us the key to a clear knowledge of His doctrines, namely that the student must be fully consecrated to God and fully desirous of knowing His will and His Plan. In order to see the Truth, from the standpoint of Divine Revelation, we must draw near to God in the spirit of our minds, consecrated in our hearts. We must will to do His will.

God's will represents actual perfection of thought, word and deed toward God and toward all mankind. This is the Divine Standard, but we are no more able to fulfil its demands than were the Jews. The best that we can do is to will to do right, and to the best of our ability carry out that covenant with the Lord to do His will.

But for those who have come into harmony with God through Christ—who have Jesus for their Advocate—a provision has been made whereby all desiring to do the Divine will, and manifesting endeavor so to do, are counted as righteous—as though they did the Divine will perfectly. This class, in the Scriptures known as the "saints," are the prospective members of the Body of Christ.

Buying Fish In Copenhagen.

Copenhagen has a model fish market, built by the municipality. With the exception of the larger varieties, like cod and halibut, all the fish are kept alive in tesselated tanks filled with running water. There is no other town where all the fish, whether cheap or dear, are so beautifully fresh. In the harbor there are a large number of wooden boats pierced with holes and filled with fish. These boats just float on the surface of the water, and the living fish are taken out of them when wanted. But, as every one can not go to the water's edge to buy fish, there are water tanks on wheels, and the live fish are brought to the doors of the people's houses.

THEY WERE VERY RICH

What Else They Were Was Quaintly Told by Mary Lyon.

When in 1837 Mary Lyon founded Holyoke college she collected the money required for its first building in sums that ranged from 6 cents to $1,000. She got 1,800 persons to subscribe. Her feat gave the new enterprise an unusually wide foundation in the public interest, but she did not accomplish it without much hard work or without gaining wide experience of human nature.

One evening Miss Lyon arrived in the village of Ashfield, Mass., at a home where she was always welcomed, gladly. She was full of hope and enthusiasm. Would the squire take her at once to W., where, she had learned, there was a family of wealth that might give liberally toward the seminary building?

"Supper and a good night's rest, Miss Lyon," was the reply, "and then my horses shall take you there."

The next morning as they were starting the squire's wife laid a gentle hand on Miss Lyon's shoulder, with the warning: "Do not expect too much, my dear Miss Lyon. We know the people. I fear you will not be successful."

With a beaming face Miss Lyon replied: "Oh, I am told they are very rich. I am sure they will help liberally."

When she entered the house on her return Miss Lyon went quickly to her friend, and, grasping her arm, while conflicting emotions played over her face, she said:

"Yes, it is all true, just as I was told. They live in a costly house, it is full of costly things, they wear costly clothes"—then, drawing nearer and almost closing her eyes, she whispered with unforgetable emphasis: "[illegible] they're little bits of folks!"—[illegible] Companion.

FREEZING TO DEATH.

Sensations That Come With Exposure to Extreme Cold.

In the course of a series of experiments with extreme cold carried on at Berlin, Raoul Pictet, an investigator, inserted his bare arm beyond the elbow in a chamber refrigerated to a temperature of 157 degrees below zero F. and kept it there for several minutes. He suffered no permanent damage, but experienced a number of peculiar and painful sensations. The chief of these and the most trying was a feeling of pain in the bones of the hand and arm.

The pain increased steadily. It was located chiefly in the interior parts of the arm and was far less severe in the portions near or at the surface. The skin was purple when the member was withdrawn. In about ten minutes a violent reaction set in with violent burning sensation of the skin wherever it had been exposed.

Investigations carried on with dogs indicated that the process of freezing to death is not necessarily an unpleasant one. Placed in a temperature of −125 to −150 the animals displayed quickened breathing and heart beats, with a decided rise above normal in the blood temperature. These signs pointed to a sudden and violent automatic effort of the heart to preserve the bodily temperature. In spite of energetic heart action the temperature of the blood fell gradually to 71 degrees. At this point the heart action ceased very suddenly.

The sensations of bodily warmth and languor mentioned in descriptions of death by violent cold can easily be understood in view of the above experiments.—New York Sun.

A Discovery of Vast Importance

It Is Now Admitted That Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, and Colds Can Only Be Quickly Cured By Mixing a New Medicine With the Air You Breathe.

Scientists acknowledge that medicated air treatment is the only treatment that will cure these diseases, and that stomach medicines are worse than useless.

Catarrhozone air treatment has been found to be the most effective way to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. Its action is so prompt that in less than an hour an ordinary cold is cured, and after a more thorough use of Catarrhozone, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all diseases of the throat and lungs are completely cured.

Catarrhozone is a very simple and powerful method of treatment. You simply breathe it through the inhaler and it immediately passes over every air cell of the throat, lungs, and bronchial tubes, curing and healing as it goes.

Catarrhozone treatment affords little drops of healing for sore places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

ESSENCE OF MUMMY.

Queer Medicine That Was Used Not So Long Ago In Persia.

In former times strange products were used as medicines. Among them was essence of mummy, which held a place in the pharmacopoeia even during the last century.

Two sorts of mummies were used for the production of the extract—the true and the artificial. True mummies were disinterred from the valley of the Nile and forwarded to Europe and Asia by the Arabs. Their therapeutic virtues were attributed to substances used by their embalmers. The saving or curative principles of those substances were supposed to have been preserved and held intact by the swathing bands used with secret and peculiar art to wrap the dead. Essence of mummy was recommended in cases of convulsions, as a cure for boils, in epilepsy, colds, etc.

In Persia embalming was once the rule. The shahs offered mummies, or portions of mummies, as gifts to the monarchs whose friendship they respected, and chroniclers record the fact as worthy of historical note that Louis XIV. and Catherine of Russia received, among numerous gifts of various sorts, golden chests containing mummified human members. In 1809, when Princess Charlotte of England was sick, her doctors administered "esence of mummy."

A manuscript recently found, the production of the Persian poet Nizam, gives the formula for producing the synthetic mummy. According to that prescription, the man selected was of tender flesh and fine, thin skin—a man whose chief nourishment had been fruit. At the age of thirty years his throat was cut and his body, while still warm with life, was placed in a stone urn filled, save for the space required for it, with honey and with balsamic substances. The full urn was sealed and set away to ripen. At the close of a period varying from fifty to a hundred years the body, completely mummified, was taken out and the extraction of the "essence" was made.

Raising Water With Air.

As all schoolboys know, a suction pump can theoretically elevate water only about thirty-three and one-third feet, a column of water of that height balancing the atmospheric pressure. A means has, however, been found of causing a suction pump to raise water to a height of even sixty feet. The invention was made by a workman in the French marine. M. Eyssérie, the chief engineer of the marine, remarked that one particular pump showed extraordinary qualities in drawing water from ships' holds. Inquiry developed the fact that a workman had thought of the plan of introducing air into the water at the point where the suction was applied, thus producing an emulsion of air and water, which, because of its diminished density, was capable of being elevated to considerably greater heights than pure water.

"Doing the Trick."

Kean played Brutus to his son's Titus in "Brutus, or the Fall of Tarquin." As may be imagined, the benefit was a bumper. There was over £300 in the house. Kean, invigorated and strengthened by his holiday, played magnificently. Charles supported him extremely well, and Kean's delivery on his son's neck of the lines, "Pity thy wretched father," stirred the audience to their very depths. There was not a dry eye in the house, the applause was frantic and Kean whispered to his son, "We are doing the trick, Charles!"—Armstrong's "Century of Actors."

A Blunt Monarch.

James I., being requested by his old nurse to make her son "a gentleman," answered emphatically: "I'll mak' him baronet, gin ye like, luckie, but the de'il himsel' couldna' mak' him a gentleman."

James I. was the first to create baronets (1611). He it was, also, who said of the wives of his law lords, "I can make the carls lords, but I canna' make the carlines ladies."

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25, a low figure.

MISSING A CARIBOO

An Attack of "Buck Ague" Made Fool of the Hunter.

What the "buck ague" is like is described in "The Journal of a Sporting Nomad," by J. T. Studley. The author's first attempt against the caribou resulted in humiliation. He tells that Johnny, his Indian guide, suddenly dropped like a stone into the wet grass and muttered "Stag," and there, sure enough, strolling along the front was a fine caribou. "I sat down, resting my elbow on my knee, waiting until he should put in an appearance my side of the rock. I had the rifle to my shoulder, and at last the grand beast walked into view, not more than 100 yards away. He stopped, looking about him, and I drew a bead on his shoulder. Useless! The rifle wabbled all over the place, and for the life of me I could not keep it still nor hold my breath. My heart was in my mouth, and all the time the rifle trembled and shook. The caribou moved on a few paces, and I determined that if I meant to shoot at all I must obtain better control of my nerves. I still covered him with the sights, or thought I was doing so, as I pulled the trigger on the beast that was standing broad side on with his head turned from me.

"I was using a fine rifle, and it was the work of an instant to pump another cartridge into the chamber and fire again. Still no move on the part of my target. He faced the other way nonchalantly, listening with interest to the echo of the rifle in the distant canyons. I was getting desperate now and could hear the Micmac muttering all sorts of imprecations behind my back, which only made things worse. I fired five more shots at that caribou as he stood as though carved in wood persevering until he turned off calmly into a belt of timber.

"This story is an absolute fact. I would not have credited it had I not been the one to make such a fool of myself. My feelings can be more readily imagined than described. I could have cried with vexation and shame. Johnny took the rifle, looked it over, patted it as though he would demand of it whether the fault lay with it or the user, and I tried to make excuses to myself for myself."

Harpooning a Whale.

The method of catching whales in southern seas is vividly described by our consul-general at Buenos Ayres. He says: "The harpoon used in whaling is a deadly weapon of marvelous intricacy. It is shot from a cannon, which can be focused with great rapidity at any angle from its pedestal on the specially constructed ship. On penetrating the body of the whale the point of the harpoon explodes, and its four hooks spread out into the flesh, securely holding the shaft of the harpoon, which ends in a ring carrying a strong cable. Held by this cable, the struggling whale tows the boat after it at a terrific speed until forced by its wounds to succumb."

Five Veterans of 1812 Alive.

The centennial of the battle of Borodino has been celebrated with much ceremony by Russia, most of the royal family taking part, including the Czar and Czarina. It seems almost incredible that there can be any survivors of a battle fought 100 years ago; but in the Soldiers' Home at Moscow there are five survivors of the Napoleonic invasion, of whom one, who is now 122 years old, took part as a subaltern in this very battle. The Czar and his staff paid a call upon these veterans at the close of the ceremony.

G. H. BALFOUR, General Manager.

During the year the head office of the bank was transferred from Quebec to Winnipeg.

During the past year forty-three branches and agencies of the bank have been opened in the following provinces—Ontario, 13; Alberta, 9; British Columbia, 4; Manitoba, 5; Saskatchewan, 12.

Two branches in Ontario, which proved unproductive, have been closed. The total number of branches is now 285.

The customary inspections of the head office and of all branches and agencies of the bank have been made.

Winnipeg, 17th December, 1912.

JOHN GALT, President.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The president, Mr. John Galt, addressed the meeting as follows:

I beg to move the adoption of the report, seconded by Mr. William Price, of Quebec, and Mr. R. T. Riley, of Winnipeg, our vice-presidents.

The financial position and the net profits of the past year will, I trust, meet with your approval. The present year marks an epoch in the bank's history, and it is, therefore, fitting that I should make a few remarks on the present position of the bank—its policy and the scope of its operations.

On July 1st the head office was removed from the city of Quebec to the city of Winnipeg. Such an important event calls for a review of the progress of the bank in past years and an explanation of the reasons which, in the opinion of your directors, necessitated this change.

The great growth of our institution is coincident with, and largely due, to the development of the west. The following figures will show how rapid this growth has been:

On the 31st of May, 1904, only eight and one-half years ago, when the present general manager took charge, our capital was $2,500,000; reserve fund, $1,000,000; and total assets, $20,602,110. Today these figures are: Capital, $5,000,000; reserve fund, $3,300,000; and total assets over $69,000,000; or double the capital, over three times the reserve fund, and well over three times the total assets. The policy of the Union Bank has certainly been consistent. It was the first bank to establish a chain of branches in the west, and as railways and population spread westward we followed, and today, west of and including Fort William, we have no less than 187 branches. This policy was criticised in earlier days, but it has since been adopted by all the large banks, and the results have amply justified it.

We have opened this year a number of new branches, but we can assure you that this has not been done without careful consideration and a close examination of local conditions. One not conversant with western life would find it difficult to realize the change made each year in a few months by the incoming thousands of new settlers. Vast areas of vacant land are brought under cultivation, new lines of railway are built, divisional towns established, and villages with stores and hotels spring up with magical rapidity. To these communities a bank is essential, and one of the chief merits of our Canadian banking system is that it lends itself to the prompt establishment and equipment of branches whenever they are required.

Mixed Farming.—Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of mixed farming. It insures for the farmer a steady income all year round. Should his wheat crop be unfit for sale, it can be fed, with other coarse grains and roots, to his live stock. The world's demand for cattle is increasing, and we should be able, not only to supply our own needs, but also to export on a large scale. We must look to our agricultural products to pay the interest on our obligations, and finally to liquidate them.

The day will surely come when these vast prairies will yield their wealth in fullest measure, but it will not be until we have changed our present methods, and until farmers realize that mixed farming will pay best in the long run. The wonderful improvements in farm machinery, especially the substitution of motor power for horse power, has resulted in the rapid placing of immense areas of vacant land under cultivation. This has tempted many to stake their all on the result of one year's crop in wheat.

Speculation in Land.—A good deal has been said about speculation in land. The increase in land values has added enormously to the assets of western business, and has to some extent formed a basis for extended credit, but this is not felt to be a drawback when the value is real and convertible. We consider that a business standing which is strengthened and enhanced by property holdings is entitled to a reasonable enlargement of credit for legitimate business operations. The danger lies in speculation, and this bank should, in the future, as in the past, set its face steadfastly against this evil.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

The general manager, Mr. G. H. Balfour, addressed the meeting as follows:—

Gentlemen,—It affords me much pleasure to welcome so many shareholders as are present at this, the first annual meeting to be held in the new home of the bank. The large number is an evidence of the interest manifested in the welfare of the institution by its western shareholders.

The reasons for making the change in the head office have been fully explained by the President.

The wisdom of the course adopted has been always fully concurred in by me personally, and, indeed, its necessity had become very apparent during the past few years owing to the rapidly increasing volume of business transacted by the bank in these western provinces.

The President has given you some figures bearing on the general expansion of the bank's position during the past eight years.

It may, however, prove interesting to you to learn in this connection that, whilst the bank had eighty-four branches in 1904, on the 30th of November, 1912, it had two hundred and eighty-five branches, and the number of officials employed had increased from 420 to 1,387 in the same period.

These figures must bear convincing testimony to the steady progress and expansion made in the past eight years.

Of these 201 new branches, 132 have been opened west of the Great Lakes.

Comparing the figures in the balance-sheet, now under review, with those of November 30th, 1911, it will be noted that the deposits have increased by $10,400,000, namely, from $45,232,460.80 to $55,643,353.98. These figures are considered very satisfactory and encouraging.

The subscribed capital stock has been fully paid up during the year, and now stands at $5,000,000.

The rest account has been increased by $243,000, bringing it up to $3,300,000, or 66 per cent. of the paid-up capital of the bank.

The total assets are $11,000,000 greater than in 1911. This is largely accounted for by the increase in the deposits above referred to.

Bearing in mind the exceptionally heavy expenses incurred during the year incident to the transfer of the head office from Quebec to Winnipeg, and to the opening of so many new branches, we are well satisfied with the result of the year's operations, namely, a net profit of slightly over 11½ per cent. on the average capital paid up.

I may say that the full cost of opening a branch is written off at the end of the first half-year of its operations. This is a very heavy item in the aggregate when a number of branches are opened in any one year.

In the matter of steel chests alone, the bank has up to date invested more than $350,000, all of which has been paid for out of its profits.

Coming to the assets, it will be seen that the holding of gold and government notes is $700,000 more than last year, being additional cash reserves held against increased liabilities in the nature of larger deposits.

Notes and cheques on other banks in Canada, whilst $1,000,000 in excess of 1911, merely represent the daily accumulated items for exchange with other banks.

The additional $700,000 due by agents in the United Kingdom pertains to money loaned in London by our branch there.

The bank has increased its holdings of government, municipal, railway, and other debentures and stocks during the year by $1,000,000, and its loans and bills discounted current by $3,000,000, bring these two items up to $3,782,063.70 and $45,015,074.74 respectively. This is in the nature of a general expansion in the business of the bank.

It was then moved by Mr. John Galt, seconded by Mr. William Price and Mr. R. T. Riley that the report of the directors now read, be adopted and distributed amongst the shareholders.

Mr. R. T. Riley spoke as follows:

"I have followed with as much interest as anyone present the very able address of the president—like everything else that he has undertaken it has been well done and you can accept with confidence every statement made and be assured he has the endorsation of all his colleagues on the board.

"I am glad we have with us today some of our friends from Quebec, Montreal and Toronto, who doubtless hold the proxies of many of our eastern stockholders. The bulk of our stock is held in the east, and I wish to emphasize the fact that when the wise men of the east referred to by Mr. Galt saw the star of prosperity arising in the west and followed it, they did not abandon everything for this new vision—far from it, nor have their successors—for the business of the Union Bank in the east is larger today than ever before and will in no way suffer by reason of the removal of the headquarters of the bank to a point 1,500 miles nearer the centre of its activities, but there will be a well balanced extension all over the Dominion of Canada, with the centre rather than the extreme east as headquarters.

The six months' experience your Winnipeg directors have had of headquarters work has been sufficient to give them some idea of their new and increased responsibilities—responsibilities not accepted without some hesitation—for a bank is something more than an organization for making money for its shareholders. It is a highly organized and intricate piece of machinery that is at the disposal of the public to facilitate the conduct of business—a public utility enjoying special privileges and it is just as much the duty of the directors of a bank to see to it that these privileges are not abused as it is to protect its shareholders who after all own but a small percentage of the enormous sums of money passing through their hands.

"Like the president, I take a very hopeful view of the future. Our shareholders will never regret the confidence shown by electing a majority of their directors in this city. The west has always been well advertised, never so well as at the present time. It was never quite so 'wild and woolly' as reputed, nor is it now as extravagant and speculative as described by some. It is true the westerner spends some of his money freely and foolishly, probably because he makes it easily—but there is underlying the western community an element of good Scotch conservatism introduced by the Hudson's Bay factors—the Lord Selkirk colonists and this good Scotch granite has been well built into the foundations of our commercial life here and we shall endeavor to carry out the advice of our president, the exact phraseology of which I cannot remember but which interpreted into the vernacular is 'Be sure you're right; then go ahead.'

'I have much pleasure in seconding the adoption of the report."

Mr. William Price, of Quebec, expressed the pleasure that it gave him as the eastern vice-president, in visiting Winnipeg, to meet with the western shareholders, and stated that the eastern board in handing over the control to the western directors, did so with the utmost confidence that the affairs of the Bank would be in good hands, be capably administered, and the future development of the business carefully fostered on safe lines.

The motion was then carried.

It was moved by Mr. W. R. Allan, seconded by Mr. Stephen Haas, that the meeting now proceed to the election of directors for the ensuing year, and that the ballot box, for the receipt of votes, be kept open until a quarter past one o'clock, or until five minutes have elapsed, without a vote being offered, during which time proceedings be suspended.—Carried.

It was moved by the Hon. W. H. Montague, P.C., and seconded by Mr. Jas. Fisher, K.C., that the thanks of the shareholders are hereby tendered to the honorary president, the president, and the directors of the bank for their valuable services during the year.

Then the Hon. W. H. Montague, P.C., delivered the following:

The president and gentlemen,

I have been asked by a number of the shareholders to propose a resolution. I am quite sure that the shareholders of the Union bank have been very much gratified to receive a statement of affairs presented at this meeting. This statement of affairs shows the bank to be in an exceptionally prosperous condition, and it demonstrates as well that a most progressive policy has been pursued during the past year. The more closely the statement is examined the better the reports appear to be.

As the president has stated, the universal prosperity of Canada, coupled with the marked advance which is being made in every branch of our industrial and commercial life combine to make Canada at the present time ideal soil for the growth of an institution such as the Union bank is. Nevertheless, sir, we recognize and trust that the splendid results which have been achieved during the past year could only have been achieved by an institution whose board of directors were skilled and wide awake business men.

I move, seconded by Mr. James Fisher, K.C., that a very hearty vote of thanks be presented by the shareholders to the honorary president, the president, and the board of directors of the Union Bank of Canada for the manner in which they have discharged their duties.

Mr. Jas. Fisher, in a few well-chosen words seconded the motion, which was then carried.

It was moved by Mr. M. Bull, seconded by E. E. A. DuVernet, K.C., that the thanks of the shareholders are hereby tendered to the general manager, assistant general manager, superintendents, inspectors, managers and other officers of the bank for their devotion and zeal in the service of the bank during the past year.—Carried.

Mr. G. H. Balfour, general manager, and Mr. H. B. Shaw, assistant general manager, replied briefly on behalf of the staff.

The scrutineers appointed at the meeting reported the following gentlemen elected as directors for the ensuing year: Hon. John Sharples, Mr. John Galt, Messrs. Wm. Price, R. T. Riley, Wm. Shaw, George H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Samuel Barker, E. E. A. DuVernet, K.C., Stephen Haas, Lieut.-Col. John Carson, F. W. Heubach.

At a subsequent meeting of the newly-elected board the Hon. John Sharples was elected honorary president; Mr. John Galt, president; Mr. William Price and Mr. R. T. Riley, vice-presidents.

F. W. [illegible] RISPO, Secretary.

A Chinese Ruse.

Over 2,000 years ago there was a war between China and Mongolia, and China was invaded by a Mongolian army under Mao-tun. The Chinese Emperor was besieged in the city of Ping, and when the situation seemed to be hopeless he ordered that a number of lay figures representing beautiful women be made and exposed on the city walls. He then caused a message to be sent to the wife of the Mongolian leader to the effect that these attractive maidens were intended as a present to her husband. The ruse was entirely successful. The siege was raised forthwith and Mao-tun was removed out of the temptation zone by his apprehensive spouse.

A Curious Custom.

In Scandinavia the wedding shirt is an important part of the husband's marriage outfit. It is usual for the groom, among other gifts, to bestow upon his bride a prayer book. In reciprocation she gives him a neatly embroidered shirt, and this he invariably wears on his wedding day. Afterward he puts it away and does not wear it again while alive, but he wears it in his grave. The Scandinavian widower must destroy, on the eve of his second marriage, the wedding shirt which his first wife gave him.

Mosquito Eggs.

The eggs of the mosquito are fastened together by a viscid secretion from the insect's body. From 250 to 300 eggs are laid at a time, and the little boat shaped mass is so constructed that it will not overset. It cannot be sunk nor in any way injured by wind, rain or water. It is abandoned by the insect, and the eggs are hatched by the heat of the sun or atmosphere. A temperature below freezing is said not to destroy the vitality of the mosquito eggs.

A HANGMAN'S TROUBLES

Arthur Ellis, Canada's official hangman, complains that the emoluments of his office are becoming so insufficient that he may be compelled to quit this public service. Ellis is a mechanic and except when hanging works at his calling, though he has lost several positions through being discovered or absence from work. During 1912 he has officiated at 8 hangings, and his fees have not amounted to $800, not enough to feed his family. Ellis thinks that he is entitled to as much consideration from the state as Radcliffe, who received a retainer from the Government amounting to about $750 a year.

One of the real troubles which Ellis is facing is that his job is disappearing. Murders in Canada are not fewer in number, but hangings are. The murderers have quite as much vigor as before, but public sentiment has developed against the use of capital punishment except in the cases of murder of most brutal and deliberate character. Ellis ought, however, to be sure of enough remuneration to make his services worth while. He can justly lay claim to efficiency in his line, and is a necessary evil, who ought to be retained. The difference of a few hundred dollars each year isn't warrant for giving the man just cause of complaint.

BONAR LAW IN WRONG

Mr. Bonar Law's proposal, made to get the British Unionists out of the hole of Tariff Reform, that the over-seas dominions be invited to an imperial conference on the matter of "food-taxes" for Britain, has fallen very flat. Perhaps the word "flat" fails to indicate the nature of the impression it produced. The London Times said that no statesman must even dream of such a proposal. The Liverpool Courier asked that the promise of a referendum be renewed. The Unionist newspapers, with the exception of the Pall Mall Gazette, almost condemn Bonar Law outright for wanting to put on the colonies the onus of asking the Motherland to give them a preference.

Those newspapers are right, and Bonar Law is wrong. With one fell blow, he has laid bare the troubles of the Unionists with regard to the food proposals of tariff reform. He has uncovered the skeleton in the Unionist closet. Bonar Law will not last long as the leader of the Unionists. He is able, but he is too preternaturally solemn to catch the public imagination. He will argue for hours with a dry-as-dust academic air, and the matter of his speeches is good, but he lacks the vigorous, swinging personality that makes a man a real leader. As a matter of fact, he does not, as the London Times said, know where he is leading the Unionist party. He cannot hope to induce the British people over-seas to take any steps to ask Britain to put a tax on food for their financial benefit.

The matter of fiscal changes is one of entirely domestic concern. It is a matter for the British people alone to settle. What they do, to give the rest of the Empire a preference in their markets, must be done voluntarily, without suggestion or expectation by the dominions. None of the dominions would accept any interference with its fiscal affairs. In the late reciprocity treaty negotiations, though they led directly from Imperialism to Continentalism, the Asquith Government stood strictly aside, to let the Laurier Government work its will. Ambassador Bryce says he was only a letter carrier between the Laurier negotiators and the Taft men. Though some suggestion from Britain that it did not like Canada to go in for Continentalism might possibly have been warranted by the gravity of the case, yet this principle of non-interference was strictly observed. And that was the only proper course. So the Bonar Law proposal that the dominions should ask Britain to tax itself, or at least, to take such action as would be regarded by a large section of its people as taxing themselves, must fall very flat. The dominions are young, and strong, and healthy and do not need the sacrifice, if sacrifice it be. The British people must work out the problem on their own responsibility.

SOME REAL DIFFERENCES

The Toronto Globe twists the Bonar Law speech in favor of an Imperial Conference on preferential trading and British food duties into a slap at the Borden naval scheme. It figures out that as the Law speech caused such an outcry, so much dissension in the Unionist party, the policy of national development and growth is vindicated, and that being the case, autonomy is the watchword, and therefore Borden and his contribution stand condemned. A marvelous chain of reasoning this. The Liberals have rather a liking for alleging that there is a scheme afoot to bring the over-seas dominions into the position of contributors annually to the imperial navy. They are obsessed with the idea that the dominions are to be used to help support the mother country, and pay tribute. That is rot, as most sane Canadians know. If the Government of Canada gets Parliament to give some ships to Britain, in what way does that impair Canada's future freedom of action? In what way specifically, does the danger to autonomy lie? How are our powers of self-government abridged or abrogated? The Review for one fails to see how Canadian liberty of thought of action, its right to control its own future, are in any way impaired by the gift. As a matter of fact the Liberals have taken a determined stand against rendering any aid to Britain whatever. They want a separate navy, a separate development. They are not imperialists. They would not seek to prevent the dismemberment of the Empire. They would let the Empire sink into a collection of small separate nations without any central organization any central tie, any common aspirations. They lose sight of the Imperial idea altogether. The average voter can easily distinguish between the two policies in favor of Mr. Borden's sane, comprehensive policy of preparing to help Britain and the Empire, and Canada, and to weld closer the steel bonds of Imperial interest. His is a grand and patriotic conception, a conception in which the picture of a separate Canada, or an Americanised Canada has no part. He would have a greater Canada, but chiefly as a chief gem in the diadem of Britain's crown. He would have Canada the chief hope of an Empire the magnificence of which the world may never see again.

UNION BANK VERY PROSPEROUS

Gains in every department of the Bank's activities characterize the 48th annual report of the Union Bank of Canada. The net profits are larger than a year ago, the capital and rest account have been increased during the year, the deposits have made large gains, while the total assets have increased by over $11,000,000. The total profits for the year amounted to $706,000, as compared with $652,000 for the year 1911. The rate earned this year is slightly in excess of 14 per cent., and must be regarded as a very satisfactory showing. With the balance brought forward and the premium on new stock, the bank has $826,000 available for distribution.

A noticeable feature of the report is the large gain in deposits, which now stand at over $55,543,000, a gain of over $10,000,000 during the year. This fact and the fact that the current loans have gained by $7,000,000, show that the bank is occupying an increasingly larger place in the confidence of the public and is doing a continually larger share of the business of the country. The total assets of nearly $80,500,000 make the Union Bank one of the strong banks of the Dominion. This bank has two flourishing branches in Peterborough, the local managers being C. H. Pennyfather and D. C. MacRostie.

SIMPLE QUEEN MARY

Her Majesty Has Dispensed With Her Maid of Honor.

Some surprise has been felt because the Queen has dispensed with the attendance of a maid of honor while at Sandringham, contenting herself with the attendance of a single woman of the bedchamber.

But Queen Mary is not particularly fond of a crowd about her and at York Cottage always has as few people in residence as possible. Then, too, owing to the illness of Miss Mabel Gye, the other two maids of honor have had to take longer periods of waiting than usual, and Her Majesty is exceedingly considerate on these points.

Lady Bertha Dawkins, who was at Sandringham with the Queen, is a widow who has had rather a sad life. She married when she was thirty-seven, Major Arthur Dawkins, various things having kept them apart for many years, and he lived to enjoy the fulfilment of his early romance only two years. Lady Lathom, who is to marry Gen. Lawson, is her sister-in-law, and the present Earl Lathom, who is now seventeen, is her nephew.

The King and Queen, when they visit Paris next March, will make their headquarters in the British Embassy, which is one of the most stately buildings along the whole of the Rue of St. Honore. Sir Francis Bertie is one of the most popular ambassadors Paris has known since the day of Lord Lyons. The house is filled with treasures of every description, including many relics of past ambassadors. The King is, of course, no stranger there, but, curiously enough, the Queen has never stayed there. Indeed, Her Majesty has no great liking for Paris and knows little of the city.

Princess Mary is, it appears, to go to Florence to pursue her studies in art and languages. It will be remembered that Queen Mary spent a year of her girlhood in the City of Flowers, and her constant attendance at the Pitti and other galleries gave her that rare insight into paintings which she possesses. The princess, when she goes, will, of course, be accompanied by a governess and a maid of honor.

Mrs. Adair will be missed from England this winter, although it is some years since she was much in London during the closing months of the year. This time she has really sold her house in Curson street and has gone to California, where she has a ranch, and delights in entertaining those of her friends, who are enterprising enough to journey out there.

However, she is not to be lost as a hostess to London, as she has already practically taken a house in Portman square for next season, and means to acquire new and original ideas for dances while she is in America. No one who was there will ever forget her fancy dress ball in Curson street, given before the craze for these entertainments had revived.

December.

"Nobody is worried nowadays by the fact that the twelfth month of the year is called the tenth, December," says a writer, "and no doubt even the ancient Romans soon got use to the anomaly when the new year was shifted back from March to January, though the old names of the months were retained. But there was one of them who made ingenious use of it—Licinius, a rascally procurator at Lyons under Augustus. He insisted on having certain monthly payments made fourteen times a year, arguing, when December came round, that as it was the tenth month of the year and there ought to be twelve there must be two more to be accounted for."

Algebra.

The science of algebra is said to have been the invention of Mohammed of Buziana about 850 A. D. The science was introduced into Spain by the Moors. The first treaties on the subject in any European language is believed to have been that by Luca Pacoli in 1494. The first English algebra was written by Robert Recorde, teacher of mathematics at Cambridge, about 1557. He was the first to use the sign of equality.

THE UNERRING SUN

It Is Uncle Sam's Most Reliable Lighthouse Keeper.

NEVER FALTERS IN ITS WORK.

By the Aid of the Wonderful Sun Valve It Lights the Acetylene Beacons as It Sets at Night and Extinguishes Them as It Rises in the Morning.

The sun is the most trustworthy of lighthouse keepers. The sun or the heat from it lights many hundreds of beacons along our coasts and waterways evening after evening and extinguishes them punctually every morning. They are guides on land and sea that are never touched by human hands from one month's end to another. The way in which the United States government, through its lighthouse board, has utilized the services of the sun and made that great lamp of heaven a faithful and unerring servant is most interesting.

The discovery of acetylene gas was the first step toward retiring the lonely keepers of the little lights in faroff places. Modern magic was not slow in recognizing the fact that by the application of certain well known scientific principles the lighting of the great chains of beacons that girdle the coasts of the two seas and the gulf and cover the great lakes and every navigable stream in our huge country could be much simplified.

The United States did not become interested in the acetylene light and its automatically generating gas buoy until about the year 1906 and did not adopt it until 1908. Then the engineers of the lighthouse board devised some wonderful improvements, among them the utilization of the sun.

The self lighting and self extinguishing acetylene beacon is a very simple thing, but it depends almost entirely on the "sun valve," which is one of the most wonderful but least complex of the achievements of modern science.

In the first place, the source of light for these lone beacons is dissolved acetylene, which is stored under pressure in steel cylinders. One of these cylinders can be charged with enough gas to last a small beacon three years. Usually, however, in the case of floating buoys, a six months' supply is all that is necessary, as such buoys are overhauled and painted twice a year. Knowing the size of the flame and its hourly consumption of gas, it is very easy to compute how long a cylinderful will last and how often it will need to be visited. That is all the care the light will need. The sun valve does the rest.

The scientific principle upon which the sun valve depends is that light waves become transformed in different degrees, according to the nature of the intercepting body. Sunlight upon dark surfaces is converted into heat, and heat produces expansion. This expansion is especially perceptible in certain metals.

In a carefully sealed and substantially mounted glass jar nearly a foot high and about one-fourth that in diameter a thick black rod is placed perpendicularly through the center. It is supported by three slenderer rods of highly polished copper. The big black rod is of copper also and is coated with lampblack to make it absorb light to the greatest possible degree. The supporting rods reflect light without absorbing it and do not expand or contract to the same extent as the largest rod.

The thick black piece of copper in the center of the jar is extremely sensitive to light and heat. As the sun appears and the atmosphere grows warmer in the morning this rod lengthens. It pushes down into the metal chamber in which the glass jar rests and touches the end of a lever. It presses down on this lever, which is controlled by a spring and cuts off the flow of the gas to the lamp.

When the sun disappears from view in the evening and the temperature of the air falls the process is reversed. The rod contracts and releases its pressure on the lever, allowing the gas to flow upward to the lamp. The gas is ignited by a little pilot flame that is never extinguished. Thus the beacon is lighted at the proper time and is put out when it is no longer needed, although along desolate coasts it may never gladden the human eye for months at a time.

The engineers of the lighthouse board say that the precision of this device is almost incredible. It can be used with equal certainty in equatorial heat and in polar cold, for it responds with the utmost accuracy to small variations in temperature. It is used on lonely islands in the Pacific. There are nearly a hundred of these sun valve beacons in Alaska. In summer they are aids to navigation, and in winter they guide the travelers on dog sledges over the frozen wastes.—Harper's Weekly.

The Gold Lions of Peking.

Fronting the imperial palace at Peking are two beautifully carved lions of enormous size which, if we are to believe the mandarins, are of solid gold and have been there since time immemorial. When the combined armies of England and France advanced on Peking in 1860 the Chinese painted these statues gray in order to make the Europeans believe that they were of bronze and therefore to insure against their being melted. Later, during the Japanese war, these lions disappeared for a time, but at the conclusion of peace they reappeared in their original position. The value of these relics is said to be incalculable, and they are in native eyes a symbol of the unity of the empire.—Harper's.

BUSY TIME ON JANUARY 6

Vote on Four By-laws and Municipal Candidates

With the municipal elections scarcely one week distant there appears to be a very mild interest being taken in anticipating the outcome. It is a foregone conclusion that W. H. Bradburn will again fill the Mayor's chair. The aldermanic contests are calculated to produce a little more excitement, with several new men in the field.

The four by-laws, however, to be submitted are expected to cause the largest share of the day's interest. The result of the local option by-law vote will be awaited with great excitement, and whether Peterborough will henceforth be a dry town is a question that will result in a very interesting story being told at the polls.

The three other by-laws are to authorize the issue of debentures for Hydro Electric power for $120,000; an incinerator by-law for $10,000, and lastly, for the Henry Hope Company for $11,500.

NOT GUILTY OF SERIOUS CHARGE

Hill Brothers of Dummer Acquitted By Judge Huycke

Yesterday afternoon His Honor Judge Huycke honorably acquittted Davis Hill and his younger brother, Russell, of a charge of having set fire to a vacant house and barn owned by Mr. Davis, of Dummer.

In discharging the boys the Judge referred to the pleasure it gave him to find nothing against their characters, although he could not help being impressed with strange things in connection with the case. The evidence for the Crown was not nearly strong enough, or sufficient to warrant the Judge in arriving at any other conclusion.

Both the prisoners were placed in the box by Mr. Gordon, and told clear and fairly straightforward stories in connection with the affair.

BUILDING ROADS

Report of Superintendant of Colonization Roads

The report of G. W. Bennett, Superintendent of Colonization Roads in Northern Ontario, appears in the annual report of the Minister of Public Works for the year ending 31st October, 1911. There are eight illustrations showing the progress of the work of road building, in which some prison labor is used. A prison camp at Porcupine is also shown. Superintendent Bennett reports on the Sudbury Soo Trunk Road; By-law Roads; New Trunk Roads and ordinary Colonization Roads.

A splendid opportunity for cheese makers to talk over matters of general interest in connection with their business will be afforded by a meeting of the Royal Commission, which sits in Montreal on January 2nd and 3rd., to investigate the methods used in making butter and cheese in Montreal.

In all probability, Mr. J. Switzer the president of the Peterborough Cheesemakers' Association will attend, and Ald. G. A. Gillespie, if possible.

Gillespie, the president of the Association has received a very attractively arranged booklet containing the program for the Convention. The committee in charge have not spared themselves to insure the convention being a success, and speakers of national reputation have been secured. Questions of great interest to dairymen will be thoroughly taken up and discussed.

Some of the speakers will be Professor H. H. Dean, B.S.A., Agricultural College, Guelph; L. A. Tufelt, Kingston Dairy School, G. G. Publow, Prof. W. O. Walker and George H. Barr.

President G. A. Gillespie is also slated to deliver an address.

THREATENED TO END HIS LIFE

But Police Did Not Permit Lumberman To Do So.

While under the influence of liquor, James Cox, a lumberman, threatened to take laudanum and end his life, when arrested yesterday in the Montgomery Hotel. He was remanded a week in police court this morning.

Frank Seaton, when charged with vagrancy, promised to go back to the woods and get to work again. He was allowed the opportunity.

Henry Reilly, a plain drunk, was discharged.

GOOD WORK AT THE POST OFFICE

Heavy Business But the Staff was Equal to the Task

Although business at the Post Office is still above normal, the rush is over and officials and the staff are glad. Business this Christmas was the best in the history of the Post Office, in all departments.

The extra mail matter was handled expeditiously and without any being left over on Christmas Day for later delivery. Post cards and letters to the number of 500,000 were handled at the Post Office on Monday last.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

Special and appropriate music will be provided at both local option meetings to-morrow, including selections by the Harmony Quartette, a duet by Miss Josie Callander and Mr. G. B. Thornton, and a solo by Mr. Asa Huycke.

There will be no new faces on the Separate School Board this year, all the members having been returned by acclamation

OBITUARY

The Late Joseph Rightmyer

Mr. W. C. Rightmyer passed away very suddenly at the home of his son Mr. W. C. Rightmyer, Sherthoaks, Sask., last Tuesday night at the age of 76 years.

The late Mr. Rightmyer was born and raised in Prince Edward County. He lived for five years in Hastings County, after which he moved to Northumberland, and from there to Peterborough, where he lived for 62 years in the city and vicinity. Last August he left to visit his son in Saskatchewan, where he was taken ill about a week ago although it was not thought to be serious.

His family live in the city and have not yet learned the circumstances of his death. Surviving him are three sons, W.D., of Sherbrooke street, city; W. C., of Storthoaks, Sask.; Harrison, East City, and two daughters, Mrs. George Armstrong, Manitoba, and Mrs. John Grose, 519 Bolivar street.

The remains are being forwarded for burial in the city, although it is not yet known when they will arrive.

FLUNG FROM A WINDOW.

Horrors of a Death Sentence in the Middle Ages in Bohemia.

How many people know what defenestration means? Yet it was once a popular method of executing criminals and was the mode of capital punishment used in Bohemia in the middle ages and later. Defenestration means "throwing from a window," but that did not always include all the arrangements made for the doomed man's exit from the world.

In Prague in 1419 the council chamber of the hradschin, or town hall, was used as the place of execution. There, in the presence of the assembled nobles, their invited guests and the dignitaries of the city, the unhappy wretches were cast from a window eighty feet to the courtyard below.

If his crime was an ordinary offense the prisoner was merely dropped on the stones and allowed to lie there bruised and broken until death put an end to his sufferings, succor being forbidden.

But if he was guilty of treason or any act of violence against a noble he fell on the sharp spears of a squad of soldiers or dropped to the tender mercies of a pack of fierce dogs specially trained for the purpose, or he might be flung to wild boars previously enraged by being pricked with spears.

The last time defenestration was practised was just before the Thirty Years' war, when the imperial commissioners brought an unwelcome message to Prague and were promptly thrown from the window. This precipitated the war and abolished the custom.—New York Press.

Executioner Sets a Fashion.

In England fashions have been killed at executions, but in France over a century ago fashion in men's attire was set by Sanson, the public executioner. Sanson, who had high ideas of the dignity of his office, was famous for the richness of his attire when officiating on the scaffold. Just before the revolution he was forbidden to wear blue, the nobleman's color, and by way of protest he made himself even more gorgeous. He took to green, and that color, as well as the peculiar cut of his clothes, was adopted by many of the young dandies of the court.

MR. KERNEGHAN IN NORTH WARD

Will Accept Nomination as Aldermanic Candidate

Must First Be Relieved as Bondsman for A. B. Downer

In answer to a query from the Review ex-Ald. Kerneghan said today that he would accept nomination as a candidate in the North Ward for the 1913 Council.

In order that he may qualify, Mr. Kerneghan will ask the Finance Committee this afternoon to relieve him as bondsman for A. B. Downer, the garbage collector.

It is understood the committee will give consent

WOULD CHANGE DIVORCE LAW

Three Judges to Hear all Divorce Cases.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—A strong advocacy of a divorce court in Canada, as demanded by modern conditions of social life, with power to nullify the marriage tie and grant relief to poor as well as rich on the grounds named in the Majority Report of the British Royal Commission was made by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., in an address before the Ontario Bar Association yesterday afternoon. In every case where the husband is found guilty by the divorce court of offences, warranting an absolute decree, the speaker would, on the evidence adduced, impose a punishment. The speaker wished to see a purely judicial tribunal composed of at least three judges, appointed to hear all divorce cases. He would have the members of the tribunal residents of the same province as the applicant, and on any legal questions there should be the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Each province should be divided into districts and there should be frequent sitting in this way. Mr. Johnston argued that courts would be available to the laborer as well as the millionaire.

"A trifling matter from a moral standpoint may be ground for imprisonment," he said. "The stealing of a loaf of bread for a starving family sends a man to jail. Yielding to temptation and taking some trifling article from a bargain counter is penalized by perhaps a month in a cell. But the gravest of crimes against divine laws and a vicious defiance of the well recognized principles of morality are allowed to go unpunished and treated as a matter only of scandal and idle gossip."

Several speakers entered into the discussion, both for and against.

Have Hand In Patronage.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 28.—E. A. Lancaster, M.P., at the annual meeting of the Conservative Club here on Thursday night strongly endorsed his action in acting single-handed apart from the committee in regard to matters of patronage, stating that his plan had won favor in Ottawa over the committee system.

DEVELOPMENT OF C.P.R. LANDS

Mr. J. S. Dennis, assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and head of the Department of Natural Resources, has made a startling announcement in respect to the future policy of the C.P.R. in connection with the development of the unsold land in the West of which the railway company has still seven millions of acres for the advent of the settler. The C.P.R. has definitely decided not to sell any more land to speculators, but will offer it to bona fide settlers from North America, the British Isles and Northern Europe.

At the beginning of this year, the Natural Resources Department sprung another surprise on the farming community in the shape of loans to American farmers to the extent of $2,000 which could be expended in the improvement of the farm and the erection of farm buildings. Those who were able to participate in this magnificent offer were farmers who had a little capital to buy land and who possessed a little stock. The idea was again successful in inducing the best of the American farmers who were paying high land rents to trek to Western Canada.

By the new terms which the company have decided to offer the great tracts of fertile land which lies near or in close proximity to the company's lines in the West and within hail of established towns, settlers will have the privilege of paying the amount of the purchase price of the land in twenty years instead of ten as heretofore, which will give them an opportunity of getting on to their feet at the commencement. The payments of course, carry the usual six per cent. interest as in the past. Furthermore, there will be an additional attraction in the form of a loan of $2,000 from the company, also payable in twenty years with interest at six per cent. which the farmer may use in improvement of his land or in the erection of buildings, and the only security the company has is the land itself, which guarantees the confidence of the company in the fertility of the soil and in the ability of the farmer who takes advantage of this unique offer. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is pursuing this policy for the development of the Canadian West, and this scheme will not be simply confined to the British Isles or the United States, but will be open to all who will actually settle on the land or to experienced agriculturalists.

HE CRUSHED THE TURK

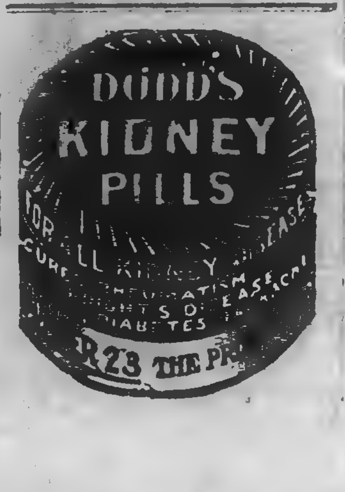
The Bulgarian General Savoff Is the Military Hero of the Hour.

The man of the hour is undoubtedly General Michael Savoff, who has been well described as the Von Moltke of Bulgaria. To him belongs the credit of turning a small nation into a magnificent fighting machine. The efficiency of the Bulgarian armies, and the brilliant generalship displayed have astounded not only the Turks but the rest of the civilized world, and General Savoff is assured of a high place in the military annals of the world.

General Savoff received his military training in Russia, whereas the majority of Turkish generals are German trained. In 1885, when little more than a youth, he undertook the responsibilities of a general, for he commanded the left wing of the Bulgarian army at the battle of Slivnitza. He issued from this stringent test with flying colors, and it naturally followed that when a few years later Stambouloff required a man to reorganize the Bulgarian army the choice should fall on Savoff. As a reformer Savoff met with the greatest success, and in a few years he brought into being a military force that fulfilled all modern requirements. Further confidence was shown in him when he was made head of the Military Academy in Sofia, where the duty devolved on him of training future leaders. The officers who have lately been leading their men from victory to victory have for the most part been trained under the eye of Savoff.

For a time General Savoff dropped out of public life, but in 1902 he resumed his former post of war minister, and entered on five years of brilliant administration, the results of which have been evident during the past few weeks. It was due to Savoff that the military act of 1904 was passed, whereby every man capable of bearing arms should be pressed into the fighting machine. General Savoff is naturally idolized by his countrymen, and he is well deserving of the success that has fallen to him.

General Savoff's success has not only given great satisfaction to Russia, but also to France, for the Allies have been using French guns, whereas the Turks were armed by Krupp. Military experts have maintained for some time that the big guns of the French are the best in the world, and General Savoff was evidently of this opinion. Recent events have confirmed the theory, for the heavy [illegible] brilliant account of itself.



ABOUT THE SAVING OF PLATINUM

A Little Drama Enacted In Uncle Sam's Assay Offices.

SCIENCE IN THE STAR ROLE.

Highbrow Professors Filled Up the Cast, and, With Acids and Precious Metals as Stage Properties, They Scored a Brilliant Success.

Even the United States government has become possessed of the present day fever to eliminate any waste and stop leaks in the methods of doing things. The results, particularly in the mints and assay offices, have been remarkable.

For instance, the old method of extracting gold from baser metals when it came from the mint consisted merely of treating the smelter bars of gold with nitric acid, which dissolved out the baser metals, leaving the gold with a small percentage of impurities that could be removed by fusing with niter.

Germany went the United States one better in this. The professors over there, men whose genius for scientific detail is unsurpassed by those of any other nation, perfected a process for refining by electricity. Simply stated, it is nothing more nor less than electric plating. The smelter bars are placed in the plating bath, and the gold is deposited in an absolutely pure state, leaving the base metals behind in solution.

It was this residue that interested the high brow professors. The fact that platinum is frequently found with gold has been recognized ever since the science of metallurgy was in swaddling clothes; also the fact that gold and platinum have one quality in common—i. e., that no single acid known will dissolve them. It takes a combination of nitric and muriatic acids to get either of these two metals in solution. Silver, on the other hand, is readily soluble in nitric acid. No one ever thought of testing a nitric acid solution of silver for the presence of platinum because of the theory, sound as religion, that platinum could not be dissolved by nitric acid. Therefore, it was argued, if there wasn't enough silver in the solution to make it worth while to extract it, then, of course, there could not be any platinum, so into the sewer it went.

The professors began to experiment. At the first step they uncovered the dusky gentleman in the wood pile. They discovered a curious fact—namely, that, while platinum alone was not soluble in nitric acid, some of its alloys with silver were soluble. For instance, a composition of 5 per cent platinum in silver is readily soluble. Right there was the clew lending to the discovery that for years out of memory untold quantities of the precious metal, essential above all others in electrical manufactures, had been running into the sewer. All solutions were carefully tested. Salts of iron were added, precipitates supposedly of silver were analyzed, and since then platinum at the rate of $5,000 a month has been offered for sale by Uncle Sam.

It is interesting to trace the sources of this gold in that the facts suggest that sooner or later deposits of platinum in large quantities are going to be found. Little of the gold coming from the western United states and Alaska contains platinum. It is found almost entirely in the gold mined in Mexico and South America. Gold from these districts is coming in larger quantities year after year. It is found, for instance, in what is popularly known as Guinea gold. Guinea gold has a peculiar luster all its own. It is highly prized in the jewelry trade for this same peculiar color.

There are vast reaches of wilderness in South America that, filled with miasmic swamps and lurid savages armed with poisoned arrows, have so far resisted the advance of the white man. It seems not too much to expect that sooner or later, when these districts are exploited, platinum in large quantities will be discovered. Some Bret Harte is probably a-borning now to sing the romance of Platinum gulch. The romance of gold is founded on the material consideration of $20.67 an ounce, which the governments of the earth have decreed must be its price now and for evermore. They will have to build a second story extension on the romance of the metal that is worth twice as much as gold.

Now that Uncle Sam is finding this mine of platinum in the supposedly unalloyed bars that the big refining companies are sending in from their smelters, the interesting question is arising, Who owns the platinum, Uncle Sam or the refineries? Uncle Sam bought their gold, refined it for them at cost and paid them dollar for dollar out of his pocket. Actually he was out on the transaction. Now that he has stopped the leak in his drainpipe, he is a little ahead.

Naturally, if one can play at a game two can play at the same game. Some of the bigger smelter companies, whose output is sufficient, have undertaken the task of recovering this platinum themselves. If Uncle Sam can help out his payroll with platinum residues there is no reason why a privately conducted smelter cannot do the same thing. So the electrical method of refining is coming more and more into use, and the highbrow professors in the mints who have been searching for platinum have discovered that the smelter bars sent in for coinage are almost 100 per cent fine, without so much as a smell of platinum in them.—F. Irving Anderson in New York Tribune.

SGIENTISTS NOW IMITATING GEMS SUCCESSFULLY

The Situation In Europe Where False Stones Are So Good as To Be Mistaken by Experts Is Growing Serious and Dealers Are Insisting on Legal Steps—Any Stone Can Now Be Counterfeited.

The deep flash of a blood-red ruby flares behind the plate glass of the jeweler's window. Fire burns in every facet. The lurid glow fascinates you. What is the figure?

The amount depends entirely upon the honesty of the dealer. If he knows you and you know him, he will be frank and tell you whether you are buying a real, nature-made gem, the product of untold centuries, the value of which is hundreds of pounds, or one of laboratory manufacture, which was made in an hour and which is valued at about two shillings a carat. You are at his mercy. Therefore, if you are a buyer of precious stones, make a friend of your jeweler and assure yourself of his honesty. For this is the hour of the unscrupulous dealer in man-made gems.

The sapphire and the ruby of human manufacture are everywhere. They are being "created" in the laboratories of the Paris chemists at the rate of about seven million carats a year. So nearly do they resemble the gems which nature requires centuries to produce that the expert alone can distinguish the real stone from that of laboratory origin. The average jeweler who has himself had little experience in handling these gems cannot tell the difference. He must take the expert's word that the stones he buys are genuine.

The trouble grows serious, especially in Europe. The buyer of a synthetic ruby or sapphire may go through life believing that he possesses a stone formed in the mighty workshop of nature, unless he happens to re- [illegible] an expert. In Germany and France, selling manufactured sapphires and rubies as genuine is so general that the jeweler's association of Paris and Berlin have asked their respective countries for stringent laws compelling the manufacturers to label their goods, and as there are more than five thousand cutters employed in turning out millions of carats of these scientifically made stones annually, there is a considerable output to be labelled.

There is no stone that cannot be imitated. By hardening glass to extraordinary strength, by studying out coloring schemes and by chemistry it is possible to imitate every stone almost perfectly. Of course, an examination of the glass product by a jeweler would show the difference, but there are few microscopes at the social gatherings where these gems are worn.

It is a costly business in a way. Sometimes as much as $5,000 is expended in experiments before the right coloring is obtained for some particular form of jewel which has become a fad. However, once the coloring is found the manufacture of the stones becomes cheaper and cheaper as the output grow. Sometimes glass jewels are turned out at a cost of less than sixpence a carat.

The instant a real gem of any particular charm appears in the market the chemists of all the artificial jewel makers begin to study it. And before the real jewel has approached the zenith of its popularity the artificial stone has been brought forth and is selling like the proverbial wildfire—at about one-fiftieth of the price of the real product.

But it is not in the really artificial stones that the jewelers see trouble. They know they can detect these where they cannot detect the synthetic gems. And in these synthetic gems lurk the danger. It would be possible, some jewelers say, to flood the market with scientifically made rubies and sapphires.

The cause of it all began about ten years ago in a crystal of purified alum for from this material the synthetic stones are made. The inventor was M. Verneuil, of Paris, who followed the work of chemists whose combined efforts had extended over centuries. All of the experiments had been on the principle that since nature's gems were produced by heat the man-made stone could be produced in the same way. Crystals had been formed in this manner, but the process of coloring had formed the stumbling block. Verneuil solved the question by mixing oxides with the purified alum.

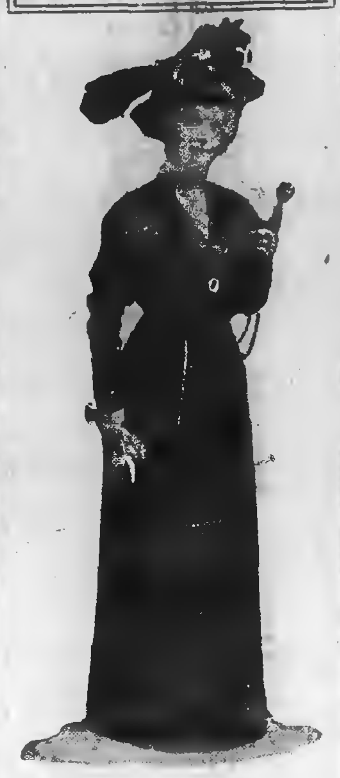
After this the alum and oxides were placed in an oxyhydrogen furnace so devised that the gem-making material would drop through an intense flame. Thus a base was formed of the half-melted powder as it [illegible] range of the flame and piled steadily up. Higher and higher it went until the top was at the exact point of the flame. There it remained, and the gathering heat slowly caused it to form into crystals. Other powder was dropping from above. This, too, was formed into crystals, and M. Verneuil, after hundreds of experiments, opened his furnace to bring forth the first "boule" or rough bit of manufactured jewel.

This was sent to the cutters, and when their work was done it was announced to the world that the manufactured ruby was a reality. Work was then begun on the manufacture of sapphires. However, the coloring of this stone was more difficult, and it was two years before the work was completed.

M. Verneuil is now endeavoring to solve the coloring schemes of other stones in order to manufacture them also, but so far the sapphire, which is made in every color of the real gems, and the ruby, are the only stones that can be manufactured by the synthetic method.

THE ZEBRA GOWN.

This Smart Costume a New French Creation.



IT IS ATTRACTIVE FOR THE MATRON.

One of the great French dressmakers, known at the capital as the instigator of weird effects in dress, stands as sponsor for this winter costume, which is called the zebra gown because of its odd and striking arrangement of striped material.

Black and white velvet is draped over black satin in the bodice, and the skirt has an interesting adaptation of stripes. A panel of black satin weighted with gray silk fringe and embroidered in gray brings into harmony the color scheme. Black satin boots and a chic black hat complete the picture.

Fichu For Last Year's Frock.

The woman of limited means should be delighted that the fichu is in style this season. By its kindly aid last year's gowns can be brought up to date.

A fichu of jetted net flecked with emerald green or cerise will quite transform even the dingiest of black dresses, while on an ivory satin which has seen its best days a fichu of deep ivory net will work marvels. And now that such wonderful dyed nets and laces are to be had so cheaply any old gown can be made to look new and up to date.

Bits About the Baby.

Nervousness may not be catalogued as a disease, but if it is not it certainly should be.

The mother who is nervous will always have a nervous baby, and unless that baby is treated in the proper manner the nerves will develop most troublesome habits, to say the least.

Take, for instance, the case of a young mother who cannot sleep well. Her child will not sleep well either. He will not grow as much as he should nor in the way he should. His food will not agree with him, in the first place, and unless this trouble is corrected early in his life chronic indigestion will certainly be his inheritance.

The lack of sleep and poor assimilation of the food he takes will produce all sorts of ailments, undermine the health and arrest the natural development.

If the mother does not nurse the baby—and it is better for the nervous, anaemic mother not to attempt it—then the selection of a proper food is a great problem. Cow's milk modified with barley water is the best substitute for healthy breast milk, but sometimes the little stranger cannot take the cow's milk. Then the best thing to do is to consult the doctor and let him suggest whatever he may think is wise to use instead.

The Original Fruit Canners.

We are indebted to Pompeii for the great industry of canned fruit. Years ago, when the excavations were just beginning, a party of Cincinnatians found in what had been the pantry of a house many jars of preserved figs. One was opened, and they were found to be fresh and good. Investigation showed that the figs had been put into jars in a heated state, an aperture left for the steam to escape and then sealed with wax. The hint was taken, and the next year fruit canning was introduced into this country, the process being identical with that in vogue at Pompeii twenty centuries ago.

Boiled Glass.

Brittleness of glass is due to the quick cooling of the hot substance. It is known that constant motion tends to rearrange the molecule in any substance, and a similar effect is observed when glass is boiled in a weak solution of salt in water and allowed to cool gradually. The toughness of the glass is increased very much, and the effect of quick heating is less disastrous to it. This is easily applied to articles used in the laboratory and to glass globes for lighting purposes and prevents much breakage.

SCIATICA

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by "Nerviline."

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. In order to build up my general health and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

CURED SIX YEARS

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." 50 cents per bottle, trial size, 25c; sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

McGILL WILL GIVE LOCAL SENIORS HARD ARGUMENT

St. Mikes were lucky last night to finish on the long end of a 4—3 score against the Intercollegiate Champions, who meet the locals at Brock street rink, Monday night.

THRIFTY NAPOLEON.

He Made Sure of Being Served With Honesty and Economy.

Emperor Napoleon I., dressed in plain clothes, often visited the markets of Paris in order to learn the current prices of food and find out whether his household officers served him with honesty and economy. In "Foreign Reminiscences" Richard Lord Holland says that this was only one illustration of the emperor's thrift and shrewdness.

When the Tuilleries was being repaired Napoleon suspected that the upholsterer's charges were higher than they should be. So he asked one of his ministers, who was with him, how much the ivory egg at the end of the bell rope ought to cost.

"I do not know," was the answer.

"It shall be ascertained," said Napoleon. Thereupon he cut off the ivory handle, called for a valet, bade him dress himself in plain clothes, inquire the price of such articles at several shops in Paris and order a dozen as if for himself.

The valet bought them for two-thirds of the price that the emperor had had to pay. Napoleon, inferring that the same overcharge had been made in the other articles, deducted a third from the entire account and informed the tradesman that it was done at his own express command because on investigation he had found the charges to be exorbitant.

An Ancient English Workhouse.

In the records of St. Thomas' hospital, London, is an entry of the year 1570 to the effect that "in consideration of the hote tyme of the yere" the poor be allowed "every one a day three pyntts of Bere for two months," a quart at dinner and a pint at supper, and at the end of two months return to "there olde ordinary allowance, which is one quarte." The food at this ancient workhouse was to be dealt with as liberally as the drink. The almoner and steward were to "bye no byffe but of the best, without bones and in speciall without the marybon, and none other to be bowght."

A man had sixty ducks for sale and divided them into two lots of thirty each. One lot was to be disposed of at three for $1 and the other at two for $1. In his absence his clerk sold the sixty ducks at five for $2, realizing the sum of $24. If sold according to instructions one purchaser would have got thirty ducks for $15 and the other thirty for $10, making $25 for the lot. What became of the missing dollar?

A FAMOUS TOREADOR

Bombita Is Back Again Among His Adorers In Madrid.

Bombita, the darling of Spain, has recovered from the dangerous wound he had received in a bull fight, and a recent Sunday all Madrid went to the Plaza de Toros to welcome the greatest of all toreadors to the scene of former triumphs.

The sun was beating down on the tier of seats opposite me, where a thousand fluttering fans looked like brilliant butterflies. King Alfonso and the Queen were in the royal box, surrounded by the flower of the Spanish aristocracy. All the women wore the graceful mantilla, and the queen had red roses in her hair.

Charmed as the people were to see the youthful king and queen, their chief thoughts were for Bombita, the dashing Bombita, whose photograph appears in dozen of newspapers every week. He is as daring and as expert a toreador as the men of the old school, but he is not in ordinary life the toreador with a little pigtail, happier in the cafe than in the drawing room. The fabulous fees he receives for his dangerous work permit of his keeping a motor car, and enable him to dine in the most fashionable restaurants. He is faultlessly dressed by a London tailor, and when I met him the other night at an evening party I took him to be a diplomatist or a Spanish grandee.

In the arena Bombita was radiant in rose-color silk and gold lace, and he wore white silk stockings and dainty shoes—a charming costume for a masquerade, but inappropriate for the work of slaying ferocious bulls. But Bombita was superb. He played with death, like a child with a toy. He knelt for a moment in the sand as his second bull, snorting with fury, rushed upon him. The creature's horns seemed within an inch of his body when he rose, stepped aside with the grace of Nijinsky, and plunged his short sword into the animal's neck.

The dexterity, the amazing daring of the man filled the critical audience with new wonder at the prowess of their favorite. A great shout went up: "The ear! The ear!" The toreador who has pleased the public by his skill is accorded the right to keep the ear of the bull he has killed as a trophy. It is for the spectators to judge whether he deserves the supreme reward. On Sunday some were opposed to the award, and for at least two minutes it hung in the balance whether Bombita would take home the trophy, and, as I suppose he does, nail it to the wall of his dining room. King Alfonso decided the matter by joining in the popular cry and Bombita received his reward.

The Gates of Paradise.

When the plague which visited Florence in the year 1400 had subsided the people decided as a thank offering to add bronze gates to the baptistry of the Church of St. John the Baptist, and the guild of merchants invited the best artists to compete. The design of Ghiberti was considered faultless, and he was intrusted with the work on Nov. 23, 1403. It was twenty-one years before the two folding doors were completed, and so exquisite were their design and workmanship that Michelangelo a century later said of them, "They are worthy to be the gates of paradise." This applied also to another door wrought and designed by the same artist, which was put in place June 16, 1452, a most important creation of Florentine art and one which evidently influenced Michelangelo himself.

Curious French Market.

There is a curious old market near Paris in which everything is sold at secondhand. Working girls can fit themselves out there from head to foot. As a writer says: Mimi can sell her old felt hat and buy a straw one, exchange her old dress for a new one and, if she likes, buy a steak and a salad for her dinner, a paper bag of fried potatoes, sweets and some flowers for her window. Democracy is king here, and no more attention is paid to the millionaire who is looking for something marvelous which he may pick up cheap than to the man with a wooden leg who wants a new boot in exchange for a dozen sardine tins, five gloves and a stocking.

That "Homey" Feeling.

A little girl went to spend the afternoon with her aunt, and for some time she enjoyed herself hugely, but then she became silent and reflective. A dish of apples was on the table, toward which her eyes wandered frequently, but she had been taught never to ask for anything not freely offered to her.

Finally she said slowly, "I wish I was at home."

Naturally the aunt inquired "Why?"

To which the little girl replied, softly, "'Cause if I was at home I'd eat an apple."

Of course the apple was immediately proffered.

Not So Bad.

A young lawyer who has recently hung out his shingle here was retained by a criminal with $5 and a very poor defense.

"Well, you got a case, [illegible]" said his proud father.

"Yes, dad."

"And what advice did you give your client?"

"After listening to his story I collected what money he had and advised him to retain a more experienced lawyer."

HIGHLY COLORED FUN

Grotesque Sport That Is a Part of the Holi Festival.

The curiously childish horseplay of the Holi festival, which is celebrated annually by the maharaja of Patiala, is described by Mrs. Charles Bertram in "A Magician In Many Lands." The author made the acquaintance of the famous Hindu ruler during a tour of India and was invited to remain over for the festival.

Early in the morning I went to the club, where I found many of the guests, who were taking part in the ceremony for the first time. We were provided with a complete new suit of Hindu garments, and our dressing was superintended by the maharaja's servants. We had camels, elephants and victorias provided for us. I was on an elephant in a kind of box, and we drove in procession to the palace in the native city.

We were received with great acclaim by the natives, and I was led to believe that it was to be decidedly a dignified occasion. But I was woefully mistaken. The fun had not begun. Certain formalities had to be gone through before the signal was given.

We took our seats in the courtyard of the palace at a long table that was loaded with large gilt dishes filled with different colored balls as large as oranges and filled with Holi powder. At a signal the brother of the maharaja came to the front of the table and salaamed to the prince, who took one of the balls and threw it gently across the table, striking the officer on the breast.

The ball broke and scattered the powder over his costume. Then there was a general scramble, and in less time than it takes to write hundreds of balls were flying about, their many colored contents scattered broadcast on the crowd. Next baskets of loose powder were thrown upon us in handfuls.

It was no use to expostulate. The moment you opened your mouth somebody filled it with powder. The battle grew fast and furious, when suddenly an enormous stream of water from a fire engine drenched everybody. The colored powders became wet and, mingling together, dyed us all in brilliantly variegated hues.

After this sort of thing had gone on for half an hour it ceased by mutual consent, and we returned to the private gardens of the maharaja, where we were most unceremoniously pitched into a tank of running water. I was dyed a deep scarlet all over my body, and it was fully a month before the color entirely disappeared from my face and hands.

She Knew the Symptoms.

There is a certain bright English actress who comes over here every year or two to play an engagement, says the Saturday Evening Post. Among her admirers on this side is a middle aged theatrical man of a serious turn of mind. He is courtly, but has been called tiresome in conversation. One afternoon at her suit in a New York hotel the sprightly lady was brewing a dish of tea for a couple of newspaper men. The telephone bell rang, and the hostess answered the call.

"Yes," she said, "this is Miss Blank. Who? Oh, Mr. Blink calling, is it?" Then, in a tone of weary resignation, "Very well, send him right up." She hung up the receiver and turned to the newspaper men.

"Boys," she said, "you'll have to toddle away. My sick headache is coming on."

Charity.

The lady was making some remarks about the kind of clothes some other ladies at church had on.

"The finest garment a woman can wear," said her husband, "is the mantle of charity."

"Yes," she snapped, "and it's about the only one some husbands want their wives to wear."

BLACK LETTERS AND WHITE.

The Former More Distinct at a Distance Than the Latter.

There is a tendency on the part of railroads to adopt signs with white letters on a black background, not realizing that the black letter on a white background is easier to read and can be seen at a greater distance. This follows in an interesting way from the structure of the retina of the eye.

The impression of a letter at the limit of vision is received on the ends of a small bundle of nerves which convey to the brain a sort of mosaic impression. A nerve can only transmit to the brain information as to whether or not a ray of light is falling upon it, and when a nerve is partly in the light and partly in darkness the sensation is the same as though all of it was in the light.

It follows, therefore, according to the Scientific American, that all nerves on the dividing edge between any black and white area transmit the sensation of light so that all white lines and white areas appear wider and all black lines and black areas appear narrower than they really are.

Black letters grow thinner at the limit of vision and are still recognizable, while at the same distance white letters grow thicker and cannot be distinguished. There are circumstances when it is necessary to use white letters, but in such cases legibility will be improved if they are made with a thin stroke and strongly lighted. Black letters are more distinct if made with a heavy stroke.

Killing Time.

Perhaps the busiest time of the year in old colonial days was November, called "killing time." When the chosen day arrived oxen, cows and swine which had been fattened for the winter's stock were slaughtered early in the morning that the meat might be hard and cold before being put in the pickle. Sausages, rolliches and headcheese were made, lard tried out and tallow saved.

Changed.

"When my two girls were born I used to wonder what I was going to make of them."

"And now?"

"Now that they're grown up and in society I've begun wondering what they're going to make of me."—Detroit Free Press.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain [illegible] Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

MEETINGS AT THE TABERNACLE

Ten Days Evangelistic Meetings to Commence New Years

Ten days' evangelistic meetings, to be conducted by the Rev. G. N. Murphy, of Chicago, are being arranged for in Bethany Tabernacle, to open on the evening of January first.

Mr. Murphy has a very wide and fruitful ministry in the Central and Western States, and is at present doing a splendid work in the State of Michigan.

The Annual Convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance will be held shortly after these meetings close, probably from Jan. 20th to 24th, inclusive. Those expected to speak at the convention are Rev. E. J. Richards, of New York, Home Secretary of the Alliance; Rev. L. J. Long, of Toronto, Superintendent of the Alliance in Canada; Rev. W. H. Chandler, of Wheaton, Illinois, Rev. R. H. Glover, M.D., Deputational Secretary of the Alliance; Rev. Iner Wickware, Missionary from the Congo, Africa.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor,—The Examiner tries to excuse the ex-member for Peterbrough W., for helping Bob Shaw of Harvey, to make a mess of the Buckhorn bridge, by saying that it was the fault of the County Council for not taking the matter up with the authorities between June and October, 1911. Now I do not think the County Council is to blame, for they did not undertake to do the job. They accepted the bridge all right, but the Grit Government did not carry out the bargain. It isn't right to blame the Council.

Yours, etc.

COMES FROM THE RUTHENIANS

Rev. H. A. Berlis to be Heard To-morrow

The Rev. H. A. Berlis, who will conduct the service in Knox church to-morrow morning and St. Andrew's evening service, is an appointed evangelist of the Presbyterian church to the Ruthenians of Western Canada, a preacher of great ability. The Presbyterian church has been attacked by the Catholic Register and accused of proselytizing among the Ruthenians who they claimed belong to the Roman church. The Ruthenians have appealed to the Presbyterian church for protection and guidance. Lately Rev. Berlis, a Russian by birth, has been appointed as a missionary among these people.

Music and Drama

The Rev. Charles F. Aked, known as John D. Rockefeller's pastor, while visiting England a short time ago, preached to a crowded congregation at Pembroke Chapel, Liverpool, a sermon on the religious teachings of Shakespeare's "Henry V."

Immunity from fire in cinematograph shows and an ultimate revolution in the art of animated photography are promised by the development of an invention demonstrated in a London, England, picture palace of animated photographs produced without the use of celluloid or transparent films. The invention, which is that of a Frenchman named Dupuis, is an entire departure from the present principle of projecting pictures by transparent light. The transparent ribbon of celluloid gives place to a ribbon of mirror-like silvered and fire-proof paper. The small photographic images printed on this paper in the usual manner are projected on to the screen by the light reflected from them. In spite of the more complex course taken by the illuminant, there appears to be no great diminution in brilliancy.

Granville Barker, the famous English acting-manager, has begun the work of organizing two more companies to present George Bernard Shaw's satire, "Fanny's First Play," in the United States. The company which is now offering this piece at Wm. Colliers' Comedy Theatre will remain there for the rest of the season, and on that account it seems wise to prepare additional companies of the same uniform excellence to go on tour. The companies will all be organized and rehearsed in England.

Madame Evelyn Scotney, the chief coloratura soprano of the Montreal Opera Company, made a great hit in "Lucia" at Boston last week.

Harry Lauder's Christmas present to Mrs. Lauder, given at a dinner in the home of William Morris, was the absolute promise of the Scotch comedian that he would retire from the stage to private life on Christmas Day, 1914, after a farewell tour of the world.

The actor declared that by that time his earnings will have netted him $600,000. A portion of this will be devoted to the purchase of a Highland estate adjoining his present home at Dunoon, Scotland, and the remainder, safely invested, will supply him with the luxuries of life.

Lauder's tour of the world will begin in New York on New Year's Day, 1914.

James J. Corbett has fully recovered from the very serious illness which which kept him in a Philadelphia hospital for several weeks early in the season. Mr. Corbett's popularity was attested by the fact that during his illness he received thousands of letters and hundreds of telegrams from admirers in every section of the country. Mr. Corbet has been a star in drama and vaudeville, and this season is interlocutor in minstrelsy.

Otis Harlan is at present playing the role of the French detective in "Little Boy Blue." This is an exceedingly funny and clever bit of of very unusual comedy characterization. Mr. Harlan has been manager on his own account, and previous to that was one of the chief comedians in the late Charles Hoyt's farces. He made his biggest hit in 'The Black Sheep.'

Helen Lowell's appearance in 'Look Who's Here," the new Rida Johnson Young-Paul West musical play, which was produced recently in Philadelphia, was regarded as her debut in musical comedy. As a matter of fact Miss Lowell began her professional career in a juvenile "Pinafore" company, and was soon singing the contralto part in "Iolanthe."

Then came her appearance in the old Hoyt farces. It was in "A Hole in the Ground" that she first achieved prominence. In this, as in other Hoyt pieces, she played the ingenue role. Among the first dramatic plays in which she took part were "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "Quality Street." In the latter Miss Lowell was cast to play the sister part to that of Maude Adams. Then came her smashing hit, that of Miss Hazy in "Mrs Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

WHAT PETERBORO' MAY EXPECT BY INTRODUCTION OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

East City Ratepayers Hear Hydro-Electric Engineer—Some Information About House Lighting — Prices Would be Lowered by Adoption of Hydro-Electric

Either the rate payers are fully convinced that Hydro-Electric power will be the best for the city, or else they are already in possession of all the information required on the subject may be reasonably deducted from the meagre attendance at the meeting last evening in the East City former Village Hall. However those who did attend were rewarded by receiving a vast amount of useful information imparted by Mr. J. H. Castor, a clever young engineer in the employ of the Hydro-Electric Company. Incidentally, it might be mentioned that Mr. Castor is a Peterborough boy and formerly was connected with the engineering department of the Canadian General Electric Works here.

In commencing his few informal remarks, which were given in a conversational way, Mr. Castor explained that the Hydro Electric Commission acts as consulting engineers for municipalities who evince interest in hydro-electric power. The Commission never has made it a practice to go out hunting business. If any town or city desires to investigate the Commission's power propositions the Commissions sends a consulting engineer to give them all the information possible.

PETERBOROUGH HAS EVERY ADVANTAGE

Regarding Peterborough, he stated that no place in his knowledge was more advantageously situated for securing hydro-electric power. The whole aim of the Commission was to furnish towns and cities with power at cost. If they take more power than originally contracted for, the Hydro-Electric invariably reduced its rates, so that the cost of power to any municipality largely depended on the amount of horse power that is purchased.

Mr. Castor then went on to review the situation which Peterborough is confronting, in respect to contracting for hydro power. Boiled down, it simply means this:

That the city must be prepared to assume the responsibility for raising $12,000 for the acquisition of an electrical distribution system which will include provision for installing underground lighting conduit in the business section of the city. This debt will be paid off by the proceeds accruing from the system year by year. Then, at the conclusion of thirty years, the corporation will be in possession of the system. The profits that are made from hydro-electric will benefit the people from time to time in the shape of reduced rates. Mr. Castor explained all this in detail and as simply as possible and placed the proposition before the gathering in a very enlightening manner. One thing which he remarked upon was the fact that the Commission do not countenance any of the proceeds being used to meet municipal expenses.

HOUSE LIGHTING.

In arranging their charges to householders the Commission go by the amount of floor area to be lighted. Instead of paying seven cents a light as at present, the Commission's charge would be only four cents per month, which would be fixed. In a house 35 x 30 feet, there would be represented 1,050 square feet. At the rate, say, of four cents a light per hundred feet per month, twenty lights would cost 43.2 cents. The cost of supplying the power for this period would be 27 cents, on 70 cents aggregate. Figuring at four cents and with a 25 per cent. discount allowed, the charge per month would be between 50 and 60 cents a month for a house of the dimensions referred to, or a total of $1.43 per month.

Mr. Castor then explained how the Toronto Electric Company had been forced to reduce their rates until they are now on an equal footing with Hydro-Electric. The Toronto Electric Light Company had reduced their profits 100 per cent. through the competition offered by the Hydro-Electric Commission. He quoted a rate for Peterborough of 4.1 per kilowatt which is perceptably lower than the 7 cent. per kilowatt rate at present in force by the Seymour Power Company. Mr. Castor also asserted that under no possible circumstances would power cost this city more than $17.00.

Lakefield also is awaiting the result of the power by-law vote in Peterborough before committing themselves to a contract with the Hydro people. Mr. Castor firmly believed that Hon. Adam Beck's 'hired man" as it is jocularly styled would do the majority of farm work that recent experiments have shown it capable of performing. A two-horse power motor costs a farmer in Toronto township just $96 per year, and saves the expense of one hired man.

It would certainly be a vast improvement to the city as Mr. Caster stated to have the business thoroughfares of this city brilliantly illuminated by Hydro and it would contribute largely to giving it the appearance of a modern and progressive city.

All the various aspects and phases of the situation were explained thoroughly by the speaker and with Hon. Adam Beck to further expound its merits, little opposition is expected to the by-law when it is submitted to the rate-payers on Jan. 6th.

His Worship Mayor, Bradburn presided at the proceedings. There were also present City Clerk Armstrong, Alderman Johnston, Morgan and Anderson. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Castor for his able presentation of the case.

YOUTHFUL "KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD" HELD BY POLICE

Five forlorn looking boys whose ages range around fourteen and fifteen, were taken into custody by the police early this morning while awaiting an opportunity to steal their way out of the city on the Grand Trunk Railway. They are all Toronto lads who beat their way to this city on the train, arriving here Thursday night.

Last evening they slept in the stables of the Windsor Hotel, spending a very uncomfortable night, judging from their appearance this morning. Their names are John Henderson, Thomas Jennings, Reggie Hughes, William Brown and Ernest Brown.

Chief Thompson intends to communicate with the Toronto police by telephone and find out if they are wanted in Toronto. Until then they will be cared for at the police station.

RIGHT REV. BISHOP REEVE.

Very few clergymen of the Church of England have had a wider or more varied experience in missionary work than Bishop Reeve; in fact, nearly all of his ministerial life has been spent in the mission field. Bishop Reeve will preach at St. George's church to-morrow.

MINISTER IN DISGUISE

Tells How He Trailed Montreal Burlesquers.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—Rev. W. S. E. Critchley of Ottawa, who was responsible for the action taken against the Royal Theatre here by the Dominion Alliance and the police, described yesterday how he became interested in the matter.

He said: "I heard a discussion about the Royal Theatre in the Y. M. C. A. a week ago last Sunday, and I determined to go and see for myself if the performance was really as bad as suggested.

"Of course I disguised myself. I found that nothing had been understated. It was disgraceful. I have visited many a theatre of every class in England, but I never saw or heard anything so low and gross as at the Royal Theatre here."

Bonar Law Misrepresented.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post, advocating Bonar Law's proposal for a conference, regrets that his position has been entirely misrepresented, and claims that if, in 1907, Canada had been given the reciprocal trade urged by Laurier, there would have been no negotiations with the United States, and the cold shoulder on the part of Canadian Liberals to the naval program.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT ON PROHIBITION QUESTION

The late Eminent Canadian Statesman Declared It a Snare and a Proved Failure.

In his extensive "Reminiscences" just published in book form in Toronto, Sir Richard Cartwright, the noted Canadian statesman who died a few weeks ago, gives his frank opinion of the prohibition movement and writes with refreshing candor of some of its leaders. All of the Toronto newspapers of November 21st, 1912, gave long advance extracts from Sir Richard's volume and referred to the "Reminiscences" as the sensation of the season. The following excerpts were included in the long extracts published in the Toronto "Globe" of November 21st:

Continuing, Sir Richard deals in a plain-spoken way with the influence of the Orange Order and the temperance element on the events of the time. Discussing temperance legislation, he expresses the conviction that all fair-minded men must admit that genuine temperance workers have done much good work in regulating the traffic in liquor, and in abolishing drinking customs. "But," he adds,

"I doubt very much the wisdom of attempting to enforce prohibition by-law. Like many good causes," he proceeds later, "temperance has been doubly abused, partly by the undue interference with men's individual liberty, in itself a great evil, and next by the somewhat serious mistake of making a sort of shibboleth of adherence to the cause of temperance a substitute for other and quite as important qualifications in public life.

"Not a few of the greatest scoundrels I have known, and my experience has been extensive, have been very ardent temperance advocates, and their acceptance of extreme temperance dogmas has been held to justify preferring them for places of trust and responsibility to men infinitely their superiors in all other respects. Briefly, their action in many cases may be described as zeal without knowledge. They have got to learn the lesson—difficult for many earnest philanthropists to realize—that moral reforms, to be lasting or valuable, must come from within and not from legal enactments. I speak thus because the agitation for temperance legislation has been, and very likely will continue to be, a disquieting factor in Canadian politics—and but rarely to good purpose." 57

ROUMANIA MOBOLIZING

Military Stores Being Sent to the Front

Turkish Delegates Instructed to Modify Peace Terms

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Dec. 30.—The Belgrade correspondent to the Daily Telegraph reports Roumani as mobilizing troops and military stores are being moved to the frontier.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Notwithstanding apparently insurmountable difficulties attending the successful issue of the peace conference, the prospects to-day look brighter, more because of the changing atmosphere of the conference than on account of any new fact.

In the first place, it is stated on good authority that the Turkish delegates will present to-day modified terms better calculated to afford a basis for negotiation, and, in the second place, the allies appear more anxious to come to real business, if it is at all possible. They have occupied the week end in exchanging long cipher telegrams with their respective governments, in order to be fully informed on all points and in complete agreement. They seem to be nervously apprehensive that they will be deprived of the fruits of their victories by European intervention. One of the delegates said last night:

"It is difficult to say whether our struggle will be harder against Musulman oppression or against European intervention, which already several times has prevented us from shaking off the Ottoman yoke. Although our armies have victoriously reached Tchatalja, Europe might wish to return Adrianople to the Moslems, forgetting or ignoring what that would mean to the Christian population. But we know the value of the so-called European guarantees for Turkish reforms, and this time we will not give in.

"If official Europe likes horrors it will have them. We will fight to the bitter end. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

The Balkan delegates fear that Austria's attitude is encouraging the Turks to resist.

TWO BOYS DROWNED

Brother Dies in Trying to Effect Rescue.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 30.—At Cardinal Village Friday the two sons of William Dodge were sleighing near the residence of their parents on the bank of the old canal, when Roy, aged four years, in descending the steep incline, [illegible] and upon [illegible] went through and was drowned. His brother Gordon, aged 11, in heroic attempt at rescue, also lost his life. The body of the younger lad floated because of being attached to the rope of the sleigh, while the body of his brother was found in four and a half feet of water.

The lads were not missed until the mother went to call them for dinner. They were nowhere to be seen but their toques were floating in an opening in the ice, and gave the first clue to the tragedy. They had then been in the water half an hour and life was extinct.

Snowslide Blocks Railway.

CORDOVA, Alaska, Dec. 30.—A big snowslide near Mile 89 on the Copper River and Northwestern has blocked the line and there is little likelihood of the line being cleared before the latter part of next week. The slide occurred several days ago. Many travellers from Fairbanks are at Chitina waiting for the line to be cleared to continue their journey to the coast.

FALLON HALL IS THE NAME

New School for Catholic Boys Under 14 Years.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 30.—"Fallon Hall," a residential school for boys up to the age of fourteen years, is the latest Roman Catholic educational project for London, and, in making the announcement last night, Rt. Rev. Bishop Fallon stated that the plans were so far advanced that the ground would be broken in the spring.

The building will cost not less than $100,000. This and another $100,000 for the school's endowment came from an American benefactor of the Ursuline Sisters, who have a fine college at Chatham. The name of the generous donor would not be revealed by his lordship.

The stipulations accompanying this benefaction of over $200,000 were that the donor's name should not be made known, that the school should be under the direction of the Ursuline Sisters, and that it should be called "Fallon Hall."

The school will be located on the west end of Sunshine Park, a block of forty-seven acres presented a few months ago to the Catholic Church for educational purposes. It is to be the site for St. Peter's Seminary, for which the people of the diocese have already contributed upwards of $150,000.

The institution will be a residential school for boys, modeled after the academies for girls maintained at different convents.

This announcement, following closely upon the coming of the Redemptorist Fathers, who will build a $75,000 church and monastery at their own expense in East London, was unlooked for by London Catholics.

TOO MUCH FEASTING AT NEW YEAR'S

Archbishop Bruchesi Deplores Montreal's New Year's Customs.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—In the course of a circular letter addressed to the local Catholic clergy and read at all the masses in the various local church yesterday. His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi denounced the deplorable excesses which, he said, had marked the feasting in local hotels, incident to seeing the old year out and the new year in.

In certain instances the participants in these New Year's banquets had forgotten themselves to a disgraceful extent. Such feastings had about them anything but a Christian character, said his grace, and Catholics should not figure in them.

Forescue Takes Job.

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—An important change in the administration of the Northwest Mounted Police takes place on Tuesday when Lt.-Col. Frederick White, C.M.G., comptroller-general since 1878 will retire and will be succeeded by Lawrence Fortesque, I.S.O.

Lt.-Col. White has been in the Government service for 45 years and has rendered distinguished services to Canada, particularly in the administration of justice in the west.

MANY ARRESTS HAVE BEEN MADE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—Many arrests have been made at Breslau, the capital of Silesia of both men and women, charged with conspiracy. Correspondence seized reveals a plot to destroy all bridges in the neighborhood in the event of German mobilization.

NEW TRIAL NOT ALLOWED LABOR MEN

Canadian Press Despatch.

Indianapolis, Dec. 30.—All motions for a new trial for the labor union officials concivted on dynamite conspiracy were overruled by Judge Anderson.

Motions for the arrest of judgment were also overruled.

Ryan received a sentence of seven years; Clancy, Young, Cooley, Butler, Hockin, Tveitmoe, and Munsey, all got six years.

The prisoners will probably be taken to Leavenworth, Kansas, to-night. Others sentenced were: Webb six years; Barry and Smith, four years; Morrin, Legleiner, Boum, Cunnane, Smythe, Pennell, Brown, Anderson, Hannon, Basey, Mocain and Reddin, three years. The others got from two years to one year and a day, except Farrell, Coughlin, Kline and Murphy, on whom sentence was suspended. Sentence was suspended also on Clark, who gave government evidence. McMannigal was not sentenced.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 30.—The thirty-eight officials of the structural ironworkers who were convicted on Saturday of complicity in the various McNamara dynamiting plots will know their fate by to-night. Sentence will be delivered by Judge Anderson to-day.

Out of the forty men only two, Herman G. Seiffert of Milwaukee and Daniel Buckley of Davenport, Iowa, were acquitted.

The following were found "guilty": Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers; John T. Butler, Buffalo, vice-president; Olaf A. Tveitmoe, Eugene A. Clancy, Philip A. Cooley, Michael J. Young, Frank J. Higgins, J. E. Munsey, Frank C. Webb, Patrick F. Farrell, John H. Barry, Paul J. Morrin, Henry W. Legleitner, Charles N. Beum, William E. Reddin, Michael J. Cunnane, Richard H. Houlihan, James Cooney, James A. Coughlin, William Shupe, Edward Smythe, James E. Ray, Murray L. Pennell, William C. Bernhardt, Wilford B. Brown, William J. McCain, Frank K. Painter, Peter J. Smith, George Anderson, Michael J. Hannon, Edward E. Phillips, Chas. Wachtmeister, Frank J. Murphy, Fred. J. Mooney, Ernest G. W. Basey, Fred. Sherman, Hiran R. Kline, and Herbert S. Hockin.

All those adjudged guilty were found guilty on all the counts as charged in the indictments.

By its verdict the jury sustained the charges that the McNamara brothers, now in prison in California, were aided in the nation-wide dynamite plots by almost all the executive officials of the Ironworkers Union, and that they knowingly carried on the conspiracy for years by causing explosives to be transported on passenger trains.

An almost tragic scene took place in the court room in the few minutes following the end of the trial.

As U. S. Marshal Edward Schmidt ordered the prisoners one by one to step before the court the wives of a score of the men in the rear of the room leaned pitifully over the railings, calling for their husbands.

Possible punishment vary from any minimum to a maximum of thirty-nine and one-half years in the discretion of the court.

While the cumulated possible punishments are 39 1-2 years, the court intimated in the course of the trial he would impose sentences in accordance with the degree of guilt.

After receiving their sentences the prisoners are to be taken to a federal prison, probably at Leavenworth, Kas. A special train probably will be used.

Senator Kern and other attorneys for the defence already have stated that appeals in behalf of the convicted labor union men will be taken to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

COSTLY FIRE IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—Fire which broke out early Saturday afternoon did damage estimated at $100,000 to the roofing mill and stock of the Standard Paint Co. of Canada. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained, as it was first seen in the centre of the roofing mill on the ground floor away from fire or furnaces of any sort.

BIG STRIKE OF GARMENT WORKERS

Want Eight Hour Day, Increased Wages and Abolition of Child Labor---Strike May Extend to Ladies' Garment Workers

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Dec. 30.—Preparations began before daybreak for the proposed strike of one hundred and twenty-five thousand garment workers in four thousand factories in New York and neighborhood, as ordered by the Union last night. Forty thousand of the strikers are women, and the strike at present is confined to makers of men's and boys' clothing, but may extend to the ladies' garment workers, involving seventy thousand more workers.

An eight hour day; twenty per cent wage increase; a minimum weekly wage of ten dollars for girls and sixteen dollars for men, and the abolition of child labor and work in the tenements are the strikers' demands.

New York, N.Y., Dec. 30.—(Later) —The strike of one hundred and twenty-five thousand men and women garment workers became effective this morning.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—At its meeting yesterday, the executive of the United Men's Garment Workers of America ordered one hundred and fifty thousand men, women and children to go on strike to-day. Action to this effect was authorized by a big majority in a recent vote of the workers.

This morning thousands did not appear at their shops and if the order is fully obeyed it is expected that four thousand New York shops will ultimately be affected.

Crowds of workers thronged the streets outside the building where the meeting was held yesterday afternoon and cheered when the strike decision was read to them. Hundreds of persons were prevented by the police from parading through the east side to show their approval of the order.

After the local committee met the national executive committee gave its endorsement and voted to place T. A. Rickert of Chicago, chairman, at the head of the strike. Other national committeemen present included Victor Altman, Buffalo; Meyer Schwartz, Cincinnati; Abraham Gordon, Baltimore; Frank Doyle, Syracuse, and John Bush, Canada.

No announcement was made whether the presence of practically all of the national committee was an indication that the strike would be extended to other cities.

The abolition of child labor is asked. Other demands are a 20 per cent. increase, with a minimum wage scale of $10 a week for women and $16 for men; overtime work to be paid for at "time-and-a-half" rate, and holiday overtime at double rates; and clean and sanitary workshops.

Strike leaders, discussing the demand for better wages, said that men have been receiving as low as $8 a week and women less.

PETITIONERS CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL LIBEL

Medical Health Officers Department at Guelph Was Included by Legal Error.

GUELPH, Dec. 30.—Dr. H. O. Howitt, medical health officer of Guelph, has taken action for criminal libel against the twenty-two petitioners who signed their names to the charges against him recently presented to the City Council. It now proves that there was no intention of making charges against Dr. Howitt, but that his office was included in the petition through a legal error.

W. H. Robinson, who takes upon himself the responsibility of the whole affair, has made the following statements to the newspapers of this city, and is self-explanatory: "I wish to state that the reference to the medical health officer in the petition to the council in the matter of the office of the sanitary inspector, was an inadvertence in the office of my solicitor. There wasn't any intention of referring to Dr. H. O. Howitt, and my solicitors have written him a letter of apology, and that I have nothing but the greatest of praise for his public services. I wish further to state in the interest of those whose names are on the requisition asking for an investigation, that I, W. H. Robinson, will assume all financial responsibility, and that they will not be put to one cent of expense. Yours respectfully, W. H. Robinson."

Three of the petitioners have expressed a desire to have their names struck off, as they were not under the impression that they were making any charges, but merely asking for an investigation. The case will likely be heard before Police Magistrate Saunders on Tuesday.

A meeting of the police commissioners was held Saturday. They discussed the charges that had been made before the City Council on Thursday night, wherein the chief of police was charged with certain offences. They were strongly of the opinion that any charges should be presented to the commission, when they would be only too glad to go fully into them. If the citizens were not satisfied with this, they could appeal to a higher authority and have the whole matter thoroughly investigated.

BRIDEGROOM IS UNDER ARREST

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 30.—Just when Harry Cole had completed arrangements to take his fifteen-year-old bride of nine days to the home of his parents in Canada, the law stepped in, and the bridegroom is to-day the occupant of a cell at police headquarters. Daniel Benjamin, brother of the bride, had Cole arrested on an abduction charge. Cole is 23.

The child-wife told the police she would stick by her husband.

Captain and Crew Saved

ABERDEEN, Wash., Dec. 30.—The four-masted British steamer Torrisdale went aground near Aberdeen Saturday in a terrific storm which swept the Pacific coast. Her captain and crew of thirty men were taken off by the life savers. The vessel was of steel construction and hails from Glasgow. She probably will be a total loss.

It takes a sharp man to make a dull one.

CHAMBERLAIN EXPLAINS.

Tariff Reformer Interprets Bonar Law's Ashton Speech.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—(C.A.P. Cable.) —Austin Chamberlain, giving the exact interpretation to be placed upon the Bonar Law Ashton speech, says: "What the Unionist leaders seek from the people is power to arrange a reciprocal preference with the overseas dominions, but exactly what the amount or character of that preference should be can only be settled when the British Government is capable of concluding such an arrangement. All parties must retain their autonomous rights. The Unionists party has no more pretensions to fix colonial duties than they have to fix ours. We believe commercial union would be to mutual advantage, and I don't doubt a satisfactory agreement could be come to as soon as our people have invested our Government with the necessary powers.

SECOND VICTIM OF TRAGEDY

Father Who Exploded Dynamite is Dead.

Saloonkeeper Who Sold Liquor to be Arrested.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 30.—Lying in a hospital hovering on the very verge of the valley of death, John Williams, the Tuscarora Indian, whose attempt to shoot his wife on the reservation near here Friday, resulted in the death of his 16-year-old son, Alexander, is expected to die before night. Should he live he will be tried for the murder of his son.

From the home of his uncle, David Williams, on the reserve, the funeral of the victim of his father's drunken rage, took place yesterday morning. Six young braves acted as bearers. The funeral was a Christian one, the Williams' family having foresworn the faith of their pagan forefathers.

Coroner Walter A. Scott declared last night that he would cause the arrest of the saloonkeeper who illegally supplied the Indian with whisky, having learned his identity yesterday.

Second Victim of Tragedy.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 30.—John Williams, the Tuscarora Indian [illegible] to shoot his wife on the reservation near here Friday, resulting in the death of his 16-year-old son, Alexander, died last night in the hospital.

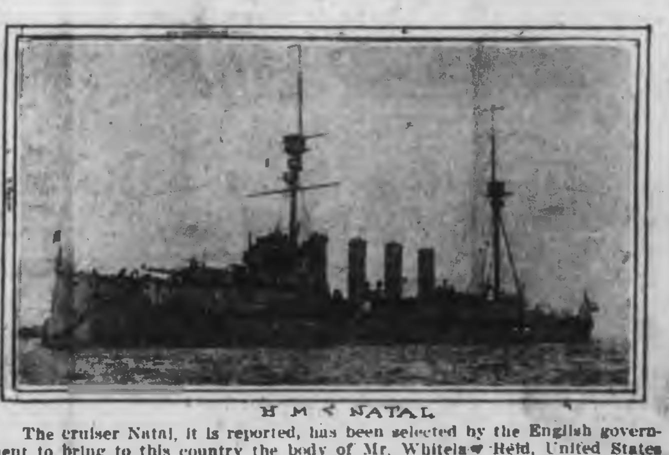
FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLAR FIRE

In Warehouse of Imperial Oil Company

Canadian Press Despatch

Winnipeg, Dec. 30.—Fire started at three o'clock this morning in a warehouse of the Imperial Oil Co., Logan Ave., supposedly by a defective wiring. By ten o'clock the blaze was under control, and confined to the building. The loss is fifty thousand dollars.

THE BRITISH CRUISER NATAL SELECTED TO CONVEY BODY OF MR. REID TO AMERICA



H. M. S. NATAL.

The cruiser Natal, it is reported, has been selected by the English government to bring to this country the body of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, United States Ambassador to England, who died at his home in London. A military escort will be provided to accompany the coffin from Dorchester House to Victoria Station, and it will then be placed on board a special train for Portsmouth.

The United States government has officially intimated its acceptance of the offer made to it by the British government of a British war ship to convey the body of Mr. Reid from England to the United States.

Two American battle ships will meet the British cruiser Natal about one thousand miles from land and will escort the funeral ship to New York.

Two of the big ships of the Atlantic fleet now at New York will be chosen. They will steam eastward until the Natal is sighted and upon meeting will fire the customary salute of nineteen guns for the dead Ambassador.

RESCUED SAILORS TELL HARROWING TALES OF SEA

Captain and Seaman, the Sole Survivors of Danish Steamer —Some Lost Their Reason and Others Died of Exposure.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The havoc wrought by the Christmas gale grows blacker daily. Crews of battered ships are crawling back to port to relate terrible experiences. Two men were picked up in a small open boat fifteen miles southwest of the Lizard. The captain and a seaman of the 2,200 ton Danish steamer Volmer are the sole survivors of seventeen of a crew. The two men spent three days and nights adrift in a boat, and tell terrible tales of the fate of their comrades. The captain, when he found the Volmer doomed, ordered out one of the lifeboats. It was quickly smashed, and eight of the occupants were drowned. The donkeyman became demented and jumped overboard, shouting he couldn't stand it any longer. The captain ordered the second life boat to be launched. Seven boarded her, leaving the captain on the ship. The boat was quickly capsized, whereupon the captain sprang overboard, helped to right the craft, and all scrambled into her.

The steamer shortly afterwards foundered. Then began an awful ordeal. The first engineer died and his body was cast overboard. Then the chief officer lost his reason, and tried to strangle the captain and throw him overboard. They lashed the demented man down. He died during the night. As the result of exposure others died on Boxing Day, and finally only the captain and one sailor remained. They threw the bodies of their comrades overboard. A little food was found in one of the boat's tanks, but most of it was washed out of their hands. The worst trial of all was thirst. When the rain fell they put out their hands to catch it and moistened their parched lips. Nearly the whole time they were almost shoulder high in water. Several steamers passed, but the two men lacked strength to hail them. On Saturday they abandoned hope, but presently they saw a steam trawler making for them, and they were rescued by means of ropes.

SUFFRAGETTES AT THEIR GOAL

Women Walked 174 Miles to Deliver Message.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 30.—Tired and footsore, but still enthusiastic and glorying in the fact that they reached their destination two days ahead of schedule, the little band of "suffragette pilgrims," who walked 174 miles from New York to present a message to Governor-Elect Sulzer advocating votes for women, arrived in Albany shortly after four o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The 174 miles, which "Gen." Rosalie Jones said was the record shown by the official registers, although railroad maps show some 25 miles less, was covered in twelve days of walking, an average of fourteen and a half miles a day.

Of the six "pilgrims" who started from New York on the morning of Dec. 16, five—"Gen." Jones "Surgeon" Livina Dock, "Col." Ida Graft, "Corporal" M. N. Stiles and "Private" Sibyl Wilbur — completed the long hike. Mrs. Inez Craven, who was one of the sextette to make the start, dropped out en route.

The "message," the contents of which will not be known until Governor-Elect Sulzer reads it, will be placed in his hands by "Gen." Jones, "at his convenience as soon after his arrival as possible," the "general" said.

WOMAM HEARD SCREAM

New Evidence For Prosecution in Love Trial.

FLESHERTON, Dec. 30.—Sensational facts will be brought out at preliminary trial of Henry Love, the alleged wife murderer at Ceylon this afternoon, according to Inspector Reburn who declines to disclose the nature of his new evidence.

A woman has been found who heard a scream in the Love house at about 10 o'clock on the night the murder must have been committed. Much importance is attached by the crown to this testimony.

It is learned that another woman neighbor of the Love's, will testify that she saw Love early on the morning after Mrs. Love disappeared, and his actions were so strange that she spoke to her husband about it.

The efforts of the police to find a motive for the crime have been entirely in vain, the officers have made searching enquiries during the past couple of weeks in every direction.

REJECTED LOVER KILLS WAITRESS

Girl Refused to go With Deaf Mute.

BUFFALO, Dec. 30.—Before a crowd of diners in a Niagara street lunch-room, John Valiquette, 42 years old, a deaf mute, Saturday night stabbed to death Julie Goodie, 21 years old, a waitress. Valiquette came from Springville, Erie County, to marry Miss Goodie on Saturday. When he called at the restaurant she refused to go with him. Valiquette drew a knife and stabbed her three times in the breast. He made no effort to escape. The girl died half an hour later.

PROLOGUE.

It was in the woods that the girl of the Limberlost found her education, her love, her happiness and other good things; so, rightly, the air of the trees is in this story of her life. Here is a tale for lovers of the woods and for others who like a simple story well told by one who knows the forest, can tell about "home folks" and can find the interest in everyday lives. Through these pages flutter the brilliant butterfly of tangled romance, the more sober butterfly, no less beautiful, of noble, quiet lives, well lived, and the gray moth of sorrow borne needlessly for many years. And if you listen closely you may hear the buzz of the little, busy existence of Billy, a youngster worth your knowing.

CHAPTER I.

Wherein Elnora Goes to High School.

"ELNORA COMSTOCK, have you lost your senses?" demanded the angry voice of Katharine Comstock as she glared at her daughter.

"Why, mother?" faltered the girl.

"Don't you 'why mother' me!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You know very well what I mean. You've given me no peace until you've had your way about this going to school business. I've fixed you good enough, and you're ready to start. But no child of mine walks the streets of Onabasha looking like a play actress woman. You wet your hair and comb it down modest and decent and then be off or you'll have no time to find where you belong."

Elnora gave one despairing glance at the white face, framed in a most becoming riot of reddish brown hair, which she saw in the little kitchen mirror. Then she untied the narrow black ribbon, wet the comb and plastered the waving curls close to her head, bound them fast, pinned on the skimpy black hat and started for the back door.

Mrs. Comstock watched the girl down the long walk to the gate and out of sight on the road in the bright sunshine of the first Monday of September.

"I bet a dollar she gets enough of it by night!" Mrs. Comstock said positively.

Elnora walked by instinct, for her eyes were blinded with tears. She left the road where it turned south at the corner of the Limberlost, climbed a snake fence and entered a path worn by her own feet. Dodging under willow and scrub oak branches, she at last came to the faint outline of an old trail made in the days when the precious timber of the swamp was guarded by armed men. This path she followed until she reached a thick clump of bushes. From the debris in the end of a hollow log she took a key that unlocked the padlock of a large weather beaten old box, inside of which lay several books, a butterfly apparatus and an old cracked mirror. The walls were lined thickly with gaudy butterflies, dragon flies and moths. She set up the mirror, and, once more pulling the ribbon from her hair, she shook the bright mass over her shoulders, tossing it dry in the sunshine. Then she straightened it, bound it loosely and replaced her hat. She tugged vainly at the low brown calico collar and gazed despairingly at the generous length of the narrow skirt. She lifted it as she would have liked it to be cut if possible. That disclosed the heavy leather high shoes, at sight of which she looked positively ill and hastily dropped the skirt. Locking the case again, she hid the key and hurried down the trail.

She followed it around the north end of the swamp and then struck into a footpath crossing a farm in the direction of the spires of the city to the northeast. Again she climbed a fence and was on the open road. For an instant she leaned against the fence, staring before her, then turned and looked back. Behind her lay the land on which she had been born to drudgery and a mother who made no pretense of loving her. Before her lay the city, through whose schools she hoped to find means of escape and the way to reach the things for which she cared. When she thought of how she looked she leaned more heavily against the fence and groaned. When she thought of turning back and wearing such clothing in ignorance all the days of her life she set her teeth firmly and went hastily toward Onabasha.

She approached the great stone high school building, entered bravely and inquired her way to the office of the superintendent. There she learned that she should have come the week before and arranged for her classes.

"I finished last spring at Brushwood school, district No. 9," said Elnora. "I have been studying all summer. I am quite sure I can do the first year work if I have a few days to get started."

"Of course, of course," assented the superintendent. "Almost invariably country pupils do good work. You may enter first year, and if you don't fit we will find it out speedily. Your teachers will tell you the list of books you must have, and if you will come with me I will show you the way to the auditorium. It is now time for opening exercises. Take any seat you find vacant." He was gone.

Elnora stood before the entrance and stared into the largest room she ever had seen. The floor sloped down to a yawning stage, on which a band of musicians, grouped around a grand piano, were [illegible]. Every one else was seated, but no one paid any attention to the white faced girl stumbling half blindly down the aisle next the farthest wall. So she went on to the very end facing the stage. No one moved, and she could not summon courage to crowd past others to several empty seats she saw. At the end of the aisle she paused in desperation as she stared back at the whole forest of faces, most of which were now turned upon her.

In one burning flash came the full realization of her scanty dress, her pitiful little hat and ribbon, her big, heavy shoes, her ignorance of where to go or what to do, and from a sickening wave which crept over her she felt she was going to become very ill. Then out of the mass she saw a pair of big brown boy eyes three seats from her, and there was a message in them. Without moving his body he reached forward and with a pencil touched the back of the seat before him. Instantly Elnora took another step, which brought her to a row of vacant front seats.

She heard the giggle behind her. The knowledge that she wore the only hat in the room burned her. Every matter of moment and some of none at all cut and stung. She had no books. Where should she go when this was over? What would she give to be on the trail going home!

Before she realized what was coming every one had risen and the room was emptying rapidly. Elnora hurried after the nearest girl and in the press at the door touched her sleeve timidly.

"Will you please tell me where the freshmen go?" she asked huskily.

The girl gave her one surprised glance and drew away.

"Same place as the fresh women," she answered, and those nearest her laughed.

Elnora stopped praying suddenly, and the color swept into her face. "I'll wager you are the first person I meet when I find it," she said and stopped short. "Not that! Oh, I must not do that!" she thought in dismay. "Make an enemy the first thing I do—oh, not that!"

She followed with her eyes as the young people separated in the hall, some climbing stairs, some disappearing down side halls, some entering doors near by. She saw the girl overtake the brown eyed boy and speak to him, and he glanced back at Elnora, and now there was a scowl on his face. Then she stood alone in the hall.

Presently a door opened and a young woman came out and entered another room. Elnora waited until she returned and hurried to her. "Would you tell me where the freshmen are?" she panted.

"Straight down the hall, three doors to your left," was the answer as the girl passed.

"One minute, please—oh, please!" begged Elnora. "Do I knock or just open the door?"

"Go in and take a seat," replied the teacher.

"What if there aren't any seats?" gasped Elnora.

"Classrooms are never half filled. There will be plenty," was the answer.

Elnora removed her hat. There was no place to put it, so she carried it in her hand. She looked infinitely better without it. After several efforts she at last opened the door and, stepping inside, faced a smaller and more concentrated battery of eyes.

"Be seated," said the professor in charge of the class, and then, because he saw Elnora was desperately embarrassed, he proceeded to lend her a book and to ask her if she had studied algebra. She said she had a little, but not the same book they were using. He asked her if she felt that she could do the work they were beginning, and she said she did.

That was how it happened that three minutes after entering the room she was compelled to take her place at the blackboard beside the girl of the hall, whose flushed face and angry eyes avoided meeting Elnora's. Being compelled to concentrate on her proposition, she forgot herself. When the professor asked that all pupils sign their work she firmly wrote "Elnora Comstock" under her demonstration. Then she took her seat and waited with white lips and trembling limbs as one after another the professor called the names on the board, while their owners arose and explained their propositions or flunked if they had not found a correct solution. She was so eager to catch their forms of expression and prepare herself for her recitation that she never took her eyes from the work on the board until clearly and distinctly "Elnora Cornstock" called the professor.

The dazed girl stared at the board. One tiny curl added to the top of the first curve of the "m" in her name had transformed it from a good old English patronymic that any girl might bear proudly to Cornstock. Elnora stared speechless. When and how did it happen? She could feel the wave of smothered laughter in the air around her. A rush of anger turned her face scarlet and her soul sick. A hot answer was on her lips. The voice of the professor addressed her straightly.

"This proposition seems to be beautifully demonstrated, Miss Cornstalk," he said. "Surely you can tell us how you did it."

That word of praise saved her. She was tall, straight and handsome as she arose.

There is a strong tendency just now to the soft effects in French gray, pink and blue. A new design in this artistic combination has alternating half inch strips of softest gray and white, topped with a very deep border showing graceful baskets of brownish gold filled with pink and gold flowers and suspended from large bowknots of blue, simulating narrow blue ribbon. The blending admits of plain blue or soft French pink in decorations and suggests lovely color schemes with either.

A Venomous Snake.

The only sure way to tell a venomous snake is to kill the reptile, open its mouth with a stick and look for the hollow, curved fangs. When not in use they are compressed against the roof of the mouth, beneath the reptile's eyes. They are hinged, as you can see if you pull them forward with a pencil. The venom is contained in a sack hidden beneath the skin at the base of each fang.

A Bedouin marriage does not take much time. The bridegroom kills a sheep and spills the blood on the sand of his father-in-law's threshold, and the wedding is over.

Antelopes Choose the Open.

The antelope lives always in open country, unlike members of the deer family, which invariably prefer a thick, dense forest. They cannot be driven into timber cover or thickets of brush, but will literally turn about and run over a pursuer if necessary rather than be forced into cover.

READING THE FUTURE.

Foresight or Good Guessing In a Parisian Robbery Case.

One day in October, 1883, Lady A. living in Rue du Bel-Respiro, Paris found that she had been robbed of a sum of 3,500 francs. She notified the commissary of police on Rue Berryer who instituted a search and questioned the servants, but discovered nothing.

Lady A., when enumerating her servants, begged the commissary to exclude from his suspicions her second valet de chambre, a youth of nineteen, very good looking, very respectful and very well qualified for his duties, who had been nicknamed "le Petit," not on account of his stature, for he was rather tall, but from a feeling of delicate, protecting familiarity which his good qualities had won for him.

Meanwhile among the friends of Lady A. there had been a good deal of talk about a certain Demoiselle E., who, they said, could see the most surprising things in a bowl of coffee grounds. M. L. d'Ervieux had the curiosity to accompany his governess to the house of this person and was quite surprised to hear her describe exactly each piece of furniture in Lady A.'s apartment, pass in review her seven servants and say that, though she could not name the thief, he would be guillotined within two years.

Some weeks later "le Petit" left the service of his mistress without giving any reason, and two years later he mounted the scaffold. This servant, so highly esteemed, was none other than Marchandon, the assassin. — London Notes and Queries.

The Crested Rat.

The crested rat of East Africa is remarkable, first, because of the great length of the black and white hairs down the ridge of the back, which are rendered the more conspicuous because the hairs along the sides of the body are so short and so differently colored, being brownish gray and looking for all the world as if some one had taken a pair of scissors and maliciously shorn off the decorative hair, leaving only a dull underfur; secondly, it is remarkable because the skull has a roofing of bones exactly resembling that of some turtles, while, furthermore, this roof has a granulated appearance recalling that presented by the skulls of certain fishes. In its habits it appears to be arboreal, while from the structure of its teeth it would appear to be at least partly insectivorous.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLE"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

OUR CROWDING THE INSANE ASYLUMS

A Total of 1,140 Cases Admitted Last Year. Only 64 Cases Traced To Alcoholism.

The sweeping assertion made by the prohibitionists that "liquor fills the insane asylums" is effectually disposed of by the 1912 report of the Inspectors for the Hospitals for the Insane of the Province of Ontario.

This report shows that of a total of 1,140 cases admitted during the year 1911, only 64 cases were due to alcoholism. This certainly is an insignificant proportion. Of these 64 cases, 11 were women, and a total of 25 of the 64 were cases of inherited predisposition.

Other factors having no relation whatever to liquor are far more responsible for the great majority of cases. Thus, adverse conditions, such as loss of friends, business troubles, mental strain, worry and overwork were the causes of [illegible] cases of insanity admitted into the Ontario asylums last year. Religious excitement, love affairs (including seduction), fright and nervous shock caused 27 more cases. Accidents or injuries caused 15, senility 77, abuse of drugs 10, privation and overwork 7, and various diseases and fevers caused several hundred more ascertained cases. Of the 1,140 admissions during last year, 580 were the cases of women.

In view of these official facts and the reports of previous years all state facts very much the same—it is remarkable that the prohibitionists should continue making such preposterous assertions, having no foundation whatever in fact. Perhaps it is because of such gross exaggerations as this that they have so rapidly lost influence with well-informed people.

Of the small number of 64 cases of alcoholism admitted into Ontario asylums last year, the liquor predisposing practically all of them was whiskey. It is an unquestionable fact that wherever local option or prohibition is introduced the widespread and secret use of whiskey begins. This result comes from the driving out of beer which is too cumbrous to be shipped or concealed successfully and which cannot be vended when warm. In place of beer which is a beverage of only three to four per cent. alcohol, whiskey, which is a fifty per cent. hard intoxicant, is substituted, and is retailed by the bottle or glass in "blind pigs" or by "pocket peddlers" or by the "suit-case brigade."

Of the 1,140 cases admitted into the Ontario insane asylums last year, the vast proportion came from rural counties, many of which are largely under local option.

Carleton County is one of these; it contributed 36 cases of insanity last year. Hastings County is another; 24 cases last year came from there. In the Nipissing district, non-license laws largely prevail, yet 29 cases came last year from that section. It is in this district that in less than three years the Provincial Police have seized 23,000 bottles of whiskey, and no one knows how many more bottles escaped detection. From Middlesex County, 3 of the 22 municipalities of which are under local option, [illegible] of the insane last year came. Simcoe County contributed 27 cases, yet this county is greatly local option, including such places as Orillia and Midland. Five of the eleven municipalities in Wentworth County are local option; nevertheless last year this county sent 91 insane to the asylums. These are some typical examples. Of the entire number of 1,140 admissions, only 388 came from York County with its large and rapidly increasing population. 37

THE STRANGE MANLIKE MANATEE

These Queer Creatures Are Linked With the Mermaid Myth.

In semitropical waters of America there disports a member of that family of aquatic mammals to which has been ascribed the mermaid myth. Related to the dugong and the now extinct rhytina, we still have the manatee. This name is preferred by some to manati, under the impression that the latter is the plural of the Latin "manatus" (furnished with hands), though the name is probably of Mandingo origin.

The manatee is a herbivorous mammal inhabiting the shallows about the coasts of Florida, Mexico, central America and the West Indies. It is not known to attempt the open sea and does not possess the ability to come ashore. This animal is somewhat whalelike in shape, with a horizontal tail fin. It is from eight to twelve feet in length, the body being scantily covered with hair. The only limbs are the fore flippers, low on the side of the body. This flipper has no fingers. It does possess, though, three flat nails and has a free motion in all directions from the shoulder. The elbow and wrist approximate the human anatomy in movement. With this crude resemblance to an arm the manatee has been said to carry its young. While the statement is not authentic, it is quite believable, its possibility being vouched for by all observers of the arm in motion.

The head of the manatee is divided from the body by a slight indication of neck. The upper lip is extraordinarily flexible—so much so that each side can protrude independently of the other, and, thus separated into two lobes, the upper lip can perform the complete operation of grasping food and conveying it into the mouth. In each jaw are twenty pairs of two ridged teeth. With this formidable equipment the manatee is not, however, ferocious, but browses tranquilly on the water plants of its habitat. In some views the head is surprisingly manlike, though far from beautiful, and no specimen has ever sat on the rocks and combed its golden hair.—Harper's.

ELECTION STRATEGY.

Incident of an Old Time English Parliamentary Contest.

In the days before the institution of the secret ballot, when the candidate with the longest purse usually won an election, a former Lord Dundonald, who refused to give bribes, contested Honiton, but was beaten by an opponent who paid his electors at the rate of £5 a vote.

Then the unsuccessful candidate conceived this brilliant plan, says the writer of a history of the Dundonald family. He announced to his friends that he was [illegible] determined to win the seat next time without bribery. Then he sent the town crier round the town to announce that all who had voted for him in this first election might repair to his agent, from whom they would receive £10.

As comparatively few people had voted for him, this was not a very expensive process. And at the next election Lord Dundonald was elected by an enormous majority. After the triumph several people came to him and delicately suggested that some reward was due to such loyalty.

"Not a farthing," was the reply.

"But, my lord, you gave £10 a head to the minority at the last election, and the majority have been counting on something handsome on this occasion."

"Perhaps so," said the clever candidate. "My former gift was for their disinterested conduct in not taking my opponent's bribe of £5. For me to pay them now would be to violate my own principles."—Pearson's Weekly.

TENNIS IS ANCIENT.

The Game Had Its Origin in the Old Days of Knighthood.

By many people tennis is thought to be an essentially modern game, but in reality it is probably one of the most ancient ball games and was a sport long before cricket was dreamed of. Though undoubtedly not existing during the Arthurian period, tennis, or, as it was called, "tenez," is mentioned in the Arthurian legends, written in 1500, and the knights of the round table were pictured as engaged in the sport when the weather was too hot for tourneys or jousts.

From a simple beginning and through many centuries, the intricacy of the game's rules have been developed, writes a contributor to the London Times. Its present name seems to be a corruption for the term "tenez," which the server used in the same way "ready" is called out now. In the beginning the name was jeu de paume, taken from the fact that the ball was struck with the hands instead of with a racket. Later the hand was incased in a glove, and still later the glove was covered with strings running criss cross, from which condition there was but a short step to the short handled racket.

In feudal times the courts were merely open grass plots, oftentimes the lawn of a castle, and not till late in the seventeenth century was the court inclosed, when walls were built as backstops. Now most of the modern English and French courts are entirely inclosed with four walls and a roof.

Her Conscience Clear.

"Well," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "it looks as if my son had found his place at last. He has become a proctor in admiralty."

After she had studied the matter for a moment Mrs. Gottalotte put an arm around her friend and consolingly said:

"Try to bear it the best you can. You'll always have the satisfaction of knowing you done the best you could for him anyhow." — Chicago Record Herald.

His Advice Worked.

"And don't forget to climb, boy," said the later day Polonius as he parted from his college bound son; "climb and keep a-climbin'."

"I won't forget, dad," said the boy. "Goodby."

He didn't forget.

Three days later he climbed over the prostrate forms of twenty-seven disabled sophomores and, climbing the greased pole to the hated upper class emblem, yanked it from its fastenings, thereby winning a place in the esteem of his fellow students that a score of scholarships couldn't equal.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dead as a Doornail.

"As dead as a doornail" at first seems utterly senseless, but becomes [illegible] when we remember that knockers were once universally used. Beneath the knocker, in order to prevent disfiguring the door, a large nail or bolt was driven. An impatient caller, waiting for the door to be opened, would frequently use the knocker with great force, and the irresponsiveness of the nail gave rise to this expression.

Inconsistency.

"What is inconsistency?" asked the curious one.

"Well," responded the wise one, "it is that spirit which moves a woman whose sleeves stop at the elbow to scold her husband because he hasn't any cuffs on."—Exchange.

This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. AMERICAN IMMIGRATION

The immigration from the United States into Canada will total about 200,000 for the fiscal year of 1911-12. That will be a great record, but it will not be a circumstance to what the influx will be five or ten years from now. The immigration is almost entirely in the West, where the cheap lands of Canada prove a most enticing bait for the well-to-do-American farmer. It is not much wonder that Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas, are working hard to prevent an exodus of their people to the Canadian land.

There is nothing that can stop the progress of Canada in this respect for a while. Not until the land has been taken up, and the price average brought about to a par with land of equal quality on the other side will the movement cease. The productive value of the Canadian land is so high, the weather conditions so much more favorable than in the drier country of the south, that Canadian western land will always command a high price.

There is little reason to think that the influx of so many Americans will have any great influence on the growth of Canadian sentiment on the prairie. In the reciprocity fight, an appeal for the wiping out of the tariff barrier between Canada and the United States was used with good effect. The vote for reciprocity was solid in some constituences largely peopled by American farmers. But they recognize that conditions in Canada are superior to conditions across the border, and are quite content to settle down. Not long ago President Woodrow Wilson said that in Canada we were far ahead of the United States in the way we regulated our railroads, in our respect for law and authority, in our economic machinery. He is a man broad enough to know what is right and wrong, and where weakness and strength lie in national life and characteristics. That the American farmers are of the same opinion, as soon as they have become acclimatised, is readily seen by their efforts to induce their friends to move into Canada. This country is now getting even for the long years during which we lost the flower of our youth to the call of the American eagle.

IMPROVING OUR TRANSPORTATION

The last spike in the section of the National Transcontinental railway between Winnipeg and Cochrane will be driven within a few days. It will be only a few days after that when the first train of grain will arrive in Toronto over the Grand Trunk from the new line. For the rest of the winter the hauling of the wheat eastward will proceed over the new line, an alternative being thus provided for the Canadian Pacific railway lines. Thus the congestion which occurred last year, especially when the navigation season closed, will not be repeated this winter.

That the Canadian transportation lines should have made such extraordinary preparations to handle this year's Western crop without any shortage of cars, or congestion of traffic, is largely due to the intimation given them by the Borden Government that Canada would not stand for any hampering of its commerce. They were told that they must toe the mark in respect of their arrangements to avoid congestion. The great success of the crop movement up to the close of navigation was due to the additional facilities and rolling stock provided. It was a triumph for Canadianism. The Laurier Government would have carried reciprocity, which would have given the United States Railways, United States milling interests, United States carriers, the cream of our export trade. The Laurier Government complained that the present inadequacy of Canadian transportation facilities meant that the United States must get a large part of our surplus traffic, as this country could not wait for the Canadian railways. It could not have its progress retarded because they could not keep up in the procession. Therefore the United States proposed to open its doors to our goods, to kindly do our transporting, and thus relieve us of all anxiety as to how we could carry on our commercial traffic. But the Borden Government has vindicated the policy of rugged Canadianism. It has shown that when a Government is concerned to get for its people an efficient transportation service, that service can be obtained. Its success has convicted the Laurier Government of downright apathy and stupidity in relation to this most important affair. In opposing the Borden Government naval proposals, the Liberals are very fond of asserting that Canadians are capable of doing anything themselves, that we should not deny faith to the Canadian people, but in the reciprocity business they proposed to make Canada an adjunct of the United States, as if it was not able to stand alone.

THE ETHICS OF RICHES

Harry Lauder, the famous comedian, has made the announcement that he will retire from the stage for all time, on Christmas Day, 1914. Beginning next month he proposes to make an entire tour of the world and by the time he finishes he expects to have a fortune of $600.000 stowed away. To achieve fame on the stage nowadays means a fortune. The salaries received by such stars as old Sarah Bernhardt, by the great opera singers, and others of artistic note, amount annually to figures more than the average man or woman would earn in a quarter of a century. They have to spend a lot of it, of course, but if they are at all thrifty, like Harry Lauder, true to his Scotch instinct seems to have been, they all can retire with fortunes. But consideration of the special fortune of these people should not arouse envy, nor discontent in the minds of the mass of humanity. For everyone who makes a success, there are five hundred who fail, and who sink into nothingness after a life-time of trying. The older a person gets, the more he or she studies the great movements of affairs and of people learns the facts of the lives of those whom the world calls great, the more he or she is impressed by the fact that while they have one quality or a set of qualities to make them "great," they fail miserably in others in ranging up to the standard of honest, well-meaning humanity. It is a laudible ambition to be a prominent figure in the eye of the world, but the price is often paid for it, in stains on the escutcheon of character, is too high. It has often been remarked that riches are a comparative value. A contented mind is more to be prized than great riches, for it is not often that the two are found in company. It is perhaps one of the most encouraging things of modern life that to-day there is a pronounced tendency toward universal condemnation of dirty money. Some years ago, the millionaire was admired and flattered as a man of great worth. To-day the inevitable query is "Where did he get it? How did he get it?" If a man has inherited a fortune, he is not entitled to credit for its possession. If a man acquires a fortune, through grinding the faces of [illegible], through robbing the strugglers for a living of their [illegible] fights, how can he be regarded by well-thinking people but with contempt? The possession of wealth may be merely the fruit of a savage oppression of others. Is that man, when he leaves his wealth behind him, repaid for his efforts? Not long ago, General Booth, of the Salvation Army, died, his total effects not being worth more than $2,500. Not long ago Justin McCarthy died, his estate not being worth $2,500. These seem very pitiful figures to Canadians who have reaped their thousands and tens of thousands through the great increase in the value of real estate, and the growth of their business. Yet the work these men did will live long after them when the mere seeker after money shall have passed his way, and left his wealth a spoil for others.

A TIMELY ARTICLE

In the Examiner on Saturday there appeared an editorial which the Review is pleased to be able to heartily approve. It is in regard to the lack of interest in public matters by the ratepayers, and citizens generally. The article was suggested by the poor attendance at the Hydro-Electric meeting last week, and the following is an extract:

"We not only let matters like the Hydro-Electric by-law drift, but we show the same callous indifference towards the election of aldermen. Here we are on the eve of polling and there is no more interest taken in the matter of selecting a council by the general body of ratepayers than if they were to be elected by votes in Port Hope and Lindsay. It cannot be called self government when the people do not really select aldermen, when they merely elect a slate of self offered aldermanic candidates, with little or no choice to be exercised.

"The indifference of the people is no doubt intensified by the unseasonable date of holding elections. At the holiday season everything else is crowded out by the festivities connected with, and the interest aroused by, the season. This seems to be an argument for holding the elections further on in the first month of the new year, so that the people, if they so wish, can have a chance for giving better attention to the selection of representatives or the adoption of by-laws that need mature and careful consideration."

THE ONLY REMEDY

To some of those seeking to minimize the evils of intoxication the theory that license reduction will accomplish this result seems on its face plausible and attractive.

But theory and practice are two entirely different things. During the year ending April 30th, 1911, a total of 359 tavern and shop licenses were eliminated from the aggregate number in Ontario. Nevertheless, the number of drunks committed to jail in 1911 was 5,802—an increase of 511 over the number committed in 1910.

1904 there were 2,83[illegible] licenses in Ontario of which 2,516 were tavern licenses. By 1911 the number of licenses had gradually been reduced to 1,532 tavern licenses and 221 shop licenses. Yet the number of convictions for offenses almost doubled in Ontario from 1904 to 1910. In 1904 the convictions totalled 22,817. In 1910 there were 41,401.

This enormous increase cannot be explained away by saying that was in proportion to the growth of population. As a matter of fact, Ontario's population from 1901 to 1911 increased only 1[illegible].58 per cent. In 1901 the total population was 2,182,947, and in 1911 it was 2,523,208—an increase of 340,261.

These are very significant facts. They show that an increase of drunkenness and crime, entirely out of proportion to the growth of population, has accompanied a steady decrease in the number of licenses. During the same period, also, the number of local option communities increased.

It is evident that some other method must be tried to lessen the effect of intoxication. Prohibition does not succeed; in the prohibition State of Maine last year there were 11,946 arrests for intoxication, and these did not include the number in the rural lock-ups.

The only rational remedy seems to be a campaign of popular education supplemented by law to discourage the consumption of hard intoxicating liquors. Such an end will be powerfully furthered by the granting of beer and light wine licenses, and the separation of the spirituous liquors from the beverages containing only a slight proportion of alcohol. There is no reason why a system which has been successfully tried in Europe cannot succeed here.

He Obeyed Orders.

Sir Henry Roscoe tells this of the scientist Faraday and his assistant, Sergeant Anderson: "Anderson was the sole assistant to Faraday and of course was utterly uneducated in scientific matters, but he could obey orders, which is not always a characteristic of an educated man. One day Anderson was told by Faraday to keep stirring a pot containing some chemicals over a fire until he returned, Faraday being in the habit of going upstairs to tea in his rooms and coming down directly afterward to work in the laboratory during the evening. For some reason he was prevented from coming down again and forgot that he had told Anderson to watch the pot. On coming down the next morning he found Anderson still stirring the pot, having been at it the whole night and thus carrying out the order which was given him."

NO EVIDENCE AT OTTAWA

Of Cancellation of the Agreement Making County Liable

According to the Examiner, someone is taking a mean revenge on somebody else in the Buckhorn bridge matter.

Let us see who it is—

1—There is a very strictly drawn document making the County liable to the Laurier Gvernment.

2—There is not one particle of evidence in the Department at Ottawa referring in any way to the cancellation of it.

3—The present Government has no authority or power to cancel the agreement, because Mr. Cochrane says that the land proposed to be given for so doing, already belonged to the Government. Therefore no new agreement for cancellation or revival of the other alleged one could honestly be entertained.

4—No letter, such as alleged, from Mr. Graham, was brought to the Government's notice. It remains a hidden mystery.

5—Therefore the Borden Government is powerless to cancel the old agreement or make a new one.

6—The result can in no wise be of service to the county members, but can plainly be greatly to their injury unless properly understood.

7—If Mr. Graham could furnish Mr. Cochrane with some sort of a voucher for cancellation, but will not, or if the Examiner can, but will not, who is doing the injury to the present county members and to the County Council? Someone for want of a word will not say that word. Is it revenge for September 21st, 1911? If so, it is a mean revenge, and one which the people will remember.

WENT DOWN WITH HIS SHIP.

Tragic End of the Designer of the Ill Fated Titanic.

The story of a brilliant career terminating in abrupt tragedy has been written by S. F. Bullock in his "Life of Thomas Andrews," the designer of the Titanic. After studying at the Royal Academical Institution at Belfast Andrews entered the Harland & Wolff shipyards as apprentice. In 1904, at the age of thirty-one, he was made chief designer. Later he became a managing director.

Andrews sailed on the Titanic, certain, as he wrote to his wife, that the ship would "do the old firm credit." A survivor has told how, after the collision, Andrews busied himself with helping women into the boats and directing the rescue work in other ways. This is the story of his last moments:

One met him bareheaded and carrying a lifebelt on his way to the bridge, perhaps to bid the captain goodby. Later an assistant steward saw him standing alone in the smoking room, his arms folded over his breast and the belt lying on a table near him. The steward asked him, "Aren't you going to have a try for it, Mr. Andrews?"

He never answered or moved. "Just stood like one stunned."

Others saw him a few minutes before the end on the boat deck, our final and grandest sight of him, throwing deck chairs overboard to the unfortunates struggling in the water below.

If the baby is too little to hold plaything, fasten them by a string suspended above him in such a position that they will not get out of his reach.

POWER OF THE SEA.

Fearful Force of Ocean Waves When They Run Wild.

The average inland American who has never seen the ocean has no real idea of the force of its waves. He reads about the storm, of boats being carried away and bulwarks stove. But he does not realize the steam hammer blows that may be struck by mere water.

A recent storm on the British coasts received the official designation of a storm of "extreme force." A picture taken in Hastings harbor shows the concussion with which the waves struck the sea wall, sending the spray apparently higher than the buildings along the street. Blocks of concrete and iron railing were torn from the new parade extension at Caroline place and tossed back into the roadway as if they had been bits of plank. Timber work that had withstood the stress of years was torn apart and carried away. Basements were flooded along all the seaward face of the town.

Such a storm when it sweeps over a ship will sometimes carry away almost everything on deck. Deck houses are often smashed, and the lifeboats are often stove in and ruined.

Various attempts have been made to devise motors to develop power from the force of the waves. The amount of energy wasted through their lack of success is beyond estimate. If the power of the sea could be used it would drive the machinery of an unlimited number of plants.—Chicago Tribune.

REBATE FOR POOL TABLE

Mr. Snelgrove Had One Not in Use For Three Months

At council meeting Saturday night, Mr. Snelgrove applied for a $20 rebate for three months, during which he claimed one pool table was not in use at his barber shop. Mr. Snelgroove's license fee which he agreed to pay was $80 for two tables, $40 each.

Ald. Buller recalled an occasion when the Council had complied with a request for a rebate. He felt ever, that it would be the best plan in dealing with the present request to leave it with the incoming council of 1913. Later he moved that the rebate be granted, providing Mr. Snelgrove takes out a new license Snelgrove takes out a new license this proved satisfactory to the applicant who had previously intimated his intention of taking out another license for 1913.

On motion of Ald. Anderson, the yearly grant of the Council, of $10 towards the Poultry Association, was authorized to be paid.

A communication contained the information that two debentures held by the Protestant Home and the Little Lake cemetery company amounting to $12,000, became due on January 1st. To meet the obligation the City Trust only has $2,000. On motion of Ald. Anderson and Johnston, City Solicitor Hall was authorized to make application to the Legislature to have the debentures renewed, and in the intervening period arrange with the debenture holders until the new debentures are issued.

THE CUP OF LIFE

Those who attend the performance of "The Cup of Life" at the Grand Opera House, next Saturday, Jan. 4th, Matinee and Night, by Blossom Baird and her company, will get not only quality, but quantity for their money. For besides appearing in "The Cup of Life" a most interesting play of Bohemian life, she will present by a way of contrast a one act drama entitled "Nance," depicting scenes on the East Side of New York. In this piece Miss Baird appears as Nance, a Music Hall Singer, rough and uneducated but full of strength and capable of love and self-sacrifice. She is devoted to Bob Hawkins, a race track "crook" whom she tries to wean from his evil ways. A detective learning of these works upon her feelings of jealousy, and gets her to betray Bob, when however, she finds that Bob is true to her, and the detective has tricked her. She turns the tables on him and rescues her lover — though at the sacrifice of her own liberty.

FINE OF $25 WAS IMPOSED

Blacklister Was Found Under Influence of Liquor

Albert Tivey who is on the prohibited list was charged this morning with having been under the influence of liquor on Dec. 28th. He was found guilty and Magistrate Dumble imposed the stiff fine of $25 and costs, or the alternative of thirty days in gaol. Tivey had not enough money, but expected friends to come to his aid.

"You're soaking me pretty hard," he said to the Magistrate, after being fined.

"You should get three months in jail," remarked Chief Thompson.

Tivey was in police court some time ago.

RODIN ON ART

The Master of Sculpture Declares That Portraits Are the Hardest Work.

Auguste Rodin, the master of modern-day sculptors, the genius whose plastic fingers appear to carry with them the breath of life, the worker whose every effort adds one more page to the recorded history of man, is not a personality that needs introduction to any part of the civilized world. There are some who revel in the truth of his work, there are others who idly mock at it, and there are again those who admire respectfully though occasionally incapable of completely comprehending this man who carves music, poetry, and it would seem life itself from mere stone. It is perhaps to this latter class, though all lovers of Rodin will want to possess the book, that an exquisitively illustrated volume—"Art"—just published, incorporating conversations with Rodin collected by Paul Gsell, will particularly appeal. The talks are so charming and so simple that one feels at the end quite familiar with the great sculptor, who, to those loving the true in art, will always be a friend.

He who has gazed at artificial pictures, presentation portraits and busts, wondering all the while about artists who care to claim the creations, will be particularly interested to hear the comments of such an authority as Rodin. "The greatest difficulties," he says, "for the artist who models a bust or who paints a portrait do not come from the work which he executes. They come from the client for whom he works.

"By a strange and fatal law," continues Rodin, "the one who orders his own likeness is the one who always desperately combats the talent of the artist he has chosen. It is very seldom that man sees himself, as he is, and even if he knows himself, he does not wish the artist to represent him as he is. He asks to be represented under the most banal and neutral aspects. He wishes to be an official of worldly marionette. It pleases him to have the function he exercises, the rank he holds in society, completely effact the man that is in him. The magistrate wishes his robe, the general his gold-laced tunic. They care very little whether one can read their characters. This explains the success of so many mediocre painters and sculptors who are satisfied to give the impersonal appearance of their clients; their gold lace and their official attitude. These are the artists who are generally highest in favor because they lend their models a mask of riches and importance. The more bombastic a portrait is, the more it resembles a stiff, pretentious doll, the better the client is satisfied."

"Valasquez," he goes on to say, who portrayed King Philip IV. as a nonentity, though an elegant man, and who unflatteringly reproduced his hanging jaw, nevertheless kept his favor. And the Spanish monarch has acquired from posterity the great glory of having been the protector of genius. But the men of to-day are so made that they fear truth and love a lie. They seem to be displeased to appear in their busts as they are. They all want to have the air of hairdressers. And even the most beautiful women, that is to say, those whose lines have most style, are horrified at their own beauty when a sculptor of talent is its interpreter. They beseech him to make them ugly by giving them an insignificant and doll-like physiognomy."

And ending up on this particular subject, Rodin says, "You speak of a face without expression. There is no such face to an artists. To him every head is interesting. Let a sculptor note the insipidity of a face, let him show us a fool absorbed by his care of worldly parade, and there we have a fine bust. . . . Finally—how shall I put it?—even the most insignificant head is the dwelling-place of life, that magnificent force, and so offers inexhaustable matter for the masterpiece."

London's Pure Water.

So pure was the London water, declared a member at the meeting of the Metropolitan Water Board the other day, that a proposed experiment in purification by lime would be equivalent to "painting the lily or gilding refined gold." Sir Richard Melville Beechcroft, Dr. Beaton, and other members urged that the board should never be satisfied that London water was so good that it could not be made better, and they should continue their researches. By twenty votes to eighteen the suggestion of the experiment (which was to have cost $1,200), was referred back to the committee which proposed it.

The Dardanelles.

The Dardanelles is celebrated in ancient history on account of Xerxes and Alexander having crossed it, the former in 480 B.C. to enter Europe and the latter in 334 B.C. to enter Asia. At the point where Alexander crossed young Leander nightly swam the Hellespont to visit Hero—a feat performed in modern times by Lord Byron.

Attacks on Tea.

Cobbett is not alone among authors in his distaste for tea. Arthur Young soundly rates the agricultural laborers of his time for their indulgence in this luxury. "An object, seemingly, of little account," he writes, "but in reality of infinite importance, is the custom, coming in, of men making tea an article of their food, almost as much as women; laborers losing their time to come and go to the tea table—nay, farmers' servants even demanding tea for their breakfast with the maids! Which has actually been the case in East Kent. If the men come to lose as much of their time at tea as the women and injure their health by so bad a beverage, the poor in general will find themselves far more distressed than ever."—London Chronicle.

Frozen potatoes can be made eatable if they are soaked in water three days before cooking.

YOUNGSTER HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Men Alighting From Street Car Saw Boy Floating Down Stream With Sleigh---Took Half an Hour to Resuscitate Him.

A nine year old boy living at the Children's Shelter, escaped death from drowning on Saturday, by the closest possible margin. While sleigh riding down the hill from the Shelter he went too far out on the ice on the river, which is frozen for a distance of fifteen feet and then ends in deep water. The little fellow not noticing his danger, shoved himself out while lying flat on the sleigh and before he could draw back found himself in the deep water which is very swift at that point.

In some manner the rope on the sleigh became entagled around the boy's neck and in that position he floated down stream, with the sleigh, for quite a distance. Mr. Henry the Superintendent of the Shelter, together with Mr. William Brown, happened to alight from a street car and saw the boy's predicament. They managed to pull him ashore and without a second's delay artificial respiration was applied to the unconscious lad. After a half hour of hard work he began to show signs of returning consciousness. He was taken inside to the Shelter and to-day while still in bed he is almost recovered.

Dr. Amys was called to attend him. Mr. Henry desires to thank the folloiwng who assisted in the work of rescue and resuscitation—Mr. William Brown, Mr. Thomas Mitchell and Mr. John Brumwell.

A NICE COOL BED.

The Surprise a Trio of Laplanders Sprung Upon Nansen.

Sir Henry Lucy tells in the Cornhill Magazine a good story that he had from Nansen, the explorer. It amusingly illustrates the hardy health of the Laplanders.

Part of Nansen's equipment for his trip across Greenland consisted of two sleeping bags made of undressed skins. On the first night of the journey Nansen and his two Norwegian companions got into one of the bags, pulled the mouth tight across their necks, and so slept in the snow with only their heads out.

Before retiring to rest Nansen saw the three Laplanders he had engaged for the expedition cozily tucked into the other sleeping bag. When he awoke in the morning, almost numb with cold, he observed that the bag in which he had tied up the Laplanders was empty and that they were nowhere in sight. He was afraid they had deserted him and, scrambling out of the bag, went in search of them. He found the three men fast asleep behind a hillock of snow that they had scraped together as a protection against the wind.

"Ah, master," they said when asked to explain this extraordinary conduct, "we couldn't sleep in that thing. It was too hot, so we got out and have had a comfortable night here."

Artist's House as Museum.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—The will of the late French battle painter, Edouard Detaille, leaves his residence as a museum of historical costumes. One floor of the house is to be devoted exclusively to uniforms of the French army.

Detaille also bequeathed $40,000 for the reconstruction of the house so as to make it suitable for a museum.

FLOODING A VALLEY

River Which Burst In Tunnel Is Creating Havoc.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 30.—The engineering difficulties in connection with the construction of the Mont d'Or tunnel through the Jura Mountains between Italy and France appear for the present to be insoluble. The stream of water which burst into the tunnel on Dec. 23 and caused hundreds of laborers to flee, has increased in volume ever since, and has caused the River Orbe in the vicinity to swell to a dangerous extent. The whole of the surrounding valley is inundated.

The engineers in charge declared that unless the subterranean stream can be diverted the tunnel works must be abandoned.

Lives Lost In Newport Fire.

NEWPORT, R.I., Dec. 30.—Two lives were lost and 13 buildings damaged here early yesterday in a fire which caused a loss of $200,000. Firemen and policemen, searching through burned dwellings after the fire, discovered the charred bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Heath. Mr. Heath was 70 years of age and an invalid. Appearances indicated that his wife attempted to carry him from their burning home, when both were overcome by smoke.

A BIG GOLD BRICK

The Trap That Jernegan Baited With Salt Sea Water.

SCHEME OF A CLEVER ROGUE.

The Smooth Swindler and His Accomplice Showed How Easily They Could Extract Gold From the Ocean—Fleeced Their Dupes and Then Decamped.

Various inventors have been working for years on the theory that there is plenty of gold in sea water if only some process of extraction could be developed.

Some years ago the Rev. Prescott J. Jernegan was the salt water wizard of the hour. From the day his bubble burst and he left for Europe nobody seems to know what has become of him. Jernegan, who posed as a clergyman, and C. E. Fisher, once a floorwalker in a New York department store and before that a diver, got together in the fall of 1896 and for a whole year carefully considered the problem of extracting gold from salt water. It is true, their whole field of thought compassed the use of salt water as an accessory only, the real material from which the gold was to be extracted being the American people.

Very artistically Jernegan, to whom was left the matter of publicity, permitted some vague rumors to leak out. "A leading clergyman had a marvelous money making device. The world was soon to be stunned by a fact that would make the possessor of the original secret so rich that all the multimillionaires would be paupers in comparison." When they had stirred up public curiosity Jernegan and Fisher went to New England and there set up some mysterious machinery.

On Narragansett bay was an old half dismantled wharf, and at the sea end of this the two erected a cheap frame shanty about 8 by 10 in size, with a square hole cut through the floor and looking directly down into about fifteen feet of water. An electric wire from a small battery was run along the piling of the wharf and attached to a mysterious box, with heavy iron clamps and holes all through to permit of free passage of the water back and forth.

Finally the great secret was divulged. These two men had discovered a way of taking all the gold they wanted from the salt water at a cost so trifling that it was ridiculous to mention it. Two wealthy persons, one a Providence jeweler and the other a New York florist, were approached by Jernegan with what seemed to be such a trustful and childlike proposal that they both embraced it eagerly. It was that, all his apparatus being ready for experiment, they would come to the shanty on the wharf prepared to go through a night's vigil and witness the result, accompanied by any scientific friends they cared to bring along.

The idea, as outlined by Jernegan, was to send a current into a pan of mercury held within the box, the receptacle then being sent to the bottom of the sea and drawn up after several hours, when it would be found that the mercury had absorbed gold from the ocean.

When the night of the experiment came the box was prepared in the shanty, two chemists, friends of the capitalists, bringing their own mercury with them. The box was lowered to the bottom, and then the party of five began their wait. Soon after daylight Jernegan announced that it was time to draw the box up again. This was done, and the whole party eagerly set to work to find out whether any gold had been received. When the chemists announced that gold to the value of $14 was found mixed with the quicksilver all were stunned by the discovery and realized at once the vast possibilities in more extensive operations, the original experiment having been practically made with a toy apparatus.

The story spread like wildfire, and the modest Jernegan was prevailed upon to organise a company. Stock was sold, and after getting possession of thousands of dollars the promoter sailed away to Europe. The success of the great experiment was explained afterward. Fisher, the diver, had gone out from the shore in his diving suit, opened the box and, taking out the mercury that had been brought by the chemists, substituted a vial of his own that had been strongly impregnated with gold.

Both before and since the Jernegan fraud many attempts have been made to extract gold from salt water, some of them fraudulent, some genuine and based on scientific grounds that have from time to time appealed even to deep students. But all so far have failed dismally. Though traces of gold are to be found in salt water, commercial application is practically impossible.—New York Press.

A Constant Sufferer.

"Is your mother a suffragette, Robert?"

"Yep, she's always suffering. If it ain't with her shoes or her corset it's because somebody that owes her an invitation had a party and didn't ask her to it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Root of All Evil.

As a general thing when a man and his wife fall out over money it is a sign that he has it and she wants it, or she has it and he wants it, or neither has it and both want it.—Galveston News.

Fortune gives many too much, but no one enough.—Laberius.

THE PASTOR SPRINTED.

He Made a Good Run In Record Time With Plenty of Reason.

One of the traditional stories of the town of Fairfield, Conn., recounts a wild dash from the pulpit made by a worthy and beloved pastor of the Episcopal flock, Dr. Labaree.

It was on a Sunday more than a hundred years ago. The service had been read, the prayers said, the hymns sung, and the parson began his sermon. As he proceeded his gestures became very energetic. He brought his right hand down with great force. Then he turned pale, cleared the pulpit stairs at a bound, dashed out of the church door and ran toward the pond a short distance away.

The congregation followed in bewildered pursuit and saw their venerable pastor with flying robe rush into the water until it came to his neck. Then, turning round, he faced his astonished audience and said:

"Dearly beloved brethren, I am not crazy, as no doubt many of you think, but yesterday at the drug store I bought a bottle of nitric acid and carelessly left it in my pocket today.

"My last gesture broke the bottle. I knew the suffering the acid would cause when it penetrated my clothing and rushed for the water to save myself pain."

He drew several pieces of glass from his pocket in witness of the tale. Then he dismissed the company and hurried home.

A Limited Habit.

"I see that some of our scientists claim that death is largely a matter of habit, depending upon thought and all that," he said.

"Nonsense!" she replied. "Did you ever know any one who was in the habit of dying?"—Exchange.

Love's Illusions.

STARTLED THE VISITOR

A Joke an English Lord Played on an American Woman.

Lord Rossmore once startled an American lady, a Mrs. Ronalds, whom he encountered at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Candy, in the aristocratic Park lane of London. He relates the incident in "Things I Can Tell:"

She knew my sister, who called her Fanny, and as I thought Fanny was a very pretty name I said to her:

"I think I'll call you Fanny too."

Mrs. Ronalds hadn't the least idea who I was, and she said, half laughingly:

"Well, I declare; I never saw such a person!"

Just then I caught sight of the reflection in a mirror of my other sister, Mrs. Stirling, who was about to enter the room.

"I'll do more than call you Fanny," I continued; "I'll kiss the next woman who comes in."

Mrs. Ronalds looked perfectly horrified.

"You won't!" she gasped.

"Won't I? Just see!"

With this I wheeled round, and, catching Nora in my arms, I gave her a kiss.

I believe Mrs. Ronalds must have thought that her hostess was entertaining a madman unawares, but when the relationship of Mrs. Stirling and myself was explained she enjoyed the joke as much as any one.

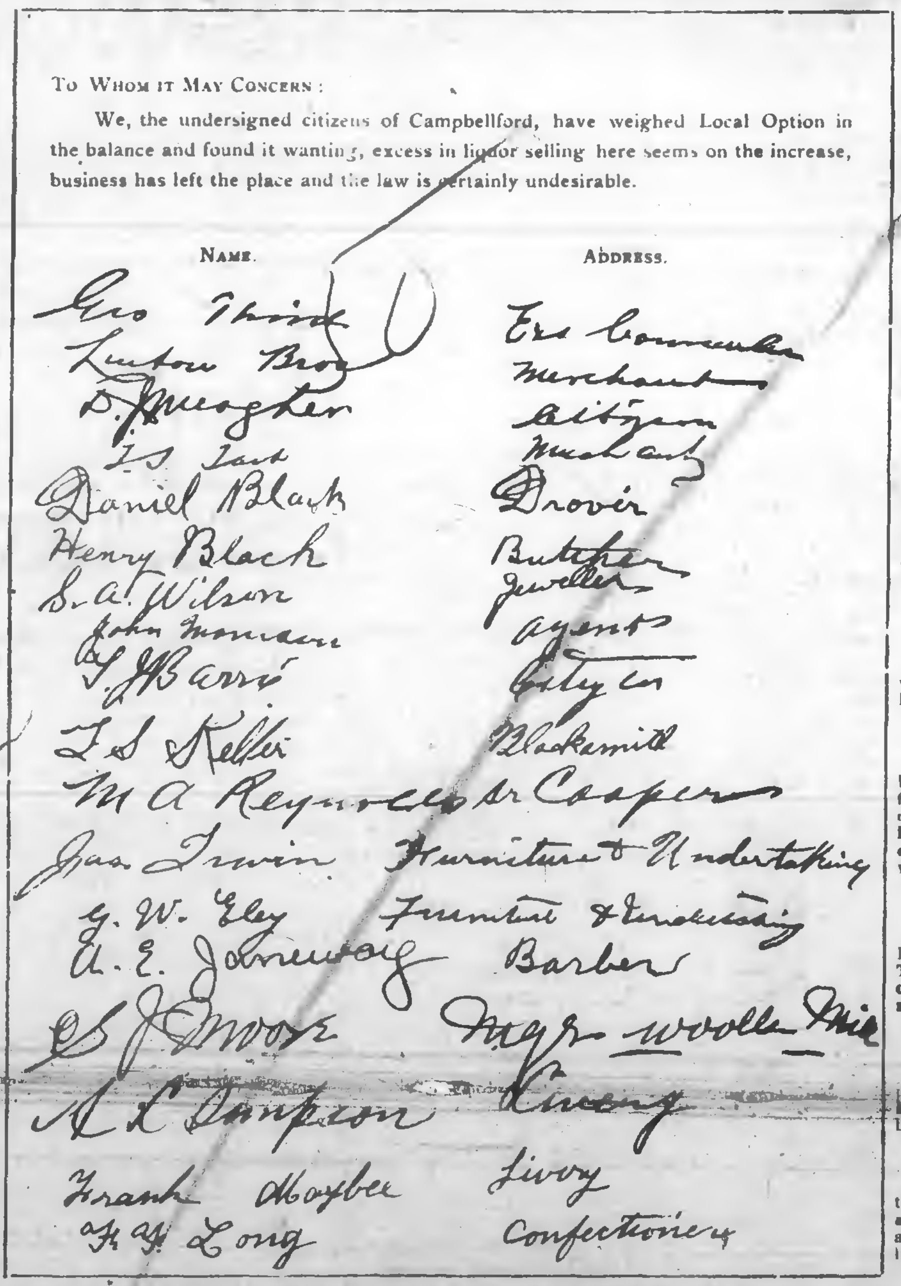
Campbellford Citizens Protest Against Local Option

THE following reproduction of a protest against Local Option signed by leading citizens of Campbellford is only one evidence of the anti-Local Option movement which has been gaining tremendously during the last year. The prohibition movement in the United States is fast dying out and Local Option in Ontario has been found so unsatisfactory that it is predicted by prohibition supporters themselves that it will soon go the way of the old Scott Act.

Read the Campbellford protest; also the letters from prominent citizens in other places



To Whom it May Concern:

We, the undersigned citizens of Campbellford, have weighed Local Option in the balance and found it wanting, excess in liquor selling here seems on the increase, business has left the place and the law is certainly undesirable.

Southampton is truly a non-progressive place. Some of our Local Option friends are trying hard to sell their buisnesses in order to leave town, but so far there are no offers to purchase. Before Local Option passed here there was not a vacant store or house in town, now there are a number of them and no one wants them. Before Local Option, our assessment rate was 20 mills on the dollar, now it is 28 and prospects of 30 and no improvement to account for the increased rate. Farmers do not come here as they used to because the market for their products is not as good as it was.

JAMES DUNDAS,
Southampton, Ont.

Bad Effect on Trade

I am a temperance man. Since Local Option has come into force there has been more secret drinking by boys under 21 years of age. This law has had a very bad effect on trade; the transient business that used to come here under license has left us almost entirely. I consider this law a failure from every point of view.

JOS. T. BEATTY, Ex-Reeve,
Omemee.

False Swearing and Drunkenness Here

We were much better off when we had properly licensed hotels. This law has been openly violated, false swearing and all kinds of cussedness has been resorted to in order to circumvent the law. Drunkenness is in evidence; in fact Local Option has caused about the same state of affairs as the old Scott Act, and I think it likely to die out just as the Scott Act did.

J. H. BURGESS, Druggist,
Lakefield.

Strong Spirits Replace Light Beers

Local Option has not improved the moral tone of our village. Liquor is used as freely as ever, ale and lager have almost disappeared.

JOHN J. ROGERS,
Norwood.

Town Going Back

Ever since Local Option law was passed our town has been going back. It has driven trade away, very few farmers come here now; there used to be a large number of them come here to do business. The traffic of liquor is worse than ever before, it is worse than ever for the boys. Property has decreased in value very materially.

JOHN CAREY,
Southampton, Ont.

Accommodation Is Bad

Local Option is not the solution of the liquor question. In fact, it has injured our village instead of improving it. There is lots of liquor to be had here. Farmers do not come to this town as much as the accommodation is more expensive and not as good.

A. C. BARRETT,
Havelock, Ont.

Temperance Wins Against It

I have been a temperance man all my life but I much prefer to live under a proper license law. Conditions here under Local Option have been very bad from a business and moral standpoint.

HENRY SNIDER,
Brighton.

License Law is Better

Stick to the license law; you will be much better off than if your town goes under the Local option law. It is all promise and no fulfilment. It is bad for business and bad for youths, as those who use liquor resort to the bottle habit.

ROBT. W. RIDDLE,
Wyoming.

SENIOR PETES AND McGILL COME TOGETHER TO-NIGHT

Hamilton Alerts Are Ousted From the O.H.A. for This Season.

McGill University seven will stack up against the local seniors at Brock street rink to-night, when referee Hervey Sproule will call the game at 8.30 o'clock.

There has been no skating on the ice since Friday night, and the teams will have the best ice available.

The local line-up will be— Goal Dwyer; point, Bradshaw; cover, Spratt; rover, Mason; centre, Armstrong and Park; right, Coughlin; left, Kelly.

The axe has fallen on the Hamilton Alerts, who have been barred from the O.H.A. There were too many players from too many places to suit the O.H.A. Accordingly Fred. Denison will take a rest this season.

LAJOIE SLOWING UP; CUT MADE IN HIS SALARY

For the first time since he became a major league baseball player, nearly seventeen years ago, Napoleon Lajoie will be asked to accept a cut in his salary for 1913. Lajoie, it is said, has been drawing at least $10,000 a year from the Cleveland American League club, but his new contract will call for not more than 7,500, a year maybe less, so the story goes.

It seems that while Lajoie kept up his wonderful batting last season he slowed up in his fielding, so that Manager Birmingham thinks that his future second base should be covered by a faster man, possibly Olson, the big Swede. Lajoie may be moved over to first base if Johnston, the youngster secured from the Southern League last summer, fails to come up to expectations. Then again Lajoie may be sent to the outfield if Johnston keeps on hitting the way he did when he finished last season in a Cleveland uniform.

Lajoie, like all baseball players, cannot last forever. He is 39 years old.

The big Frenchman was a cab driver in Fall River twenty years ago.

All Players are Under 18 Years of Age

Peter Gettas of the Boston Cafe is the manager of the Exploits, a hockey team with players under 18 years of age who expect to win a few games this season. The team is goal, Walker; point, Clancy; cover, Bain; centre, Rogers; right wing, Wolff (captain); left, Butcher.

Fish Eyes.

Fish have no eyelids. They do not require them, as their eyes are constantly washed by the water in which they swim.

Hindu Children.

Hindu children are remarkable for their precocity. Many of them are skillful workmen at an age when children of America are learning the alphabet. A boy of seven may be a skillful woodcarver, while some of the handsomest rugs are woven by children not yet in their teens.

AN IRON WILLED MONARCH.

One Man Rule as Exemplified In Frederick the Great.

Frederick was an intensively active, highly capable, strong willed and self reliant commander. He concentrated all power in his own hands, reducing his ministers to clerical work and his generals to the duties of personal lieutenants. Below him the Prussian administration was a thing of stiff and mechanical obedience, lacking in initiative and individuality.

Several of Frederick's military losses were due to the fact that he gave his generals such minute orders and was so severe in case of disregard of instructions that they did not dare to use their own judgment when unforseen conditions presented themselves. He personally foresaw and provided for everything, and he inspected frequently and thoroughly. His discipline was severe, his organization good, his calculation accurate and limited to what was possible. His movements, which were skillfully disguised, were rapid.

So superior was Frederick to his opponents in strategy that they were obliged for safety to keep their troops in so concentrated a form that there was not sufficient space for effective maneuvers. He was more capable in marching and maneuver than in battle, more capable in battle than in siege.

His great defect as an administrator lay in the fact that he dwarfed the growth of those below him and so educated no talented corps to bear the political and military burdens of the state when he should be obliged to lay them down. He apparently could do things only through himself. Having a supreme contempt for the capacities of most mortals, he had no mind to make experiments which might have changed his opinions. Although he knew for many years that his successor was to be a man without ability, he handed down to him a system which required a Frederick. We may say that he brilliantly administered a system which was badly organized.—Edward D. Jones in Engineering Magazine.

Heat From Cold Water.

Heat from cold water seems fabulous, but it is an established fact. The water is decomposed by electricity into its constituent gases, hydrogen and oxygen. When these gases are reunited the act of combination causes the evolution of intense heat. The well known limelight is an example of this.

Moslems Increasing.

The proportion of Mohammedans to the aggregate population of India has steadily risen since 1881. It is estimated that the number of Moslems under British authority in the Indian empire is now 68,000,000, as compared with 50,000,000 thirty years ago.

Dedication.

"If I were a great author I would dedicate a book to you."

"You'll do that anyhow," replied the bride.

"What sort of a book?"

"A check book."

GREETINGS

If you have received any Christmas gifts that were purchased here, which do not please you in any way, please call and exchange them. If you have forgotten some friend or received some unexpected CHRISTMAS GIFT and you now wish to make a NEW YEAR'S present—a present that will be appreciated above everything else, give a practical gift, something that the recipent would buy for himself. Let us suggest—

Gloves, Umbrellas, Pyjamas, Hosiery, Handkerchiefs, Neckwear, Mufflers, Bath and Lounging Robes, Smoking Jackets, Hats, Caps, Sweater Coats, Cardigan Jackets, Underwear, Suspenders, Arm Bands, Garters, Cuff Links, New Winter Suits and Overcoats, etc., etc.

So make your gift to "him" something he will really like better than all the other presents he receives—let it be something he can wear, and don't lose sight of the fact that H. LeBRUN & CO. is the best place in Peterborough to buy New Year's Gifts.

We desire at this time to thank the public for a generous patronage throughout the year 1912, and we hope to merit more business during 1913

EVOLUTION OF THE PIANO.

From the First Crude Instrument to its Present Perfection.

In the beginning the piano was a harp shaped piece of wood, having two or three strings. From time to time more strings were added until the cithara was invented. This was an instrument in the shape of a capital P, with ten strings stretched across the open space. Many centuries afterward musicians conceived the idea of stretching strings across an open box. About the year 1200 this was done, the dulcimer made its appearance, and the strings were struck with hammers.

For another hundred years or so these hammers were held in the hands, and then some genius invented a keyboard, which, being struck by the fingers, caused the hammers to strike the strings. This was called a clavicytherium, or keyed cithara, and from time to time it was modified and improved.

During Queen Elizabeth's time it was called a virginal and then a spinet, because the hammers were covered with the spines of quills, which struck and caught the strings and produced the sound.

During the period between 1700 and 1800 it was much improved and enlarged and was given the name of harpsichord. It was in 1710 that Bartholomeo Christofoli, an Italian, invented a keyboard similar to the one we have now, which causes the hammers to strike the wires from above, and thus developed the piano.

During the last century the inventive genius of musicians the world over has revised and improved it until it has reached the present day perfection.—Exchange.

MIGRATION OF WEEDS.

How a Seed Ripened In Asia May Take Root In America.

Weeds migrate as well as men. According to the best authorities, there are already 600 varieties at least of weeds in New England that were not to be found there when the country was first settled. Within less than twenty-five years after the landing of the pilgrims one observer counted more than forty new weeds the Europeans had brought them.

Nature employs all sorts of methods for spreading life about the planet and does not seem to care whether the life is that of a weed or of a plant fit for human use. Indeed, it uses such unromantic material as old rubber overshoes for seed carriers, as many new weeds have appeared in a valley in Connecticut since a factory was established there that found use for such castoff things.

The overshoes come from all parts of the world. The cloth lining is torn out before the rubber is used, and from the seeds that have found lodgment in such an apparently unpromising place plants have grown on the dump heap, and their seeds have found fertile soil, multiplied and flourished. What a romance there is in the life of such a seed—ripened, perhaps, in Asia, trodden in the mud and carried on board ship on the feet of a passenger, thence taken to Europe, where it was picked up by the boot of an American, was finally dislodged in the overshoe and found its germinating place in Connecticut.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Horn of the Unicorn.

The horn of the unicorn was reputed instantly to reveal poison in a dish by sweating blood, and great was the rivalry as to the possession of the finest specimen while this belief still flourished. Charles the Bold proudly paraded six, two of them eight feet long, two six feet, two five feet. According to Benvenuto Cellini, "the finest ever seen, which had cost 17,000 ducats of the Camera," was the one for which at the pope's command he made a design, "the finest thing imaginable, modeled half on a horse and half on a stag, with a very fine mane and other adornments." Coryat speaks of the one at St. Denis as about three yards long, and Windsor had two of four ells. The real "unicorn" in many cases seems to have been the narwhal.—London Chronicle.

Igorote Craftswomen.

Though their tools are few and crude, the Igorotes are clever workmen. Some of their axes, spears and shields show a wild art all their own. The pipemakers, too, turn out pipes of peculiar and graceful design. One day I watched the women working in clay and turning out kitchen utensils. Two girls carried clay from a distant pit, while older women in the village worked it up. Shapely urns and bowls are molded from the plastic clay and set in the hot sun to dry. I did not see them bake any pottery. They called these vessels fanganas.—Christian Herald.

A Girl's Pity.

"It was King Midas, wasn't it, who turned everything he touched to gold?"

"I believe so."

"Poor old fellow."

"Why do you think he was a poor old fellow?"

"He never could eat a pickle with his fingers."—Chicago Record-Herald.

'Twas Sneezy Thing to Do.

"At whom are you looking?" demanded the young lady of the young man who obstructed her path.

"Atchoo!" replied the hay fever victim and hurried away.—Houston Post.

As It Should Be.

Shopper—I want to buy a necktie suitable for my husband. Salesman—Sorry, madam, but we are not permitted to sell neckties to women who are unaccompanied by men.—Puck.

FROZEN WITH HEAT.

A Remarkable Process Known as the Caloric Paradox.

Freezing is usually associated with cold, but water can be frozen on a red hot plate. This pretty experiment has rightly been called the caloric paradox.

If a drop of water is placed on a red hot or white hot metal plate it does not suddenly flash into steam under the influence of the great heat. It does not even boil. It simply evaporates quietly and slowly as it rolls about the plate. Now, suppose that the drop on the plate is a volatile liquid like sulphurous acid. It will evaporate, and this evaporation will produce cold. Let a drop of water fall in the sulphurous acid drop and it will be frozen in spite of the heat.

M. Boutigny thus froze water on a white hot platinum capsule. Faraday carried this remarkable experiment even further. Pouring some ether and solidified carbonic acid gas on a red-hot platinum capsule, he formed a spheroidal mass which evaporated very slowly. He then brought some mercury into contact with it, and this was instantly frozen. Now, mercury requires a temperature of 40 degrees below zero to solidify it, and here it was frozen on redhot platinum.

No "Deadhead" Trip.

One of the most famous of American shipping lines in the palmy days of our marine was the Cope line, which ran between Philadelphia and Liverpool, says the author of "Memoirs of Charles H. Cramp." By this line John Randolph of Roanoke determined to go to Russia when he had been appointed minister to that country by President Jackson. Entering the office of the company in Philadelphia, he said to a clerk in his usual grandiloquent manner:

"Sir, I wish to see Thomas P. Cope."

He was shown to Mr. Cope's office.

"I am John Randolph of Roanoke," he said. "I wish to take passage to Liverpool in one of your ships."

If he expected to be tendered a pass he was grievously disappointed.

"I am Thomas Cope," replied the head of the line. "If thee goes aboard the ship and selects thy stateroom and will pay $150 thee may go."

An Ants' Sewing Circle.

A party of German naturalists recently returned from Ceylon have reported the existence of a species of ant that has been observed in the act of sewing two leaves together for the purpose of forming a nest. This report confirms the observations of the English naturalist Ridley, made in 1890. They saw a row of the insects pulling the edges of leaves together, then others trimming and fitting the edges, and finally the completion of the work by still other ants which fastened the edges with a silky thread yielded by larvae of the same species the workers carried in their mandibles. It is said that the sewing ants pass the thread-giving larvae like shuttles through holes in the edges of the leaves.—Boston Post.

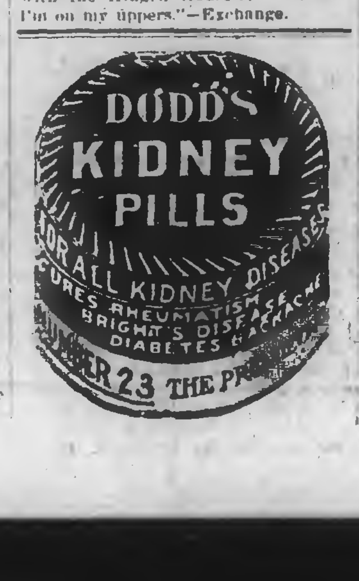
For the Boy's Sake.

A Roseville man stopped smoking for the sake of his young son. "If I smoke I shall set him a bad example," he argued and gave up tobacco with many sighs of regret. For three years he has done without the weed. The other night he found a box of little cigars in the boy's coat pocket, a well smoked brier pipe in the youngster's tool box down cellar and a pack of cigarettes in the woodshed.—Newark News.

His Experience.

"In order to succeed in any line of business," said the great merchant, who was given to the habit of moralizing, "one must begin at the bottom."

"I tried that," replied the young man with the fringed trousers, "and now I'm on my uppers."—Exchange.



Thermometer and Gulf Stream.

Investigators have observed that the thermometer is not necessarily a sure indication of the gulf stream; that the strongest current does not necessarily coincide with the highest temperature. The warmth of the water only indicates its tropical origin, and it may or may not be accompanied by a current. Thus the warmest water off Cape Hatteras is the result of a very gentle flow coming from the trade wind region outside the West Indies. The gulf stream itself is between this warmer water and the 100-fathom curve.—Shipping Illustrated.

Against Speculation.

The head of a big trust said at a dinner in Boston:

"I have always been against speculation. To try to get rich by stock fluctuations instead of by honest work for the common good is to be an undesirable citizen.

"Besides, these fluctuating investments are very risky and uncertain. It's a wise stock, you see, that knows its own par."—Exchange.

Wise Provision.

"Biggins says he has the smartest youngster in the world."

"Of course," answered Mr. Growcher. "Every parent feels that way, and it's a wise provision of nature. In every human being's life there ought to be a time when somebody thinks he is smart."—Washington Star.

Nomination proceedings at the council chamber this morning, were not productive of an opponent for Mayor Bradburn, and he will be Peterborough's Chief Magistrate for 1913.

Mayor Bradburn was nominated by T. F. Matthews and Jas. Batten.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., will again be a member of the Water Commissioners. Mr. Moore takes his seat by acclamation.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

There were four nominations in the North Ward, viz,—Ald. Graham, Ex-Ald. A. A. McIntyre, Wm. Langford, Jr., and R. J. Kidd.

In the East Ward Ald. Graham and Malcolm McIntyre were nominated.

Those who decide to be candidates must qualify by nine o'clock, Tuesday night.

ACCLAMATION FOR MR. GARBUTT

Nominations for Reeve, Deputy Reeve and Councillors for Smith township were held this afternoon in the County Council Chambers. J. H. A Record Colliery.

The Mansfield, Eng., colliery, which holds the world's record for the greatest amount of coal raised in one day, one week, one month and one year, has an output of 1,183,875 tons to its credit for 1911, an increase of 40,756 tons on the previous year.

Too Many City Fathers.

London is plagued with a multiplicity of councillors. Despite the abolition of the old vestries and the creation of borough councils, London has 144 governing bodies, some of which, of course, are quite small and lukewarm to the mass of the people.

HOW LOCAL OPTION WORKS IN THE TOWN OF ORILLIA

Police Magistrate Clark Says It Has Been a Blessing to the Town—Every Employer of Labor and Nearly Every Leading Merchant Favors It—What Commercial Travellers Say

Ald. G. A. Gillespie was chairman of the local option meeting in the Opera House yesterday afternoon. Others on the stage were Ald. Morgan, Duffus, Johnston and Anderson; Messrs. A. W. Cressman, B. F. Ackerman, Wm. Langford, jr., G. W. Powell, H. C. Stabler, Wm. Might and a number of commercial travellers. The Harmony Male Quartette sang. Mr. J. M. Greene lead the singing.

Another big meeting was held after church service, when speakers from West Toronto gave strong testimony in favor of local option. Miss Josie Callender and Mr. C. Thornton gave a duet, and Mr. Asa Huycke a solo.

What Mr. H. G. Walker spoke of hotel accommodation and general conditions in dry towns, was corroborated by three other travellers Messrs. Knapman, McGill and Stewart. He said commercial travellers were not opposed to local option. On an average the hotels were cleaner and more respectable. True, the charges were higher, but he explained that this was the case in licensed as well as unlicensed hotels and was because other prices had gone up. Travellers expected to have to pay more and more willing to do so. There were forty places in his territory, and on the average the accommodation was better in the dry hotels than in the wet. Local option meant better business. His firm had less trouble in collecting accounts.

DRYTOWN ORILLIA.

Police Magistrate George H. Clark, of Orillia, told of condition in his town. He attacked the Lindsay Warder. for publishing anonymous statements that there was more drinking and more blind pigs in Orillia, without the bar. He said citizens of Orillia prepared a statement of contradiction but the Warder refused to publish it. That paper was willing to draw a herring across the path instead of letting in the light of day.

In answer to the pamphlet headed "Where Local Option has Failed," he said; "I come from a town where local option has not failed, but where it has proved a blessing to the citizens of that town."

Mr. Clark further pointed out that the general cry of business going to the dogs had been given up by the liquor people. As to hotel accommodation, two of the best meals he ever had were at the Queen's Hotel in Barrie, which house charged $2 per day. He found barless hotels across the line to be a paying proposition. Why not this country? And further he believed the farmer's wife would rather go ten miles to a dry town and come home with a sober husband than go five miles to a wet town.

As to personal testimony, he gave Mr. N. B. Tudhope, who, while first opposed to local option said, after the by-law came in force, it was a good thing and he believed that there was no cleaner town in Ontario to-day. Also from the manufacturer's point of view, Orillia was better off. Now, after every pay day, the men were found in their places.

Dr. W. C. Gilchrist said that since local option came in force he had not had a single case of alcholism. Thos. H. Grant, druggist, said conditions were improved, the moral tone was better and no farm trade had been lost.

Mr. Clark also displayed a document which he said was signed by every employer of labor in Orillia and nearly every leading business man, all of whom favored local option.

ONLY ONE VIOLENT DEATH.

In the eight months prior to local option, he sentenced five men to Kingston and six men to Central Prison. In 30 months, with local option, he only sentenced one man to Central Prison. For six months with the bar, the County Crown Attorney, presided at 16 cases. In the first six months, with local option, he was called but once and it was very rarely that he had been called since.

To the cry of the liquor people, he affirmed that the only way to regulate the sale of liquor was to put it out of business.

Mr. Clark gave several cases of violent deaths at the time when the bars were open, and made his point with the statement that since the bars were closed there had only been one case of violent death and that was a woman, a victim of the liquor habit.

From a construction gang mainly composed of foreigners, he had only one case—one of wages—in 2 1-2 years.

WHAT MR. DANIELS SAYS.

After making some announcements Mr. H. B. Cowan gave a reply to the statements in a liquor pamphlet distributed in the city, and attributed to Rev. Mr. Daniels, of Owen Sound. The truth of the matter is that Rev. Mr. Daniels is in favor of local option, and says it is a good thing for Owen Sound.

DIVORCE INCREASING IN ONTARIO

Almost As Many Decrees In Last Six Years As In The Previous Thirty-seven Years.

That the number of divorces in Ontario is rapidly increasing is revealed by the statistics in the "Canada Year Book" for 1912, recently issued by the Dominion Government.

This is a strange development considering that the prohibitionists have long declaimed against drink as the cause of divorce and other family evils.

Although, however, nearly 400 Ontario municipalities have at various times in the last few years gone "dry," there were almost as many divorces granted in Ontario in the last six years as in the previous thirty-seven years.

From 1868 to the end of 1905—a period of 37 years—there were 63 divorces obtained by Ontario residents. From 1906 to 1911—six years in all—56 divorces were granted to Ontario people.

A considerable number of Canadians, estimated at more than 400 a year, have also gone to the United States, where the facilities are easier, to procure divorces.

If the claims of prohibitionists were to be accepted, it would logically follow that divorces would diminish as the number of local option communities increased.

But the contrary has been the case, proving that the prohibition theory is shattered when confronted with the facts. True enough, Ontario's population has increased, but the growing ratio of divorce is out of all proportion to the growth of population.

That drink does figure largely in divorces is a fact, however, but it is a factor resulting from the ill-advised course of the prohibitionists themselves.

Because a community votes local option or because it is placed under non-license, does not by any means signify that it goes "dry." The immediate and injurious effect is to stop the sale of such a beverage as beer, which, if taken in moderation, is practically non-intoxicant. Packed as it is it is a cumbrous commodity to ship or, otherwise transport, and thus can be easily detected. Moreover, it is not palatable when warm. Whiskey, however, a 50-per-cent.-alcoholic drink, can be transported and sold with ease either in "blind pigs" or by "pocket peddlers."

It is no exaggeration to say that great shipments of whiskey have continuously gone into local option communities, either shipped to private homes or to "blind pigs" or "pocket peddlers." In less than three years the Provincial Police have seized 23,000 bottles of whiskey largely in the non-license districts of Cobalt and Porcupine, and many more shipments have escaped detection. The public statement has been repeatedly made and not denied that an average of 1,500 bottles are shipped into Owen Sound every week, 480 bottles of whiskey weekly into Orillia, 180 bottles of whiskey into Orangeville every week, and similar proportions into other local option places. The license officers and police are active, but they cannot suppress this traffic.

It must be obvious to the simplest intelligence that such a traffic must have a demoralizing effect in many households, and undoubtedly has its relation to the increasing number of divorces. 57

EX. ALD. KERNEGHAN IS OUT OF NOMINATIONS

At a special meeting of the City Council on Saturday evening, Mr. D. H. Kerneghan, who is an aldermanic candidate in the North Ward, asked to be relieved of a $1,000 bond which he is carrying as surety for A. B. Downer, the garbage collector. The applicant and Mr. Wm. Kemp are joint bondsmen for Mr. Downer to the extent of $2,000, each having gone surety for $1,000.

Before Mr. Kerneghan could be properly qualified for alderman, it was necessary that he should be clear of all financial encumbrances of such a character. The by-law does not permit any candidate for alderman acting as bondsman.

Mr Kerneghan intimated to the Council that Mr. Kemp was agreeable to a transfer of his bond, but the city fathers refused to pass a by-law agreeing to the change until the consent of Mr. Kemp had been given in writing. On inquiry, however, the fact was brought out that Mr. Kemp himself was not eligible to act as bondsman, as he did not own property in his own name. Mr. Kerneghan had expected Mr. W. H. G. Higgins to assume the $1,000 obligation of bondsman in his place, but early Saturday afternoon Mr. Higgins declined, for reasons best known to himself. Mr. Kerneghan then suggested Mr. White, the Water street flour and feed dealer, but when the latter was brought in and questioned, it was also discovered that neither did he own property in his own name. For a while things looked rather black, as far as Mr. Kerneghan's eligibility to contest an aldermanic seat was concerned.

After some discussion on the matter the Council came to the decision that it would be unwise to relieve Mr. Kerneghan of his bond until he could bring forward a suitable and properly qualified bondsman. The Council adjourned until to-day to allow the candidate an opportunity to secure the name of a bondsman.

Ex-Ald. Kerneghan, at his own request, was not nominated as a candidate in the North Ward this morning. Apart from his position as bondsman, he finds himself too busy with his business, to give the proper time to office of Alderman.

Mr. Riddiford thanked his boys and said he would always try to be a man among men. CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Dec. 30.—Heavy storms, the severest in a generation continue to rage at southern Norwegian ports, and a great number of vessels have been compelled to remain in the harbors. Seventeen ships are riding at anchor at Horten, on the Christiania Fjord.

They have been unable to sail for a month. It is hoped that the heavy snowfall yesterday will put an end to the series of storms.

EARLY 20,000 BOTTLES OF WHISKEY SEIZED

n Prohibition Regions in New Ontario in Two Years and the Shipments Are Still Going In.

A remarkable object lesson of the ractical results of prohibition may e gathered from the reports of the ntario Provincial Police. This rce, among other powers, has jurdiction over the entire stretch of he immense territory comprised in ew Ontario. Part of its duties is see that the prohibition laws are roperly enforced, and to this end it eizes whatever liquor it finds wheer en route to destination or in lind pigs."

For the last three years its seizres of whiskey have been at the te of 8,000 to 9,000 bottles a year. aring the year ending October 31, 911, the Provincial Police seized 898 bottles of whiskey, and during e year ending October 31, 1912, its izures were more than 9,000 botes of whiskey. Since the Provinal Police assumed control of New ntario, on January 1, 1910, the izures have been considerably more an 20,000 bottles of whiskey.

But these seizures represent only portion of the total shipments. The rovincial Police are an efficient rce, ably administered and exemely vigilant in the discharge of eir duties. But great as is their gilance it is admitted that a large umber of bottles of whiskey are uggled in successfully. The meths of smuggling are many and inious. Whiskey is concealed in rchandise, vegetables, hay, tubs butter, barrels of lard, in lumber in multifarious other ways. It also hidden on the person of avelers o in suit cases. At a very nservative estimate it may safely assumed that a very large num of bottles of whisky have been ccessfully smuggled in and their ntents consumed. Perhaps the umber has been equal to the nount seized.

Moreover, whisky in the bottled rm is only one way in which that toxicant is shipped. Last year the rovincial Police seized 5 barrels of hiskey, 154 gallons of whiskey, d a large quantity of gin and her liquers, and 287½ gallons of igh wine." Made from the refuse sugar factories "high wine" is alst all alcohol. One gallon, cost $1.75, can be diluted so as to ake approximately five gallons of [illegible]." This "dope" is flavored [illegible] and frequent [illegible] tobacco juice or [illegible]. It is intoxicating drink of the worst nd. In the mining districts of w Ontario it sells at $5 a bottle. In the whole of the great New tario region there are only a few licenses—one at Cochrane and a few at Haileybury, and other places. Under the Ontario Mining Act no licenses are allowed in mining districts; they are strictly prohibition territory. These mining districts are the very districts where the greater part of the enormous seizures of whiskey have been made. In Cobalt there are more than 100 "blind pigs;" dozens of them in the Porcupine district, and more than 50 in Cochrane. Many of these are in private homes.

Prohibition and the whiskey trade thrive together. The manifest evils are so notorious in New Ontario, the "blind pigs" so numerous in the prohibition districts, and the number of arrests of drunks and disorderlies is so great, that public opinion everywhere there demands licenses. The municipal officials of Cobalt, Porcupine and other towns have publicly declared that the only way to get rid of the large surreptitious traffic in whiskey and the consequent intoxication and demoralization is to grant beer licenses. By allowing such licenses, they hold, the selling of beer (which contains only three to four per cent. alcohol) will discourage the sale and consumption of a heavy intoxicant such as whiskey which contains 50 per cent. or more of alcohol. Magistrate Dempsey of Cochrane who has convicted dozens of "blind piggers" and hundreds of drunks, openly declares for beer licenses.

Something must certainly be done to discourage, and, if possible, stop the whiskey traffic. Prohibition breeds and encourages that traffic; hence prohibition must be discarded. License reduction will not do it; there is only one license in Cochrane, and if license reduction did away with intoxication, then drunkenness ought to be nil in Cochrane. But in a single year there have been 25 cases of "blind piggers" and 100 cases of drunks and disorderlies before Magistrate Dempsey in Cochrane. These cases did not include the "home" drunks.

The only solution seems to be the granting of beer licenses which will allow the sale of this beverage. Such a measure has powerfully promoted temperance in Europe, and growing public opinion believes it will do so here. Milton Carr, M.P.P., the most prominent Liberal in Cobalt, favors this plan, and he is only one of an increasing number of officials, and citizens who have arrived at the conviction that it is the only feasible remedy. 1d 59.
